THE INDIAN LAW REPORTS.

PUBLISHED UNDER AUTHORITY.

The Indian Law Reports, published under the authority of the Governor General in Council, appear in monthly parts, published as soon as possible after the first of each month, at Calcutta, Madras, Bombay, and Allahabad, and comprise four series,—one for the Calcutta High Court, a second for the Madras High Court, a third for the Bombay High Court, and a fourth for the Allahabad High Court. The cases heard by the Privy Council on appeal from each High Court are reported in the series for that High Court. Cases heard by the Privy Council on appeal from Provinces in India not subject to any High Court are reported in the Calcutta Series.

The Calcutta Series is distributed by the Bengal Secretariat; the copies for subscribers registered by Messrs. Thacker, Spink & Co. are distributed by that firm; and the Madras, Bombay and Allahabad Series are distributed direct from Madras, Bombay, and Allahabad respectively.

DEPARTMENT OF FINANCE AND COMMERCE.

NOTIFICATIONS.

ACCOUNTS AND FINANCE.

PUBLIC DEBT.

Simla, the 11th June, 1886.

No. 1347.—As it does not appear to be generally known that Government Promissory Notes can be readily converted into Stock Certificates, and reconverted into Promissory Notes, at the option of the holders, and that Stock Certificate-holders enjoy certain special advantages, the attention of holders of Government Securities is drawn to the following particulars:—

1. Government Promissory Notes can be converted into Stock Certificates and reconverted into Promissory Notes at any time, at the option of the holder.

2. The holders of Stock Certificates are not required to present them in person or by agent when the interest becomes due. On application made, interest will be paid to Stock Certificate-holders by warrants on any Government Treasury, which warrants will be sent by post, on the day the interest falls due, to the Stock Certificate-holders direct, or through the Treasury Officer, as they may desire.

3. Stock Certificates are not negotiable by endorsement, and are consequently of no value in the hands of a wrongful holder, and the risks arising from the possession of, or repeated transmission of, negotiable Securities are thereby avoided.

4. In the event of the loss of a Stock Certificate by theft, fire, &c., a fresh Certificate will issue on satisfactory evidence of loss.

NOTE.—Further particulars can be obtained on reference to the Public Debt Offices, Calcutta, Madras, and Bombay.

ACT NO. XIV OF 1886

An Act to amend the North-Western Provinces Rent Act, 1881.

WHEREAS it is expedient to amend the North-Western Provinces Rent Act, 1881, it is hereby enacted as follows:—

1. This Act may be called the North-Western Provinces Rent Act, 1886; and it shall come into force at once.

2. For the last paragraph of section 95 of the North-Western Provinces Rent Act, 1881, the following shall be substituted, namely:—

“For the purposes of the Court-fees Act, 1870, the amount of fee payable in the cases next hereinafter mentioned shall be computed as follows:—

- “(i) in applications under clause (c), and in appeals from orders passed on applications under that clause, as in a suit for possession of the land to which the application or appeal relates;
- “(ii) in applications under clauses (d), (e), (f), (g), (h), (i), (j), (k), (l), (m), (n), (o), (p), (q), (r), (s), and (t), according to the rent of the land to which the application or appeal relates payable for the year next before the date of presenting the application, or, if in any case the fee cannot be so computed, then according to the annual letting value of the land as estimated by the applicant or appellant, as the case may be;

- “(iii) in applications under clause (u), and in appeals from orders passed on applications under clauses (d), (e), and (f), according to the amount claimed in the application or in the petition of appeal, as the case may be.”

New section inserted after section 100 of the same Act.

3. After section 100 of the same Act the following sections shall be inserted, namely:—

“100A. The Board may, on cause shown to its satisfaction, transfer any suit, application or appeal, or class of suits, applications or appeals, from any Court of Revenue to any other Court of Revenue competent as regards the nature of the case or class of cases to deal therewith under the provisions of this Act.

“(2) The order passed by a Collector on an appeal transferred to him by the Commissioner under sub-section (1) shall be subject to appeal and revision in the same manner as if it had been passed by the Commissioner, and not otherwise.

“(3) The Local Government may by order recall any appeal transferred to a Collector under

PART V.

Bills introduced into the Council of the Governor General for making Laws and Regulations, or published under Rule 22.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

First publication

The following Bill was referred to a Select Committee of the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 9th June, 1886:—

NO. 7 OF 1886.

A Bill to consolidate and amend the law relating to rent in Oudh.

NOTE.—The 'marginal quotations' refer to portions of sections of the Oudh Rent Act omitted from the Bill.

WHEREAS it is expedient to consolidate and amend the law relating to rent in Oudh and to other matters connected therewith: It is hereby enacted as follows:—

CHAPTER I.

PRELIMINARY

1. This Act may be cited as the Oudh Rent Act, and shall extend only to Oudh.

2. Act XIX of 1868 is hereby repealed, but all notifications published and rules made under the repealed Act shall, so far as they are consistent with the present Act, be deemed to have been published and made hereunder.

3. In this Act, unless there be something repugnant in the subject or context,—

"Oudh" means the territory under the administration of the Chief Commissioner of Oudh at the time of the passing of this Act.

"Court" means any judicial officer presiding in a Court of Revenue for the disposal of matters under this Act:

The Oudh Rent Bill.(Chapter I.—Preliminary.—Section 3.)

"Suit." "suit" means a suit under this Act.

"Assistant Commissioner" includes an Extra

Assistant Commissioner:

"land" applies only to land assessed to the "Land." land-revenue, and includes land whereof the revenue has been assigned by Government; it also includes the ungathered produce of land, whether spontaneous or otherwise, and whether growing in earth or water:

"revenue" means the money payable to the "Revenue." Government on account of land:

"rent" means the money, or the portion of

"Rent." the produce of land, payable on account of the use or occupation of land, or of any right in land, or on account of the use of water for irrigation:

"proprietor" does not include an under-proprietor. Where there are

"Proprietor." two private rights of property, one superior and the other subordinate, in the same land, "proprietor" means the holder of the superior right only:

"under-proprietor" means any person pos-

"Under-proprietor." sessing a heritable and transferable right of property in land for which he is liable to pay rent:

"Under-proprietary right." "under-proprietary right" means an under-proprietor's right in land:

"tenant" means any person, not being an

"Tenant." under-proprietor, who is liable to pay rent. In the following sections of this Act, 7, 10, 13, 14, 15, 18, 19, 23, 28, 39, 40, 41, 42, 43, 44 (A), 83, 101, 111 and 116, but in no others, the expression "tenant" shall be held to include a thikadār or person to whom the collection of rents in a village or portion of a village has been leased by the Government:

"landlord" means any person to whom an

"Landlord." under-proprietor or tenant is liable to pay rent:

"representative" means an heir or any other

"Representative." person taking by operation of law or by will a beneficial interest in the property of a deceased person. It includes the guardian of a minor and the legal curator of a lunatic or idiot: and

"lambardār" means any person who has

"Lambardār." executed an engagement for the payment of the revenue to Government, or for the payment to a landlord of the rent due from under-proprietors holding a sub-settlement:

"prescribed" means prescribed from time to

"Prescribed." time by the Local Government by rules made under this Act.

The Oudh Rent Bill.(Chapter II.—Of certain Rights and Liabilities of Landlords, Under-proprietors and Tenants.—Sections 4-7.)

[Act VIII, 1885, section 178.]

4. Nothing in any contract made between a landlord and a tenant before or after the passing of this Act shall entitle a landlord to eject a tenant or enhance his rent otherwise than in accordance with the provisions of this Act.

Nothing in any contract made between a landlord and a tenant after the passing of this Act shall take away or limit the right of a tenant, as provided by this Act, to make improvements and claim compensation for them:

Provided that nothing in this section shall affect the terms or conditions of a lease granted bonâ fide for the reclamation of waste land.

OF CERTAIN RIGHTS AND LIABILITIES OF LANDLORDS, UNDER-PROPRIETORS AND TENANTS.

Right of Occupancy.

5. Tenants who have lost all proprietary right, whether superior or subordinate, in the lands which they hold or cultivate, shall, so long as they pay the rent payable for the same according to the provisions of this Act, have a right of occupancy under the following rule:—

Every such tenant who, within thirty years next before the thirteenth day of February, 1856, has been, either by himself, or by himself and some other person from whom he has inherited, in possession as proprietor in a village or estate, shall be deemed to possess a heritable but not a transferable right of occupancy in the land which he cultivated or held in such village or estate on the twenty-fourth day of August, 1866: provided that such land has not come into his occupation, or the occupation of the person from whom he has inherited, for the first time since the said thirteenth day of February, 1856: provided also that no such tenant shall have a right of occupancy in any village or estate in which he or any co-sharer with him possesses any under-proprietary right.

Nothing contained in the former part of this section shall affect the terms of any agreement in writing hereafter entered into between a landlord and tenant.

5. (4). Nothing contained in section 5 shall be deemed to restrict the power of the landlord to confer on any persons other than those therein mentioned a right of occupancy in the lands which they hold or cultivate.

6. If a tenant having a right of occupancy be ejected, in accordance with the provisions of section 37, from the land in which he possesses such right, he shall thereupon lose his right of occupancy in such land.

Tenants' Right to Patta.

7. Every tenant is entitled to receive from his landlord a patta or memorandum of the terms of the holding, signed by him

The Oudh Rent Bill.

(Chapter II.—Of certain Rights and Liabilities of Landholders, Under-proprietors and Tenants.—Sections 8-13.)

or his authorized agent, and containing the following particulars:—

the quantity of land and, where the fields comprised in the patta have been numbered in a Government survey, the number of each field

the term for which the tenancy is to run

the amount of rent payable

the instalments in which and the times at which the same is to be paid

[any special conditions of the lease:]

and, if the rent is payable in kind, the proportion of produce to be delivered, and the time, manner and place of delivery.

8. Tenants having a right of occupancy are entitled to receive pattas having right of occupancy at rates of rent determined in accordance with the provisions contained in sections 32, 33 and 34.

9. Tenants not having a right of occupancy are entitled to pattas for the terms and at the rates prescribed in Chapter IV (B) of this Act.

Landlords' Right to Counterparts.

10. Every landlord who grants a patta to a tenant is entitled to receive from the tenant a counterpart executed by him.

11. Vide section 43 (A).

Arrears of Revenue or Rent.

12. Any instalment of revenue or rent which is not paid on or before the day when the same becomes due, whether under a written agreement or according to law or local usage, shall be deemed to be, for the purposes of this Act, an arrear of revenue or rent, as the case may be:

Provided that, unless the proprietor and under-proprietor shall have otherwise agreed in writing, the rent payable to the former by the latter shall be held to become due one month before the date fixed for the payment of the revenue on account of the village in which the land in respect of which such rent is payable is situate, and to be payable in the same number of instalments as the said revenue; and the amount of each instalment of such rent shall bear the same proportion to the whole of such rent payable for the year as the amount of each instalment of such revenue bears to the whole of such revenue payable for the year.

Receipts.

13. Receipts for rent and acknowledgments of the tender of rent shall specify the year or years on account of which it has been paid or tendered; and any refusal to make such specification shall be held to be a withholding of a receipt or acknowledgment.

If such receipt or acknowledgment is withheld from any under-proprietor or tenant without sufficient cause, he may recover compensation from the landlord, not exceeding the amount so paid or tendered.

The Oudh Rent Bill.

(Chapter II.—Of certain Rights and Liabilities of Landlords, Under-proprietors and Tenants.—Sections 14-15.)

Deposit of Revenue or Rent in Court without Suit.

[having a right of occupancy, or holding under an unexpired lease or under an agreement or decree]

14. If any co-sharer, under-proprietor, or tenant [] shall, at the place where the revenue or rent of the land held or cultivated by him is usually payable, tender to the person authorized to receive the same payment of the full amount of such revenue or rent due in respect of such land, and if such amount is not accepted and a receipt not forthwith granted, it shall be lawful for the co-sharer, under-proprietor or tenant, without any suit having been instituted against him, to deposit such amount in Court to the credit of the person authorized to receive it.

Such deposit shall, so far as regards the co-sharer, under-proprietor or tenant, and all persons claiming through or under him, operate as a payment then made to the lambadār or landlord of the amount so deposited.

15. The Court shall receive such deposits on the written application of the co-sharer, under-proprietor or tenant, or his recognized agent; the application shall bear a stamp of eight annas; and on such co-sharer, under-proprietor, tenant or agent making a declaration in the form set forth in Schedule A hereto annexed, or as near the etc as circumstances will admit, the Court shall give him a receipt for the deposit.

Such declaration shall be verified in the manner prescribed for the verification of plaints in the Code of Civil Procedure, and the provisions of sections 52 of the said Code shall apply to the person making the verification. XIV of 1882

Upon receiving the money so deposited, the Court shall issue to the person to whose credit it has been deposited a notice in the form set forth in Schedule B hereto annexed.

Such notice shall be served by the proper officer, without the payment of any fee, upon the person to whom it is addressed, or upon his recognized agent.

In the absence of any such agent, it may be served by putting up a copy of the same at the court-house, and another copy at the ordinary place of residence, within the jurisdiction of the Court, of such person, or, if there be no such place, at the place where the revenue or rent is usually paid to the landlord or landlord, as the case may be, for the land in respect of which the money has been deposited.

If the person on whom such notice is served, or his recognized agent, appears and applies that the money in deposit be paid to him, it shall immediately be paid accordingly.

The Oudh Rent Bill.

(Chapter II.—Of certain Rights and Liabilities of Landlords, Under-proprietors and Tenants.—Sections 16-19)

16. Whenever a deposit has been made under Limitation of suits for, the provisions of this Act, balance of revenue or, no suit shall be brought rent. against the depositor or his representative on account of any revenue or rent which accrued due in respect of the land last hereinbefore mentioned prior to the date of the deposit, unless such suit is instituted within six months from the date of the service of the notice mentioned in section 15.

17. If, at the time of passing the decision in Compensation for any such suit, the Court is non-acceptance of revenue satisfied that the full amount due or rent. of revenue or rent due at the time of the deposit was tendered to, and was not accepted by, the lambardār or landlord or his recognized agent, as the case may be, or that a receipt or acknowledgment was withheld for such amount without sufficient cause, the Court may award to such depositor compensation from the lambardār or landlord, not exceeding the amount so paid or tendered.

If the Court be satisfied that the amount of the deposit was less than the amount of revenue or rent due, the Court shall pay the amount of the deposit to the lambardār or landlord, and shall make a decree for the balance due by the depositor.

Illegal Enforcement of Payment of Rent.

18. If payment of rent or of any sum in excess Compensation to under-proprietor or tenant of the rent legally claimable is illegally enforced, and for illegal enforcement any under-proprietor or of payment. tenant institutes a suit to recover compensation for such enforcement, the Court may award to him compensation, not exceeding the sum of rupees two hundred, in addition to any amount for which it makes a decree in respect of such payment.

An award of compensation under the former part of this section shall not bar any prosecution to which the person enforcing such payment may be liable under any law for the time being in force.

Abatement of Rent.

19. No suit for an abatement of rent shall be Suit for abatement of brought by any under-proprietor or tenant, except on the ground that the area of the land has been diminished by diluvion, or on some ground specified in any lease, agreement or decree, under which he holds:

Provided that, if the under-proprietor hold a sub-settlement in a revenue-paying estate, no such abatement shall be allowed to the under-proprietor, unless a remission of revenue has been allowed on the same ground and by competent authority in the same estate.

The Oudh Rent Bill.

(Chapter II.—Of certain Rights and Liabilities of Landlords, Under-proprietors and Tenants.—Sections 20-21 (A).)

[35 and 36]

[provided that if the under-proprietor hold a sub-settlement, or if the tenant hold a lease for a term of not less than five years, or have a right of occupancy in a revenue-paying estate, no such remission shall be allowed to him, unless a remission of revenue shall have been allowed on the same ground and by competent authority in the same estate]

[or unless it has been let to any other person by such landlord or agent]

Remission of Rent.

20. Notwithstanding anything contained in section 19 [] the Court, in making a decree for an arrear of rent, may allow such remission from the rent payable by any under-proprietor or tenant as appears equitable, if the area of the land in his occupation has been materially diminished by diluvion or otherwise, or if the produce of such land has been diminished by drought or hail, or other calamity beyond his control, to such an extent that the full amount of rent payable by him cannot, in the opinion of the Court, be equitably decreed.

Relinquishment of Land.

21. Every tenant shall continue liable for the rent of the land in his holding, unless on or before the fifteenth of March in any year he gives notice in writing to the landlord or his recognised agent of his desire to relinquish such land, and relinquishes it accordingly [].

If the landlord or his recognised agent refuse to receive such notice or to sign and deliver a receipt for the same, the tenant may, before the latest date prescribed for giving such notice, apply to the tahsildar or proper officer, and written notice of such desire shall thereafter be served on such landlord or agent, and the tenant shall pay the costs of service.

The notice shall, if practicable, be served personally on the landlord or agent; but if he cannot be found, service may be made by affixing the notice at his usual place of residence, or, if he does not reside in the district wherein the land is situate, at the chaurpal or other conspicuous place in the village wherein the land is situate.

21. (A). If a tenant voluntarily abandons his holding without informing his landlord and without arranging for the cultivation of the holding, it shall be lawful for the landlord at any time after the fifteenth of May to enter on the holding. Before a landlord enters under this section, he shall file a notice in the prescribed form with the supervisor-kanungo, stating that he has treated the holding as abandoned and is about to enter on it accordingly.

When a landlord enters under this section, the tenant shall be entitled to institute a suit under section 83, clause 10, of this Act, to recover occupancy of the holding; and the Court shall, on being satisfied that the tenant did not voluntarily abandon his holding, order recovery of possession on such terms, if any, with respect to compensation to persons injured and payment of arrears of rent as to the Court may seem just.

Compensations for Tenant's Improvements.

22. If any tenant, or the person from whom he has inherited, make any improvement on the land in his occupation as are hereinafter mentioned, either he or his representative shall be ejected from the same land, unless and until he or his representative, as the case may be, has received compensation for the [] improvements made on the land by him, or the person from whom he has inherited, or whom he represents [].

[outlay, in money or labour, or both, expended in making such]
[within thirty years next before the date of such enhancement or ejection]

23. Except as provided in the next following section, no tenant shall be entitled to claim compensation for an improvement made subsequently to the passing of this Act without the written consent of the landlord.

24. If in any case the tenant apply to the Deputy Landlord for his written consent to his making an improvement on his holding, and the landlord withhold or refuse to grant it, it shall be lawful for the tenant to apply to the Deputy Commissioner for sanction to make the improvement. The Deputy Commissioner, after taking into consideration any objections which the landlord may here to urge, either on the ground that—

(a) the improvement is too costly or is unsuitable to the nature of the tenant's holding, or that

(b) he is prepared to make such improvement himself,

shall grant sanction on such conditions as he may consider fair and equitable or refuse the application. No appeal shall be against an order passed by the Deputy Commissioner under this section.

25. The word "improvements," as used in this Act means works by which the annual letting value of the land has been, and at the time of demanding compensation continues to be, increased, and comprises—

1st. The construction of works for the storage of water, for the supply of water for agricultural purposes, for drainage, and for protection against floods; the construction of wells; the reclaiming and clearing of waste lands and jungles, and other works of a like nature.

2nd.—The renewal or reconstruction of any of the foregoing works, or such alterations therein or additions thereto as are not required for maintaining the same, and which increase durably their value.

Principle on which compensation is to be estimated 25 (A). In estimating the compensation to which a tenant is entitled regard shall be had—

a) to the amount by which the value, or the produce, of the holding, or the value of that produce, is increased by the improvement;

Act VIII, 1885, section 87.

b) to the condition of the improvement and the probable duration of its effects;

c) to the labour and capital required for the making of such an improvement;

d) to any reduction or remission of rent or any other advantage given by the landlord to the tenant in consideration of the improvement; and

e) in the case of a reclamation, or of the conversion of uncultivated into irrigated land, to the length of time during which the tenant has had the benefit of the improvement.

25 (B) When a Court has assessed the amount of the compensation to which a tenant is entitled under the provisions of the preceding sections, it may, if both landlord and tenant desire that the compensation assessed instead of being paid wholly in money, shall be made wholly or partly in some other way, proceed to give judgment according to the terms agreed upon by them.

26 A landlord shall be entitled to make any improvement at the expense of the tenant, or by a special rate levied on the holding of a tenant not occupying or occupying, with or without the consent of the tenant.

A landlord who proposes to make an improvement shall, if the work is to be constructed in the holding of any tenant, give notice to the tenant in writing that he intends to do so.

Special and Agreement

27. Every landlord, his agents and surveyors, and his right to may at all reasonable times enter upon any land comprised in his estate for the purpose of surveying and measuring the same.

CHAPTER III

COMMUTATION AND PAYMENT OF RENT IN KIND.

28. In any district in which a settlement of revenue is in progress, it shall be in the discretion of any officer employed in making or revising such settlement, in any case in which the rent of a tenant having a right of occupancy is paid in kind, or by the estimated value of a portion of the crop, to commute, on the application either of the landlord or the tenant, such rent into a rent in money.

30. Wherever rent is taken by division of the produce in kind, or by estimate or appraisement of the standing crop, or other procedure of a similar nature, requiring the presence both of the tenant and landlord either personally or by a recognized agent, if either party neglect to be present at the proper period, or if a dispute arise between the parties regarding such division, estimate or appraisement, either party may present an application to the Court on a paper bearing a stamp of eight annas, requesting that a proper officer be deputed to make the division, estimate or appraisement.

31. On receiving such application, the Court shall issue a written notice to the other party to attend on the date and at the place specified in the notice, and shall depute an officer before whom the division, estimate or appraisement shall be made.

The award of such officer in respect of such division, estimate or appraisement shall be final, unless, within one month from the date thereof, either party institutes a suit to set it aside.

[The amount of rent thus fixed shall be binding upon the parties concerned.]

[All decisions already passed by any such officer, commuting rents in kind or by valuation to rents in money, shall, subject to the same appeal as is given by this Act in respect of decisions passed in suits, be binding on the parties concerned.]

32. The Chief Commissioner of Oudh may extend the provisions of section 28 to any district or portion of a district in which a settlement of revenue is not in progress; and may declare that officers are empowered to hear and decide cases under this section.

and may make rules for the guidance of officers acting under this section and section 28, and, from time to time, with the like sanction alter and add to the rules so made.

Provided that such rules, alterations, and additions are consistent with this Act.]

CHAPTER IV

ENHANCEMENT AND FIXING RATES OF RENT.

A.—Tenants with Right of Occupancy

32. No tenant having a right of occupancy in any land shall, in case of dispute as to the rent to be paid in respect of such land, be liable to an enhancement of the rent, except in pursuance of a decree made under this Act on some one of the following grounds (that is to say):—

1st ground.—That the rate of rent paid by him is below the rate of rent usually paid by the same class of tenants having a right of occupancy, for land of a similar description and with similar advantages, situate in the same village.

Rule.—In this case the Court shall enhance his rent to such amount as the plaintiff demands, not exceeding such rate.

2nd ground.—That the rate of rent paid by him is more than $12\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. below the rate of rent usually paid by tenants of the same class not having a right of occupancy, for land of a similar description and with similar advantages, situate in the same village.

The Oudh Rent Bill.(Chapter IV.—Enhancement and fixing Rates of Rent.—Sections 33-35.1)

Rule.—In this case the Court shall enhance his rent to such amount as the plaintiff demands, not exceeding such rate, viz. $4\frac{1}{2}$ per cent.

3d ground.—That the quantity of land held by him exceeds the quantity for which he has previously paid rent.

Rule.—In this case the Court shall decree rent for the land in excess, at rates to be fixed by the first or the second of the rules contained in this section, as the case may be.

Nothing contained in the previous part of this section shall affect the terms of any agreement in writing hereafter entered into between a landlord and tenant.

33. After a decision has been passed in accordance with section 32 no suit shall lie for re-enhancement of such rent until the expiration of five years from the date of such decision, except on the said 3rd ground, or, in the case referred to in section 34, until by re-assessment within the said term of five years the revenue of such land has been increased.

34. On such re-assessment, if the rent of such land cannot be enhanced under section 32 by reason of the absence of the grounds therein mentioned, the landlord may institute a suit to enhance the rent to a sum not exceeding double the average amount of the revenue imposed at such re-assessment upon land of a similar description and with similar advantages held by tenants of the same class in the same village.

B.—Other Tenants.

35. Every tenant, not being a tenant with a right of occupancy, shall, at the passing of this Act, be entitled to retain possession of the holding occupied by him at the time of the passing of this Act at the rent then payable by him for a period of seven years from the date of the last change in his rent or of the last alteration in the area of the holding.

35 (A). Every such tenant hereafter adjudged hereafter entitled to the occupation of a holding shall be entitled to retain possession of the holding occupied by him at the time of the passing of this Act at the rent then payable by him for a period of seven years from the date of the last change in his rent or of the last alteration in the area of the holding, in the case with the provisions of this section, if the tenant, not being a tenant with a right of occupancy, in the area of the holding, in the amount of whose rent a change has taken place, the landlord, notwithstanding the provisions of this Act, shall be deemed to be entitled to the occupation of a holding within the meaning of this section.

Explanation.—Holding means a piece of land held by a tenant for the purpose of a separate engagement. Such engagement may be express or implied.

36. If the landlord desires to enhance the rent of the tenant on the expiration of statutory term of the term of seven years referred to in sections 35 and 35 (A), or at any time thereafter, he shall cause a notice to that effect to be served in the manner prescribed in section 36 B. Until such notice is issued, the tenant shall be entitled to hold at the former rent.

Provided—(a) that the enhancement shall in no case exceed one anna in the rupee or six and a quarter per cent. on the annual rent payable when the notice is issued,

(b) that the terms of this section shall not apply to a tenant paying rent in kind.

36 (A). The notice shall be written in Hindi or Urdu; it shall state specifically the land, the amount of the present rent and the amount of the enhancement, and shall require the tenant, if he refuses to pay the enhanced rent, to vacate the land by the fifteenth day of May next following, or to institute a suit in the proper Court to contest the notice of enhancement within a month from the date on which it was served.

36 (B). On the application of the landlord to the District or other authorized officer, such notices, the notice shall be served by such officer on or before the fifteenth day of February, and the landlord shall pay the cost of service.

The notice shall, if practicable, be served personally on the tenant. But if he cannot be found, service may be made by affixing the notice at his usual place of residence, or, if he does not reside in the district wherein the land is situated, at the village chaurpal or other conspicuous place in the village wherein the land is situated.

36 (C). A tenant may institute a suit to contest his liability to enhancement on any of the following grounds:—

1st—That he holds a lease or agreement or decree of Court under the terms of which he is not liable to enhancement.

2nd—That he has a right of occupancy in the land.

3rd—That the enhancement claimed is in excess of the rate authorized by law.

4th—That seven years have not elapsed since the date of the last change in the rent or alteration of the area of the holding by the landlord.

The Oudh Rent Bill.(Chapter IV. — Enhancement and fixing Rates of Rent.—Sections 36D-36J.)

5th — That the notice has not been served in the manner prescribed in section 36 B.

36 (D). If the objection of the tenant is found by the Court to be invalid, or, if no suit has been instituted to contest the notice within a period of thirty days from the day on which it was served, on the expiration of such period, the tenant shall, if he retain possession of the land after the fifteenth day of May next following the date of service of the notice, be held liable for the enhanced rent.

36 (E). If the tenant accepts the enhanced rent claimed by the notice, or remains in possession of the land under the terms of the preceding section, he shall be entitled to hold the land at such rent for a further period of seven years.

36 (F). If the tenant refuses to accept the enhancement claimed and vacates the holding, he shall be entitled to recover by separate suit from the landlord compensation for any improvements made by him on the holding.

36 (G). Except in the cases mentioned in the next following section, the rent of a tenant admitted to the occupation of any land the tenancy of which has determined according to the provisions of this Act shall not exceed by more than one anna in the rupee, or six and a quarter per cent., the rent payable by the tenant immediately preceding.

36 (H).—The rent of a tenant admitted to the occupation of any land the tenancy of which has ceased in consequence of the death of a previous tenant, or of the ejectment of a thikadár or mortgagee from lands of which he has taken cultivating possession during the period of his thika or mortgage, shall be such amount as may be agreed upon between him and the landlord.

36 (I). The heir of a tenant who dies during the currency of the tenancy shall have the right to retain occupation of the land at the rent payable by the deceased for the unexpired portion of the period for which the deceased tenant might have held without liability to enhancement or ejectment, and to receive compensation under the provisions of this Act for improvements, if any, effected on the holding by himself or his predecessor in interest, but shall have no right to a renewal of the tenancy or to compensation for disturbance.

36 (J). Notwithstanding anything contained in the preceding sections, the Local Government shall have power to vary, from time to time, the limit of enhancement of rent.

to time, within periods of not less than seven years, the limits of the enhancement to which tenants, not having rights of occupancy, are liable.

36 (K). Nothing in the preceding sections shall bar the right of a landlord to an enhancement of rent on the ground that the productive powers of the land held by the tenant have been increased by an improvement effected by, or at the expense of, the landlord during the currency of the tenancy.

Where an enhancement is claimed on the ground of such an improvement, the Court in determining the amount of such enhancement shall have regard to—

- firstly—the increase in the productive powers in the land caused, or likely to be caused, by the improvement;*
- secondly—to the cost of the improvement;*
- thirdly—to the cost of the cultivation required for the utilising of the improvement.*

CHAPTER V.

EJECTMENT.

Tenants with Right of Occupancy.

37. No tenant having a right of occupancy, or holding under an unexpired lease, or special agreement, or decree of Court, shall be ejected otherwise than in execution of a decree for ejectment:

[Act XIX, 1868, section 41.]

Provided that, if the tenant have a right of occupancy in the land from which the landlord desires to eject him, the decree shall not be made, unless, at the date of the decree, a decree against such tenant for an arrear of rent in respect of such land has remained unsatisfied for fifteen days or upwards.

Other Tenants.

38. A tenant not having a right of occupancy, and not holding under an unexpired lease, or an agreement, or a decree of Court, may be ejected in accordance with the provisions of this Act: first, in execution of a decree for [] ejectment under section 43A or by application under section 43; or, second, by notice given by his landlord in the manner described in the next following sections.

[Act XIX, 1868, section 42.]

[arrears of rent or for]

38(A). A landlord who desires to eject a tenant on the expiration of his tenancy may issue a notice of ejectment on such tenant, but shall deposit with the notice in the hand of the officer authorized to serve the notice a sum equal to the rent payable by the tenant for the year immediately preceding as compensation for disturbance.

In the case of a tenant paying rent in kind the amount of compensation to be deposited under this section shall be a sum equal to the average annual value of the produce paid as rent during the preceding three years.

Provided that no such compensation shall be payable to a tenant in respect of so much of his holding as he has sub-let without the consent of the landlord, or in the cases provided for by sections 36 (1), 43 and 43 (A).

[Act XIX, 1868, section 43.]

33. The notice mentioned in section 38 A shall be written in Hindi and if the tenant not having in Udu; it shall specify the land from which the tenant is to be ejected; and it shall inform him that he must either (a), if he means to dispute the ejectment, institute a suit for that purpose within thirty days from the date of the service of the notice, or (b) vacate the land on or before the fifteenth of May next following.

On the application of the landlord to the tahsildar or officer authorised to serve such notices, the notice shall be served by such officer on or before the fifteenth day of November, and the landlord shall pay the costs of service.

The notice shall, if practicable, be served personally on the tenant. But if he cannot be found, service may be made by affixing the notice at his usual place of residence, or, if he does not reside in the district wherein the land is situate, at the village chaudri or other conspicuous place in the village wherein the land is situate.

40. A tenant on whom a notice has been served under section 39 may contest his liability to be ejected from the land specified therein on any of the following grounds:—

- 1st—That he holds a lease or an agreement, or a decree of Court, under the terms of which he is not liable to such ejectment.
- 2nd—That he has a right of occupancy in the land.
- 3rd—If he be a tenant not having a right of occupancy, that notice of ejectment has not been served upon him in manner provided by section 39.
- 4th—That seven years have not elapsed since the date of the last change of rent or alteration of the area of the holding.
- 5th—That he is entitled to compensation for disturbance, and that the landlord has not deposited the sum required by this Act.

The Oudh Rent Bill.
(Chapter V.—Ejectment.—Sections 40A-43.)

Explanation.—A thikádar is not entitled to contest a notice of ejectment on any ground other than that he holds a lease under the terms of which he is not liable to ejectment.

40 (A). If the tenant has any claim for compensation for improvements effected by him on the holding, he shall file with his plaint a statement of the claim and of the grounds on which it is based.

40 (B). If the Court finds the objections of the tenant to be barred, it shall determine the amount of the compensation, if any, due for improvements, and shall declare the ejectment to be conditional on payment of that amount to the Court.

41. If the tenant on whom such notice of ejectment has been served fails, within thirty days from the date of the service, to institute a suit to contest his liability to be ejected, his tenancy of the land in respect of which the notice has been served shall be held to cease on the fifteenth of May next following, unless, after the service, the landlord has expressly authorised him to continue to occupy the land.

42. If no such suit be brought, or if a suit has been brought and determined adversely to the tenant, and the landlord requires the assistance of the Court to eject any person whose tenancy is alleged to have ceased [], he may apply for such assistance, and, if the Court is satisfied that notice of ejectment was duly served on such person, and that any compensation for improvements and disturbance, which may be due to the tenant, has been paid into Court or to the proper officer, it shall give such assistance accordingly :

[Ditto, section 45.]

Provided that nothing done by the Court under the previous part of this section shall affect the right of any tenant to institute a suit against his landlord on account of illegal ejectment and to recover compensation for the same.

43. If a landlord desires to eject a tenant, not being a tenant with a right of occupancy, against whom a decree for arrears has been passed and remains unsatisfied, he may, after the first of April of the year in which the arrears accrued, apply to the Deputy Commissioner to eject the tenant. The Deputy Commissioner shall, on receiving the application, cause a notice to be served on the tenant, stating the amount due under the decree and informing him that, if he does not pay that amount into Court within fifteen days from the receipt of the notice, he will be ejected from his holding.

If the amount be not so paid, the Deputy Commissioner shall, unless good cause be shown to the contrary, eject the tenant,

[Act VIII, 1885, section 25.]

43 (A). A decree for ejectment may be passed against a tenant on the ground—

Decree for ejectment.

(a) that he has used the land comprised in his holding in a manner which renders it unfit for the purposes of his tenancy; or,

(b) where the rent is payable in kind, that his cultivation has diminished to a point which by the custom of the locality involves the forfeiture of the holding.

The tenant shall continue liable for the rent of the land until the decree is executed.

[Act XIX, 1868, section 38.]

[unless, while his rent is in arrear, he has failed to cultivate the land in his possession in accordance with the terms on which he holds it]

[Act XIX, 1868, section 39.]

44. No tenant [] shall in any case, whether in execution of a decree or otherwise, be ejected from the land in his occupancy, except between the first day of April and the fifteenth day of June in any year after the passing of this Act [].

45. A thikadár liable to be ejected under the provisions of this Act may be ejected at any time during his tenancy.

46. Any tenant ejected in accordance with the provisions of this Act shall be entitled to receive from the landlord the value of any growing crops or other ungathered products of the earth belonging to such tenant, and being on the land at the time of his ejectment:

Provided that, if the land shall have been sown or planted by the tenant after the service on him of the notice mentioned in section 39, he shall not be so entitled, unless, after such service, the landlord has expressly authorised him to continue to occupy the land.

Sir Lands.

46 (A). The rights conferred upon tenants by sections 21, 35, 35(A), 36, 36(D), 36(F), 36(G), 36(I) and 38(A) shall not accrue to cultivators of any of the following lands:—

Sir lands.

(a) Land which for the seven years immediately preceding the passing of this Act has been continuously dealt with as sir in the distribution of proprietary profits and charges. This condition shall be presumed, until the contrary is proved, where land was recorded as sir at settlement and has been continuously so recorded since:

(b) Land which for the seven years immediately preceding the passing of this Act has been continuously cultivated by the proprietor himself or by his servants or by hired labour.

46 (B). A person holding land as a thikadár or mortgagee shall not, while so holding, acquire any of the rights enumerated in the preceding section in any of the land comprised in his thika or mortgage.

Explanation.—A person having such rights in land does not lose them by subsequently taking a thika or mortgage in which his holding is comprised.

CHAPTER VI.

DISTRESS FOR ARREARS OF RENT.

47. When an arrear of rent is due from any tenant, the landlord may recover of arrears of rent by distress. distrain the produce of the land in respect of which the arrear is due, subject to the rules contained in the following sections:

Provided that, when a tenant has given security for the payment of his rent, the produce of the land in respect of which such rent is payable shall not be liable to distress so long as the security is in force.

48. Distress shall not be made for any arrear which has been due for a longer period than one year; nor for the recovery of any sum in excess of the rent payable in the last preceding year for the land in respect of which the arrear is due, unless the tenant has agreed in writing to pay such excess, or unless he has been declared to be liable for the same by a decree of Court.

49. The power of distress vested by section 47 in landlords may be exercised by managers under the Court of Wards, managing agents and tahsildars of estates held under kham management, and other persons lawfully entrusted with the charge of land, and also by the agents employed by landlords or any such persons as aforesaid in the collection of rent, or expressly authorised by power-of-attorney to distress:

Provided that, if any such agent, purporting to act in the exercise of the said power, commits an act which, under the provisions of this chapter, is illegal, the person employing such agent shall be liable, as well as the agent, to be sued for compensation for any injury caused by such act.

50. Any person empowered to distress property under section 47 or section 49 may employ a servant or other person to make the distress; but in every such case he shall give to such servant or person a written authority for the same, and the distress shall be made in the name and on the responsibility of the person giving such authority.

 reaped or gathered and deposited in any threshing-floor or place for treading out grain or the like, whether in the field or within a homestead, may be distrained by persons invested with powers of distress under this Act.

But no such crops or products, other than the produce of the land in respect of which an arrear of rent is due, or of land held under the same agreement as the land in respect of which the arrear is due, and no grain or other produce
 after it has been stored by the cultivator, and no other property whatsoever, shall be liable to distress under this Act.

54. Standing crops and other ungathered pro-
 Reaping and storing ducts of the earth may, standing crops when notwithstanding the distressed, be reaped or gathered by the tenant, and may be stored in such granaries or other places as are commonly used by him for the purpose.

If the tenant neglect to do so, the distrainer may cause the seed or ps or products to be reaped or gathered, and in such case shall store the same either in such granaries or other places as aforesaid, or in some other convenient place in the neighbourhood.

In either case the distrained property shall be placed in the charge of some proper person appointed by the distrainer for the purpose.

If the crops or products do not, from their nature, admit of being stored, the distress shall be made (if at all) at least twenty days before the time when the crops or products or any part thereof would ordinarily be fit for cutting or gathering.

The Oudh Rent Bill.

(Chapter VI.—Distress from Arrears of Rent.—Sections 55-59.)

55. If a distrainer is opposed or apprehends resistance, and desires to obtain the assistance of a public officer, he may apply to the Court, and the Court may, if it think necessary, depute an officer to assist the distrainer in making the distress.

56. If at any time after property has been distrained as aforesaid, and before the sale thereof as hereinafter provided, the owner tender payment of the arrear demanded and of the costs of the distress, the distrainer shall receive the same and give a receipt therefor, and shall forthwith withdraw the distress.

57. Within five days from the time of storing any distrained crops or products, or, if such crops or products do not from their nature admit of being stored, within five days from the time of making the distress, the distrainer shall apply for sale of the same to the proper officer authorized to sell property in satisfaction of decrees of the Court within whose jurisdiction the distrained property is situate.

58. The application shall be in writing: it shall contain a list or description of the property distrained, and it shall state the name of the defaulter, his place of residence, the amount due and the place in which the distrained property is deposited.

Together with the application, the distrainer shall deliver to the proper officer the sum payable for the service of a notice upon the defaulter as hereinafter provided.

59. Immediately on receipt of the application, the proper officer shall send a copy of it to the Court, and shall serve a notice in the form contained in Schedule C hereto annexed, or to the like effect, on the person whose property has been distrained, requiring him either to pay the amount demanded, or within fifteen days from the receipt of the notice to institute a suit to contest the demand.

The officer shall at the same time send to the Court, for the purpose of being put up at the court-house, a proclamation fixing a day for the sale of the distrained property, not less than twenty days from the date of the proclamation; and shall deliver a copy of the proclamation to the peon charged with the service of the notice, to be put up by him in the place where the distrained property is deposited.

The proclamation shall contain a description of the property, and shall specify the demand for which it is sold, and the place where the sale is to be held.

60. If a suit is instituted in pursuance of the aforesaid notice, the Court shall send to the proper officer, or, if so requested by the owner of the distrained property, shall deliver to him, a certificate of the institution of the suit.

On such certificate being received by, or presented to, the proper officer, he shall suspend proceedings in regard to the sale:

Provided that, if in his opinion the property distrained is such that delay will cause damage thereto, he may direct its immediate sale.

61. Any person whose property has been distrained as aforesaid may institute a suit to contest the distrainer's demand at any time before the expiration of the fifteen days mentioned in section 59.

When such suit is instituted, the Court shall proceed in the manner prescribed in section 60.

If application for the sale of the property is afterwards made to the proper officer, he shall send a copy of the application to the Court, and suspend further proceedings pending the decision of the Court.

62. The person whose property has been distrained, at the time of instituting any such suit as aforesaid, or at any subsequent period, execute a bond with one or more sureties or sureties, for an amount not less than double the value of the property so distrained, binding himself to pay whatever sum may be adjudged to be due from him, with costs of suit.

When such bond is executed, the Court shall give to the owner of the property a certificate to that effect, or, if he so requests, shall serve the distrainer with notice of the same.

Upon such certificate being presented to the distrainer by the owner of the property, or served on him by order of the Court, the property shall be released from distress.

63. On the expiration of the period fixed in the prohibition of sale, if the institution of a suit to contest the demand of the distrainer has not been certified to the proper officer in the manner hereinbefore provided, he shall, unless the said demand, with such costs of the distress as are allowed by him, be discharged in full, proceed, with the sanction of the Court, to sell the property, or such part thereof as may be necessary.

64. The sale shall be held at the place where the distrained property is deposited, or at the nearest ganj, bázár or other place of public resort, if the proper officer thinks that it is likely to sell there to better advantage.

The property shall be sold by public auction in one or more lots as the officer holding the sale thinks advisable; and if the demand, with the costs of distress and sale, be satisfied by the sale of a portion of the property, the distress shall be immediately withdrawn with respect to the remainder.

65. If, on the property being put up for sale, a price which the officer holding the sale shall think fair be not offered, and if the owner of the property or his recognized agent apply to have the sale postponed until the next day, or (if a market be held at the place of sale) until the next market-day, the sale shall be postponed until such day, and shall be then completed at whatever price may be offered.

66. The price of every lot shall be paid in ready money at the time of sale, or as soon thereafter as the officer holding the sale thinks fit; and in default of such payment the property shall be put up again and resold.

When the purchase-money has been paid in full, the officer holding the sale shall give the purchaser a certificate stating the property purchased by him and the price paid therefor.

67. The officer holding the sale shall deduct from the proceeds one anna for every rupee and fraction of a rupee on account of the expenses attending the sale.

He shall then pay to the distrainer the expenses incurred by him on account of the distress and of the issue of the notice and proclamation of sale prescribed in section 59, to such amount as, after examination of the statement of expenses furnished by the distrainer, the officer thinks proper to allow.

The remainder shall be applied to the discharge of the arrear for which the distress was made, and the surplus (if any) shall be delivered to the person whose property has been sold.

68. Officers holding sales under this Act, and all persons employed by, or subordinate to, such officers, are forbidden to purchase, either directly or indirectly, property sold by such officers.

69. The officer mentioned in section 57 shall bring to the notice of the Court any illegal act which shall come to his knowledge as having been committed by any person in making a distress under this Act.

If in any case, on proceeding to hold a sale under this Act, such officer finds that the owner has not received due notice of the distress and intended sale, he shall postpone the sale and report the case to the Court, and the Court shall direct the issue of another notice and proclamation of sale under section 59, or make such other order as it thinks proper.

70. When such officer has gone to any place for the purpose of holding a sale, and no sale takes place, either for the reason stated in section 69, or because the distrainer's demand has been previously satisfied, the said charge on account of expenses attending the sale shall be leviable by the officer, and shall be calculated on the value of the distrained property, as estimated by him, unless the distrainer's demand has been satisfied before the day fixed for the sale and notice of such satisfaction has been given by him to the officer.

If the distrainer's demand be not satisfied until the day fixed for the sale, the charge shall be paid by the owner of the property, and may be recovered by sale of such portion thereof as may be necessary.

In every other case the charge shall be paid by the distrainer, and may be recovered under the warrant of the Court by attachment and sale of his property :

Provided that in no case shall an amount exceeding ten rupees be recoverable under this section.

71. When a suit has been instituted to contest a distrainer's demand, and the property has not been released on security, if the demand or any portion of it shall be adjudged to be due, the Court shall issue an order to the proper officer authorizing the sale of the property.

On the application of the distrainer (which shall be made within five days from the receipt of such order by such officer), such officer shall publish a second proclamation in the manner prescribed in section 59, fixing another day for the sale of the distrained property, not less than five nor more than ten days from the date of the proclamation ; and, unless the amount adjudged to be due with cost of distress be paid immediately, shall proceed to sell the property in the manner hereinbefore provided.

72. In all suits instituted to contest a distrainer's demand the defendant must prove the arrear in the same manner as if he had himself brought a suit for the amount under the foregoing provisions of this Act.

If the demand or any part thereof is found to be due, the Court shall make a decree for the amount in favour of the distrainer.

Such amount may be recovered by sale of the distrained property as provided in section 71,

and if the distress has not been withdrawn, and if any balance remain due after such sale, by execution of the decree against the person and any other property of the defaulter, or, if the distrained property have been released on security, by execution of the decree against the person and property of the defaulter, and, if his surety has been made a party to the suit, against the person and property of such surety.

73. If the distress is adjudged to be vexatious or groundless, the Court, besides directing the release of the distrained property, may award such compensation to the plaintiff as it thinks fit, not exceeding twice the value of the property distrained.

74. If any person claims, as his own, property which has been distrained by third party claiming property distrained for arrears of rent alleged to be due from any other person, the claimant may institute a suit against the distrainer and such other person to try the right to the property, in the same manner, and under the same rules as to the time of instituting the suit and as to the consequent postponement of sale, as a person whose property has been distrained for an arrear of rent alleged to be due from him may institute a suit to contest the demand.

75. When any such suit is instituted, the property may be released upon security for its value being given to the satisfaction of the Court.

If the claim is dismissed, the Court shall make an order in favour of the distrainer for the sale of the property, or the recovery of its value, as the case may be.

If the claim is upheld, the Court shall order the release of the distrained property, and may award such compensation as it thinks fit, not exceeding twice the value of the property distrained.

76. No claim to any produce of land liable to distress under this Act, and found at the time of the distress in the possession of a defaulting tenant, whether such claim be in respect of a previous sale, mortgage or otherwise, shall bar the landlord's prior claim, nor shall any attachment in execution of a decree of any Civil Court prevail against such claim.

77. Whenever property has been distrained for an arrear of rent, and a stranger claiming to be landlord and to have right of distress to be made a party, suit has been instituted to contest the demand, and the right to distrain for such

arrear is claimed by or on behalf of any person other than the distrainer, on the ground of such other person being actually and in good faith in the receipt and enjoyment of the rent of the land, such other person shall be made by a party to the suit, and the question of the actual receipt and enjoyment of the rent by him before and up to the commencement of the suit shall be inquired into, and the suit shall be decided according to the result of such inquiry :

Provided that the decision of the Court shall not affect the right of any person having a title to the rent of land to establish such title in a Court of competent jurisdiction, by suit instituted within one year from the date of the decision.

78. Any person whose property has been distrained for the recovery of a demand not justly due or of a demand due or alleged to be due from some other person, and who is prevented by any sufficient cause from bringing a suit to contest the demand or try the right to the property, as the case may be, within the period allowed by sections 59 and 71, and whose property is in consequence brought to sale, may institute a suit to recover compensation for any injury which he has sustained from the distress or sale.

79. If any person empowered to distrain property, or employed for the purpose under a written authority by a person so empowered, distrains or sells any property for the recovery of an arrear of rent alleged to be due, otherwise than according to the provisions of this Act, or if any distrained property is lost, damaged or destroyed, by reason of the distrainer not having taken proper precaution for the due keeping and preservation thereof, or if the distress is not immediately withdrawn when any provision of this Act requires such withdrawal,

the owner of the property may institute a suit to recover compensation for any injury which he has thereby sustained.

80. If any person not empowered by this Act to distrain or sell, nor duly authorized for that purpose, purports to distrain or sell any property under this Act, the owner of such property may institute a suit to recover compensation from the person so distraining or selling for any injury which the plaintiff has sustained from the distress or sale.

Such suit shall not affect the defendant's liability to be prosecuted under any law for the time being in force.

The Oudh Rent Bill.(Chapter VII.—Jurisdiction of the Courts.—Sections 81-83.)

81. If any person resists a distress of property duly made under this Act, or forcibly or clandestinely removes any distrained property, the Court, upon complaint being made within ten days from the date of such resistance or removal shall cause the person accused to be arrested and brought before the Court with all convenient speed, and the Court shall proceed forthwith to try the case.

If the case cannot be at once heard and determined, the Court may, if it think fit, require the party arrested to give security for his person, whenever the same may be required, and, in default of such security, may commit him to the civil jail until the case is tried.

82. If such resistance or removal of property be proved, the Court may order the offender to pay a fine not exceeding one hundred rupees, together with all costs and expenses incurred in the case or in making the distress, and, in default of payment, may order him to be imprisoned in the civil jail until payment is made: Provided that no such imprisonment shall continue for more than six months.

CHAPTER VII.

Grades of Courts for the purposes of this Act. 84. For the purposes of this Act, the Courts of Revenue shall consist of six grades of Courts, namely—

- (1.)—The Court of the Assistant Collector of the second class;
- (2.)—The Court of the Assistant Collector of the first class;
- (3.)—The Court of the Deputy Collector;
- (4.)—The Court of the Collector;
- (5.)—The Court of the Commissioner;
- (6.)—The Court of the Judicial Commissioner.

85. The Chief Commissioner of Oudh shall have power to declare to which of the first three grades any Assistant Commissioner shall belong, and to invest any Tahsildar with the powers of any of the same grades.

Deputy Commissioner may have Collector's powers. 86. The Deputy Commissioner shall exercise the powers of a Collector under this Act.

87. The Chief Commissioner of Oudh may invest any officer employed in making or revising settlements of revenue with all or any of the powers of a Collector, or Deputy Collector, or Assistant Collector, under this Act.

88. The Court of the Assistant Collector of the second class shall have power to try and determine suits of the descriptions mentioned in clauses (1), (2), (7), (12), (15), (16), (17) and (18) of section 83, of which the subject-matter does not exceed one hundred rupees in value or amount.

89. The Court of the Assistant Collector of the first class shall have power to try and determine suits of the descriptions referred to in the last preceding section, of which the subject-matter does not exceed five hundred rupees in value or amount.

90. The Court of the Deputy Collector shall have power to try and determine suits of every description of which the subject-matter does not exceed five thousand rupees in value or amount.

91. The Court of the Collector shall have power to try and determine suits of every description and of any amount, and to hear appeals from the decisions in suits, and (where an appeal is allowed by the Code of Civil Procedure as applied by this Act) from the orders of the Assistant Collectors, and, in suits under clauses (2), (5), (9), (11), (14), (15), (16), (17) and (18) of section 83, from such decisions and orders of the Deputy Collectors.

Whenever the state of the public business requires it, the Chief Commissioner may invest any Deputy Collector with the powers of a Collector for the trial and determination of suits and appeals under this Act, other than appeals from the decisions of such Deputy Collector, and with the powers of a Deputy Commissioner to hear applications under sections 24 and 33, and may invest any Collector with all or any of the powers of a Commissioner under this Act.

92. The Court of the Commissioner shall have Jurisdiction of Commissioner. power to hear and determine appeals from decisions in suits, and (where an appeal is allowed by the Code of Civil Procedure) from the orders of the Collectors and Deputy Collectors, except as otherwise provided in sections 91 and 95 [and 102]. XIV of 1882.

93. The Court of the Judicial Commissioner shall have power to hear and determine appeals from the decisions in suits, and (where an appeal is allowed by the Code of Civil Procedure) from the orders of the Commissioners, and also second appeals, as provided in the said Code, from the decisions passed in first appeal by the Collectors and by the Commissioners. XIV of 1882.

Appeals.

94. The memorandum of appeal, prepared in the form and containing the particulars mentioned in the Code of Civil Procedure, shall be presented to the Court empowered to hear the appeal within the period hereinafter specified, unless the appellant shall show sufficient cause, to the satisfaction of such Court, for not having presented the memorandum within such period, that is to say, thirty days if the appeal lie to the Collector, six weeks if the appeal lie to the Commissioner, and ninety days if the appeal lie to the Judicial Commissioner. XIV of 1882.

The period shall be reckoned from and exclusive of the day on which the decision or order appealed against was passed, and also exclusive of such time as may be requisite for obtaining a copy of the decree or order from which the appeal is made.

Second appeals shall be presented in the Court of the Judicial Commissioner within the period hereinbefore fixed for the presentation of first appeals.

95. In suits under clauses (2), (5), (9), (11), (11), (15), (16), (17) and (18) of section 83, and in appeals from decisions in such suits tried and decided by a Commissioner or Collect or, if the amount sued for does not exceed one hundred rupees, the judgment shall be final, except as hereinafter provided, unless in any such suit a question of right to enhance or otherwise vary the rent of a tenant, or any question relating to a title to land or to some interest in land, as between parties having conflicting claims thereto, has been determined by the judgment.

In such case the judgment shall be open to appeal in the manner provided in this Act.

Distribution of Business.

96. The Deputy Commissioner may direct the Deputy Commissioner business in the Courts subordinate to him, whether or not they hold their sittings in the same place, to be distributed among such Courts in such way as he shall think fit.

Transfer of Suits and Appeals.

97. The Commissioner or the Deputy Commissioner may withdraw any suit instituted in any Court subordinate to him, and try such suit himself, or refer it for trial to any other such Court competent to try the same.

The Commissioner may also withdraw any appeal instituted in the Court of any Collector subordinate to him, and try the appeal himself, or refer it for trial to the Court of any other Collector in his Division.

98. The Judicial Commissioner may order that any suit or appeal which shall be instituted in or presented to any Court subordinate to him shall be transferred to any other such Court competent to try or hear the subject-matter of the same.

Miscellaneous.

99. In the performance of their duties under this Act, the Collectors shall be subject to the direction and control of the Commissioners and of the Chief Commissioner; and the Deputy Collectors and Assistant Collectors shall be subject to the direction and control of the Deputy Commissioners to whom they are respectively subordinate:

Provided that nothing in this section shall empower the Chief Commissioner or any Commissioner or Deputy Commissioner to interfere in any way not authorized by this Act with any decision or order in a suit.

100. All suits which, under the provisions of this Act, may be brought by or against managing agents or talahdars of khām estates, may be brought by or against managing agents or talahdars of estates held under khām management, whether such estates are the property of Government or not.

101. No sharer in a joint estate, under-pr priority or other tenure, in which a division of land has not been made among the sharers, shall exercise any of the powers conferred by this Act in regard to the recovery of arrears of rent, enhancement of rent, ejectment of tenants, or distress, otherwise than through a manager authorized to collect the rents on behalf of all the sharers.

In pattidar estates or tenures such powers shall be exercised only through a lambardar, or through the pattidar who is entitled to collect the rents of the patta.

102. Any person in possession of land occupied by or against him, without consent of the landlord, shall be liable for the rent of such land at the rate payable in the previous year, or, if no rent was payable in the previous year, at such rate as the Court may determine to be fair and equitable, and he shall not in respect of such land have any of the statutory privileges conferred by this Act.

103. The Courts may sit for the hearing and determining suits and appeals, and for disposing of other business under this Act, in any place within the local limits of their respective jurisdictions:

Provided that every hearing and decision shall be in open Court, and that the parties to the suit, or their authorized agents, shall have had due notice to attend at such place.

CHAPTER VIII.

LIMITATION OF SUITS.

104. Except as herein otherwise provided, and subject to the provisions as to legal disability contained in any law for the limitation of suits for the time being in force in Oudh, all suits under this Act shall be instituted within one year from the date of the accruing of the cause of action.

105. Suits for the delivery of pattas or the counterparts of pattas may be instituted at any time during the tenancy.

106. Suits for the recovery of arrears of rent of revenue or share of profits shall, except in the case mentioned in section 10, be instituted within three years from the date on which the arrear or share of profit claimed shall have become due.

107. Suits for the recovery of money in the hands of an agent, or for the settlement of accounts or delivery of papers by an agent, may be brought at any time during the continuance of the agency or within one year after its determination, or, in the case of claims legally exigible at the date of the passing of this Act, within one year after such date.

Suits against agents for money, or delivery of accounts or papers.

108. Suits regarding distress under section 74, 75, 79 or 80, and suits regarding the division, estimate or apportionment of the produce of land, shall be commenced within three months from the date of the accruing of the cause of action.

Suits regarding distress, division of produce, &c.

CHAPTER IX.

PROCEDURE.

of 1882 109. The provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure as in force in Oudh shall, so far as they are not inconsistent with the provisions herein contained, apply to all suits, appeals and proceedings under this Act.

Civil Procedure Code to be the procedure under this Act.

110. In addition to the particulars required by section 50 of the said Code to be specified in the plaint, the plaint shall contain the following particulars:—

Particulars to be added to plaint.

1st.—The name of the village or estate, and of the parganá in which the land to which the suit relates is situate;

2nd.—If the suit be for recovery of an arrear of rent, or for the enhancement or abatement of rent, or for the ejectment of a tenant, or for contesting a notice of enhancement of rent, or for contesting a notice for the ejectment of a tenant or for the recovery of the occupancy or possession of any land, the plaint shall specify the extent, situation and designation of the land to which the suit relates and, where fields have been marked in a Government survey, the number (if it be possible to give it) of each field;

3rd.—If the suit be for recovery of an arrear of rent or revenue, the plaint shall specify the yearly rent or revenue of the land, the amount (if any) received on account of the year or years for which the claim is made, the amount in arrear and the time in respect of which it is alleged to be due;

4th.—If the suit be for the delivery of a patta or the counterpart of a patta, the plaint shall specify all the particulars mentioned in section 7.

The Oudh Rent Bill.(Chapter IX.—Procedure.—Sections 111-117)

111. When in any suit between a landlord and an under-proprietor or tenant the right to receive the rent of the land is claimed by a third person, on the ground that he, or a person through whom he claims, has actually and in good faith received and enjoyed such rent up to the time of the commencement of the suit, such third person shall be made a party to the suit, and the question of the actual receipt and enjoyment of the rent by him or the person through whom he claims shall be inquired into, and the suit shall be decided according to the result of such inquiry :

Provided always that the decision of the Court shall not affect the right of any party having a legal right to the rent of such land to establish his title thereto in a Court of competent jurisdiction.

112. In all suits under clauses (1), (2), (7), (10) and (11) of section 83 of this Act, the summons to the defendant shall be for the final disposal of the suit.

113. In a suit to recover an arrear of rent, no set off shall be allowed against the claim, except such amount as may be due to the defendant on an unexecuted decree under this Act against the plaintiff.

114. In any suit under this Act involving a claim to money, the defendant may, at any stage of the suit, deposit in Court such sum of money as he considers a satisfaction in full of the plaintiff's claim, together with the costs incurred by the plaintiff up to the time of such deposit.

Notice of the deposit shall be given to the plaintiff, and the amount deposited shall be paid to him on his application.

No interest shall be allowed to a plaintiff on any sum paid by the defendant into Court from the date of such payment, whether such sum be in full of the plaintiff's claim or fall short thereof.

115. In any case in which the defendant deposits less than the amount claimed by the plaintiff, nothing in section 114 shall bar the plaintiff from proceeding in the suit for the recovery of the balance.

[116. If a tenant not having a right of occupancy institute a suit against a landlord for the delivery of a lease, or a landlord institute a suit against a tenant not having a right of occupancy for the delivery of the counterpart of a lease, and the parties do not agree in respect of the particulars which such lease or counterpart is to contain, the Court shall dismiss the suit, unless evidence in writing is produced which shall satisfy the Court that an agreement has been entered into between the parties in accordance with which such lease or counterpart ought to be delivered.]

117. The local inquiry described in section 372 of the Code of Civil Procedure may also, if he think fit, be made by the Collector in person or other officer presiding in the Court, and the provisions of the said Code regarding local inquiries shall apply to such inquiries made by such Collector or other officer.

In such cases the Collector or other officer as aforesaid, after completing the inquiry, shall record on the proceedings such observations as he thinks fit, and the observations so recorded shall be received as evidence in the suit.

As to Decree.

118. No process of execution shall be issued Time within which on a decree under this Act execution may be had. When the application for the issue of such process is made after the lapse of three years from the date of such decree, unless the decree be for a sum exceeding five hundred rupees, in which case the period within which execution may be had shall be regulated by the law in force as to the period allowed for the execution of decrees of the Civil Courts.

119. When a decree for money is made in any Immediate execution suit under this Act, the of decree Court may, on the oral application of the party in whose favour the decree is passed, direct immediate execution thereof in the manner described in section 256 of the Code of Civil Procedure.

120. When a decree in favour of the plaintiff Decree for enhance- is made in a suit for an en- ment to succeed from Improvement of rent, the which it is to take effect. Court shall declare the date from which such enhance- ment shall take effect.

121. If the decree be for the delivery of Enforcement of decrees—papers or records, it may ere for delivery of be enforced by the impris- ment or attachment of the party against whom the civil jail of the party in default is made, or by the attachment of his property, or by both imprisonment and attachment.

The imprisonment and attachment may be continued until he complies with the terms of the decree :

Provided that no person shall be imprisoned under this section for a longer period than six months.

122. A decree for the delivery of a patta or of Decree for delivery of the counterpart of a patta counterpart to specify shall specify all the parti- cipants. culars mentioned in section 7, and such the particular to be delivered with the provisions of this Act as to the Court seem fit.

123. If the decree be for the delivery of a Court after decree patta or the counterpart of may grant leave or a patta, and the party or- counterpart, in case of default to deliver such patta defendant's refusal. or counterpart neglects or refuses so to do, the Court may grant a patta or counterpart in conformity with the terms of the decree, and such patta or counterpart shall have the same effect as if delivered by the party against whom the decree was passed.

The Oudh Rent Bill.(Chapter X.—General.—Sections 124-129.)

124. If the decree be for money, no process of execution to be first in execution shall issue made against moveable against the immoveable property of the judgment-debtor, other than attachment of such property, unless satisfaction of the decree cannot be obtained against his moveable property.

125. If the decree be for an arrear of rent due in respect of an under-proprietary right in such right, the interest of the judgment-debtor in such right may, subject to the provisions of this Act, be sold in execution of the decree.

[Provided that no such sale shall be allowed unless it appear to the Deputy Commissioner that satisfaction of the decree cannot be made in the manner referred to in sections 243 and 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure.

If it appear to the Court that such satisfaction can be made, the Court may exercise the powers given to it by the said section 243, although no application has been made by the judgment-debtor.

The Deputy Commissioner may be appointed manager under the same section. When he has been so appointed, he may exercise, for the satisfaction of the decree against the judgment-debtor, all the powers which, under any law in force in Oudh, he might have exercised for the recovery of an arrear of revenue due by such judgment-debtor to the Government.]

126. No beneficial lease or other incumbrance created in hereafter created on his estate by any under-proprietor shall be valid, in the event of the sale of his rights and interests in execution of a decree for arrears of rent, unless such incumbrance has been registered, under any rules or law for the time being in force in Oudh, within four months after the creation thereof, and not less than thirty days before the date of attachment of such rights and interests.

127. When an under-proprietor creates any such incumbrance and fails to pay to the proprietor all or any part of the rent subsequently accruing in respect of the land subject to the incumbrance, the incumbrancer shall be liable to pay to the proprietor the whole or such part as aforesaid of the said rent, unless the proprietor has agreed in writing to waive any claim which he might otherwise have made on the incumbrancer under this section.

128. When land is sold in execution of a decree passed under this Act, and at execution sale the land or any lot thereof has been knocked down to a stranger, any co-sharer, other than the judgment-debtor, may, before sunset on the day of sale, claim to take the land or lot, as the case may be, at the sum at which it was knocked down.

If the land be an under-proprietary tenure, a like claim may also be made by the proprietor.

Any claim made under this section shall be allowed: Provided that, if a claim to the same land or lot be made by a proprietor as well as by a co-sharer, the claim of the co-sharer shall be preferred: Provided also that no claim shall be allowed unless the claimant fulfil all the conditions of the sale binding on a purchaser.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

THE object of this Bill, which has been prepared by the Government of the North-Western Provinces and Oudh, is to secure to tenants in Oudh some protection against arbitrary eviction from their holdings and enhancement of their rents, and to place on a clear footing their right to make improvements on their holdings and to receive compensation for improvements so made. Under the law as it stands they are absolutely unprotected against enhancement and eviction, provided that the landlord observes certain easy formalities in raising rents or in issuing his notices of ejectment. Every field in a tenant's holding can be shifted on the close of each agricultural year at the will of his landlord, and there is no limit to the rise of rents.

The Census Statistics show that the pressure of the population on the land in Oudh is very great, being 170 to the square mile, and the large number of notices of ejectment annually issued and their steady increase from 23,600 in 1876 to 90,200 in 1882 afford reason for believing that they are used as instruments for the undue enhancement of rent. Enquiry has shown that this belief is not unfounded, and that the effect of the existing law on a population dependent mainly on agriculture for its subsistence must lead at no distant date to the deterioration of agricultural industry and the impoverishment and degradation of the bulk of the people.

It is not proposed to introduce a system of heritable occupancy-right acquired by prescription, such as prevails in the North-Western Provinces, but to accept contract as the basis on which transactions between landlord and tenant are to be regulated. The tenant, however, who has no other means of subsistence open to him, is no match for the landlord in a thickly populated agricultural province, and with a view to place the parties on more equal terms the Bill imposes the following restrictions on free contract between them.

Sitting tenants may hold the land they at present occupy at the rent now paid from the date of the last change in their rent or in the area of the holdings.

The enhancement of rent permissible at the expiry of each statutory period is to be limited to $6\frac{1}{4}$ per cent, or one anna in the rupee, on the current rental; the sitting tenant to have the equity of renewal at rent within that limit.

At the end of that period it is proposed to allow the landlord to enhance the rent of the sitting tenant to such sum as he and the tenant may agree upon within a limit of one anna in the rupee, or $6\frac{1}{4}$ per cent., on the rent previously paid.

At any time after the expiration of the statutory period a landlord who has not made terms with the sitting tenant may proceed either by notice of enhancement or by notice of ejectment at his discretion. If he proceeds by notice of enhancement the enhancement must be within the limit above given. If the tenant accepts, a new period begins. If the tenant refuses the proposed enhancement, the holding will become vacant, but no higher rent can be recovered from the next tenant than $6\frac{1}{4}$ per cent. above the old rent on the same holding. If the landlord proceeds by ejectment, leaving the tenant no option of re-entry, compensation for disturbance will be given up to one year's rent at the rate last paid, and the limitation of $6\frac{1}{4}$ per cent. will apply to the rent recoverable from the next tenant. In both cases tenants will be entitled to receive before dispossession any compensation due to them for improvements. The right of renewal is to be personal to the tenant in occupancy. On the death of a tenant in occupancy his heir will be entitled to hold on, on the same terms, to the expiration of the statutory period enjoyable by his predecessor, but must then, should the landlord so wish, vacate the holding on payment of the compensation for improvements found to be due to him.

These provisions are experimental, and power is therefore given to the Local Government from time to time, within periods of not less than seven years in any district or part of a district, to vary the limit of enhancement. Although there has been a considerable rise of prices in the past fifteen years, the rise may not continue at the same rate, and in that case the limit of $6\frac{1}{4}$ per cent. might be unfair to the tenant. In other cases the limitation might conceivably operate to the prejudice of the landlord.

The condition in the taluqdār's sanad—that he will promote the agricultural prosperity of his estate—is so vaguely worded as to leave the Government and the taluqdār alike uncertain as to the grounds on which Government should interfere between him and his tenantry. To put the matter beyond doubt power is given to Government to step in when it is satisfied that an estate is suffering from grave mismanagement, which has since the present year materially deteriorated the condition of the tenantry or diminished the area of the cultivation. The exercise of this power is subject to the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, and the consequences of it are not the forfeiture of the estate, but an authoritative settlement of rents for ten years.

A similar power of settling rents was conferred in the Bengal Tenancy Act of 1885, the Local Government being authorized to interfere in the interests of public order or of the local welfare.

The detailed reasons for the alterations in the present Act necessary to carry out these proposals will be found in the annexed letter from the Local Government.

No. ¹⁷⁷₂₀₈₋₁₁ R. OF 1886.

From

J. WOODBURN, Esq., SECRETARY TO GOVT, N.-W. P. AND OUDH,

IN THE OUDH REVENUE DEPARTMENT,

To

THE SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA,

REVENUE AND AGRICULTURAL DEPARTMENT.

Dated Allahabad, the 15th January, 1886.

IN compliance with the request conveyed in your letter No. ⁸²²₁₃₋₅ (Revenue), dated the 9th ultimo, I am directed to submit a draft Bill to amend the Oudh Rent Law.

2. The general principles on which the Lieutenant-Governor and Chief Commissioner proposes to amend the Rent Law in Oudh are fully detailed and explained in the letters of this Government, No. 3939 of the 21st December, 1883, and No. 723 of the 12th May, 1884. In this letter submitting the draft Bill it seems sufficient to explain the reasons which have led to the various minor alterations of the present Rent Act.

3. The Bill takes the form of a revised edition of the existing Act. It is very probable that in phraseology and arrangement Act XIX of 1868 might be greatly improved; but it is only in Chapters IV and V that any material change is needed to give effect to the several proposals which have been made by the Lieutenant-Governor. And since the Act is well understood by and familiar to the Rent Courts and the people, it appears advisable to make no more alterations of it than are necessary to a clear and correct statement of the principles which are hereafter to govern the relations of landlord and tenant. But the opportunity has been taken to remove any difficulties that have been found by the Courts in interpreting certain other parts of the existing law. Additions to existing sections of the Act and all new sections are printed in italics; and any portions of existing sections which it is proposed to omit have been printed marginally in brackets.

4. I am now to proceed to a specific statement of the alterations made in the Act.

5. Section 2 repeals Act XIX of 1868, but maintains such notifications and rules made under it as are consistent with the new Act.

6. In section 3 a clause has been added to the definition of "rent," to make it quite clear that the word covers the rent of an under-proprietor who may not be personally in the use or occupation of the land in his tenure. A clause has been added to the definition of "tenant," to show what portions of the Act are applicable to a thikadár. A collector of rents should acquire none of the statutory privileges of a cultivating tenant, but is a tenant of the lessor for many purposes. A definition of "prescribed" has been inserted, which is taken from the Bengal Tenancy Act, 1885.

7. Section 4 is substituted for the corresponding section of the present Act. It is necessary to provide that no contract before or after the passing of the Act shall deprive a tenant of that protection against enhancement and ejectment which it is the special object of the new law to give. The Lieutenant-Governor has decided, after careful consideration of the point, not to recommend that the new law shall be so framed as to prohibit the execution of any special agreement which shall give a tenant a longer occupancy than the statutory period of seven years; but it is essential that agreements for any shorter term shall be barred, and I am to ask that this point may receive particular attention when the draft is examined. The proposal is that the occupation of a holding may be settled between landlord and tenant for a longer period than seven years by agreement, but that no contract shall defeat the statutory limit of enhancement. He is unwilling to interfere more than is absolutely necessary with any existing contracts; and where the terms of any pottas at present in force exclude the tenant from making improvements or claiming compensation for such as he may have already made, he would not set the contract aside. So far as the Lieutenant-Governor's information goes, the number of such contracts is not great, while in many such cases it may be presumed that the improvements will have been made upon special terms and conditions.

8. As regards clearing leases the Lieutenant-Governor is of opinion that they must be left to be arranged by landlord and tenant without interference by the State. The conditions under which they are taken vary considerably in different parts of the country, and are in fact effectively controlled by local circumstances and local custom. A proviso has accordingly been added to this section, the terms of which have been taken from the first proviso to section 178 of the Bengal Tenancy Act.

9. Section 5 (A), empowering a landlord to confer occupancy-rights, has been inserted in accordance with the wish of His Excellency the Governor General in Council, as conveyed in paragraph 15 of your letter No. 252R., dated 12th April, 1884.

10. In section 7 of the present Act the word "lease" is used for the written memorandum of the terms of a tenant's holding. It is scarcely applicable to the record of the terms of a holding conferred by Statute, and the Lieutenant-Governor would prefer to use the word "patta." It is again inconsistent with a statutory tenure that the record of it should contain any conditions except those imposed by the Statute, and the clause of the present section 7, authorising the entry in the patta of any special conditions of the lease, should be omitted.

11. Section 11 of the present Act authorises the cancellation of a lease by decree. It seems desirable that the whole of the provisions in regard to the determination of tenancies should be placed together, and this section, with the material alterations which will be subsequently explained, has been transferred to the chapter on ejectments as 43(A).

12. Section 20 of the Rent Act contains the provincial rule regarding the remission of rent, where it is proved to the Rent Court that from unforeseen calamity the tenant is unable to pay the entire demand. A proviso is attached to the section, which prevents a tenant with a five years' lease from claiming the benefit of this section. If this proviso were retained under the amended Act, which is to give all tenants a statutory occupancy for seven years, the effect would be to nullify the section altogether. The question is, therefore, whether the entire section should be struck out, whereby the Courts would lose their power of making allowances in rent-decrees for inevitable calamities, or whether the section shall stand without its proviso, whereby remissions of rent would cease to be in any case dependent on remissions of revenue. The latter course appears to the Lieutenant-Governor to be on the whole likely to be better for the interests of both landlord and tenant. If, as the Lieutenant-Governor believes, it is not expedient to withdraw from the Courts all power to take account of serious calamities in decreeing arrears of rent, in that case to provide that this power shall only be used when revenue has been remitted is to shackle it with an awkward and hardly logical condition. The corresponding provisions of the rent law in the North-Western Provinces are contained in section 23 of Act XII of 1881 and the rules which have been prepared under it. When the crops have been injured by hail or drought in a village of the North-Western Provinces, the Collector has to apply for a remission of revenue before he can move in the matter of rents; and when that is obtained he enforces a remission of rents, equivalent to double the remission of revenue, by a process which is not always very well adjusted or duly proportioned. There is by law no similar rule in Oudh. Neither in the Revenue nor in the Rent Acts is any authority given to the Deputy Commissioner to carry on, distribute and enforce among the rents of the tenantry the remission which has been made in the landlord's revenue. It is true that under circular orders, issued administratively (of which an extract is given in the footnote), Deputy Commissioners have insisted on remissions of rent as a consequence of remissions of revenue; and the Lieutenant-Governor is not prepared at once to cancel those instructions. Nevertheless, when it comes to framing legal provisions, he would prefer to leave, at any rate experimentally, the adjustment of rent abatements between landlord and tenant as much as possible to the parties concerned, subject only to a Judge's discretion in extraordinary cases. The fact of the revenue remission is perfectly well known, and any tenant who is pressed to pay upon crops that have been seriously damaged has only to demand to the demand and let his claim to relaxation of the rent be considered by the Rent Court. So long as a tenant was liable to summary and arbitrary ejectment, undue pressure for the payment of rent could no doubt be made; but now that all tenants will be protected in the occupation of their holdings, the Lieutenant-Governor considers that with an appeal to the Rent Court, such as is given by section 20, they may be left to make their own arrangements with their landlords on such occasions as those contemplated by the section.

13. The proviso in section 20 is to some extent based on a distrust of the Courts, since they might exercise the power without sufficient cause, and hamper the landlord by remissions of rent for which he has received no compensating remission of revenue. The landlord, however, has always the remedy of appeal from a decree which he considers unfair, and if the case can be supposed possible of calamity so considerable as to justify large remissions of rent by the Court, although no previous remission of revenue had been given, no Deputy Commissioner would refuse to recommend a corresponding remission of revenue. There is again the risk that the Courts might force remissions of revenue by giving remissions of rent; but it must be assumed that the Courts will proceed with due care and upon sufficient evidence in remitting rents, while in Oudh they are likely always to keep in view the effect of their decrees upon the revenue. Moreover, a landlord is certain to contest any unfair reduction of his rent-demand; for a remission of revenue is never sufficient to compensate him, and his appeal is to the Commissioner or Deputy Commissioner, who is directly concerned with the collection of revenue. The Lieutenant-Governor recommends,

Any landlord who receives a remission of government revenue will be bound, in proportion to the extent of the remission, not to take, either through himself or through a lessee, and to restore if he has so taken, rent for the crop on account of which the remission is granted.—(From Circular Orders of 7th January, 1873.)

therefore, that the section be maintained with the omission of the proviso. The draft proposes to insert "materially" before "diminished", to indicate to the Courts that remission is not to be given for any but considerable loss.

14. Sections 35 and 36 of the present Act will be entirely superseded, and the reference to them in section 20 may be excised.

15. In section 21 (relinquishment of the holding) the last clause of the first sentence may be omitted. The Lieutenant-Governor wishes to make a distinction between relinquishment and abandonment. If tenants are to have considerable fixity of tenure, it is right that the landlord should have fair notice of relinquishment of holding, that he may make suitable arrangements for a new tenant. The date for notice of relinquishment has accordingly been antedated to the 15th of March, and at this time lease to another tenant can hardly have been given. It has been prescribed that the notice shall be in writing.

16. A section has been drafted in regard to abandonment [21 (B)], adopted from section 87 of the Bengal Tenancy Act.

17. In the sections on compensation for tenants' improvements considerable changes have been made. Section 22 of the present Act directs that the tenant shall be entitled to compensation for improvements whenever his rent is enhanced. This provision has, so far as the Lieutenant-Governor can ascertain, remained a dead letter. Under a system by which the adjustment of rent between landlord and tenant was left entirely to private contract, any enhancement of rent, so long as the tenant chose to stay, probably took into consideration the tenant's expenditure on the improvement of his holding. For the future at least no such provision is needed. The enhancement at the close of a statutory period of tenancy is a statutory enhancement, and will have effect whether or not the tenant has in the course of his expiring period of tenancy effected an improvement which has added to its value. The clauses in section 21, providing for compensation on enhancement, may therefore be left out.

18. The principle on which compensation is calculated under the present Act is solely that of the outlay of the tenant. The last sentence of the section bars right to compensation for improvements which were made more than thirty years before the date of claim, and in practice the procedure of the Courts is to make an estimate of the probable outlay, assume that the improvement will last for thirty years, and award to the tenant the sum which in that proportion represents its unexpired value. Thus, if a well is believed to have cost Rs. 300 ten years ago, the Court will award to the tenant Rs. 200. The principle is by no means a just one, for the landlord is exposed to great exaggerations by the tenant of his original outlay, and where the improvements are of old standing these statements are difficult to check. The Lieutenant-Governor considers that the principles laid down in section 83 of the Bengal Tenancy Act are not only in themselves more fair, but more simply and readily applied by the Courts, for it is seldom difficult in any village to ascertain the difference in letting value due to irrigation, and a well is the most common of all improvements in Oudh. A section has been accordingly introduced from the Bengal Act, section 25(A), and the references to outlay and the period of construction omitted from section 22.

19. It is the recognised custom of the province that a tenant cannot make an improvement of a permanent character without the consent of the landlord. So long as the tenant held on a yearly tenancy at the will of the landlord, this consent was obtained on terms which were sometimes very harsh. I am to refer, for example, to paragraph 17 of Colonel Friskine's report of the 1st June, 1885, page 277 of the second volume of papers on the condition of the Tenantry in Oudh. Now that the ordinary tenancy is for seven years, it is necessary for the agricultural progress of the country that the landlord's consent to improvements shall not be unreasonably withheld. It has accordingly been proposed in the Bill that the tenant shall have the right of applying to the Deputy Commissioner should the landlord refuse his consent, and that the Deputy Commissioner, after hearing the landlord's objections, shall pass such orders as may be fair and equitable.

20. On the other hand, it is right, when enhancement is otherwise carefully restricted, that arrangement should be made for the assessment of a fair enhancement on holdings the produce of which has been increased by a landlord's improvement, and sections 26 and 36 (K) of the Bill have been drafted for the assistance of landlords in this matter.

21. Section 25 of the present Act is believed to have been of very little, if any, value. It has, however, been retained in section 25 (A) of the Bill in a shorter form, taken from the second clause of section 83 of the Bengal Tenancy Act.

22. Chapter III of the Oudh Act refers to commutation and payment of rents in kind. The Lieutenant-Governor proposes to omit the last two clauses of section 28 and the whole of section 29. The commutation of grain-rents is an exceedingly delicate and difficult business, while the prevailing opinion as to the advantages and disadvantages of commutation is apt to vary greatly, the authorities leaning sometimes on one side, sometimes on the other. It can hardly ever be expedient that the Government shall interpose, during the currency of a settlement, to determine officially a question of this nature, which is essentially connected with local circumstances and conditions of agriculture that are best adjusted by mutual consent; and, since, in fact, the authoritative commutation of rents is hardly known in Oudh, the Lieutenant-Governor would prefer to leave it, by law, to private arrangement between landlord and tenant, except when a settlement of revenue is in progress. The transition from rents in kind to cash-rents is gradually spreading with the improvement of agriculture, and the process should be left to its natural and spontaneous course.

23. Chapter IV of the Act deals with the enhancement and settlement of rent. So far as it concerns the rent of tenants with a right of occupancy, they are left untouched. In the two sections, 35 and 36, of the Act are contained the whole of the provisions of the present law in regard to the rent of other tenants. To introduce the scheme sketched in paragraph 69 of my letter of 21st December, 1883, the sections numbered 35 to 36 (A) have been substituted for them in the Bill. They give every tenant a statutory right to occupy his holding for seven years, with a new period beginning from every change in rent or area by the landlord, and at the end of every period of tenancy they give him the preferential claim to continue in his holding at a rent that cannot be more than 6½ per cent. in excess of the previous rent, or, if he be ejected, to be paid compensation for disturbance. In short, the landlord cannot disturb the tenant for seven years, and if after that period he desires to eject he must pay compensation. In no case can enhancement of rent, whether upon the sitting tenant or his successor, exceed ½ per cent. of the old rent, but if the sitting tenant will not agree to an enhancement thus limited he must quit without compensation. The new sections also provide that enhancement shall be by notice, they prescribe a procedure for contesting the notice, and detail the liabilities of the tenant, when he retains or vacates the holding, with or without objection to the notice (clauses 1, 2, and 4, paragraph 69, above quoted). The rights of a tenant are, however, to be personal, and provision has been made in sections 36 (1) and 37 (1) that the heir of a tenant who dies shall retain the holding only till the expiry of the statutory term current at the time of his death, and, subject to any claim by the heir to compensation for improvements, the landlord is left free to let the holding to any person at any rent which may be arranged (clause 5, paragraph 69). The new tenant under section 36 (A) then acquires statutory rights similar to those enjoyed by his predecessors.

24. In section 36 (A) power has been taken by the Local Government to vary the limit of enhancement at stated intervals (clause 2, paragraph 69).

25. In Chapter V of the Act are the provisions for ejectment and the determination of tenancies. In this there has again been much addition and, for the sake of clearness, some rearrangement of the sections.

26. Section 37 of the Bill reproduces section 41 of the Act unchanged, and states that a tenant with a right of occupancy, and in certain circumstances may be evicted only by a decree for ejectment. Among these tenants is included, by the present Act, a tenant under a special agreement. A tenant evicted by decree is not entitled to the compensation for disturbance given to the statutory tenant of the Bill. The Lieutenant Governor is of opinion that the section should continue to cover the case of a tenant under special agreement.

27. Section 38 of the Bill is with some alteration section 12 of the Act. It covers the case of all other tenants, and permits their eviction either by a decree for ejectment under section 13 (A) of the Bill, or by an application where decreed arrears of rent remain unpaid, or by the notice of ejectment prescribed by the present Act. The application for ejectment for arrears has been taken from section 35 of the North Western Provinces Rent Act (XII) of 1881, and is a simpler procedure, which the improved position of the tenant justifies, than the application in execution of decree allowed by the present Act.

28. If the landlord proceeds by notice he is required by section 38 (A) of the Bill to deposit the compensation for disturbance, which was part of the scheme of the letter of December, 1883 (paragraph 69, clause 1).

29. In section 39 of the Bill (43 of the Act), which describes the details to be given in the notice, the only important change is that the time of service is put much earlier in the year (15th of November instead of 15th April). Tenancies will now be of seven years' duration, and it is very desirable that notice should be given in sufficient time to admit of all claims on the ground of improvement or other objections being fully sifted and decided before the expiry of the year.

30. Section 40 of the Bill (section 37 of the Act) then details the grounds on which the notice of ejectment may be contested. To the grounds given in the Act have to be added those which the new provision in the Bill requires. The notice may have been issued before the seven years of the statutory tenancy have expired, or the compensation for disturbance may have been deposited only in part or not at all. In sections 39 (A) and 39 (B) of the Bill the tenant is required, if he has any claim to compensation for improvements, to give a specific statement of his claim, and the Court is to determine it before it allows eviction. From the ambiguous language of the Act there have been contradictory rulings in the Rent Courts of Oudh as to the liability of the tenant to eviction before receipt of compensation due to him for improvements. It was clearly the intention of section 22 that he should be compensated before he was removed, and this is definitely expressed in the Bill.

31. Sections 41 and 42 of the Bill represent sections 44 and 45 of the Act with such alterations as the provisions of the preceding sections or experience in the working of the present Act require. In section 42 of the Bill a clause has been inserted, which was much wanted, enabling the Court to give assistance to the landlord, when needed, to evict a tenant who has contested a notice unsuccessfully. These sections contain the only provisions by which a landlord can remove a tenant of bad character, and no tenant is so likely to resist any action by the landlord himself. If assistance may be properly asked when the tenant has not contested the notice at all, it is more needed when the notice has been contested without valid ground of objection. The section in its present form follows the provision of section 40 of the North-Western Provinces Rent Act.

32. Section 43 of the Bill has been taken, as already explained, from the Rent Act of the North-Western Provinces.

33. Section 43(A) is the provision which the Lieutenant-Governor would substitute for section 11 of the Act, in regard to the terms on which a tenancy may be determined by a decree for ejectment. Section 11 bases it on a failure to perform or observe any of the stipulations of the lease or patta; but the patta of a statutory tenant will not contain any special stipulations, and when such a tenant defaults in his rent the landlord's process will be under section 13 of the Bill.

Even a statutory tenant, however, should be liable to ejectment if he uses his holding in a manner which renders it unfit for the purposes of his tenancy, and provision to that effect, taken from section 14 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, has been introduced in section 43(A) of the Bill. Moreover, many statutory tenants will hold on gram-rents; and as the amount of the landlord's receipts depends on the area the tenant cultivates, the landlord should be ensured against serious damage by the tenant's deliberate neglect to cultivate. In paragraph 77 of my letter of December, 1883, it was recommended that local custom should be left to decide what extent of failure in cultivation should be followed by forfeiture of the holding. This is the object of the second clause in section 43(A) of the Bill.

Tenants, however, "having a right of occupancy, or holding under an unexpired lease, or special agreement or decree of Court," are protected by section 41 of the Act. 37 of the Bill from eviction, except in execution of a decree for ejectment. The section specifies that a decree for ejectment against a tenant with a right of occupancy shall not be made unless at the date of the decree a decree against him for an arrear of rent has remained for fifteen days unsatisfied; but no definite explanation is given of the conditions under which ejectment may be made of the other classes of tenants specified in the section, whether for failure in stipulations in the unexpired lease or special agreement, cessation of the effect of the decree of Court, or other ground for eviction. The Lieutenant-Governor presumes that it has been hitherto left to be decided under the general law whether the grounds for eviction in any such case are or are not sufficient, and that it is unnecessary to give any precise specification. This is, however, a matter on which the Legislative Department will advise.

34. In sections 44 and 45 of the Bill, corresponding to sections 38 and 39 of the Act, the period of the year at which ejectment may take place. A sub-lessee is subjected to a special penalty in section 38(A) of the Bill, and there seems no reason for excepting him from the general rule that ejectment shall take place at the close of the agricultural year. As a statutory tenant he could only then be ejected, and for the same reason the last clause of section 38 of the Act should be omitted.

35. In section 39 of the Act the word thikadár has been substituted for sub-lessee.

36. Section 40 of the Act has been practically absorbed in section 43 of the Bill.

37. To this chapter of the Act two sections have been added in regard to sir lands. The Lieutenant-Governor accepts the opinion that in the home-farms of the landlords no statutory rights should be recognised in the tenants who may from time to time be admitted to cultivate in them. The principle is recognised in the Tenancy Acts of the North-Western Provinces and Bengal. Whenever, however, statutory rights are recognised outside the private lands of the zamindár, it becomes necessary to define what these private lands are. Hitherto there has been in Oudh no special reason for entering as sir in the rent-rolls land which is not sir, for the change of law now proposed, which is to restrict the arbitrary powers of landlords over all holdings that are outside sir, has not been anticipated, and the revision of assessment is still sufficiently distant to make it more convenient for the collection of rent that land let to tenants should be so recorded. From all that has been reported the village rent-rolls are in this respect, as indeed in most others, very fairly correct; and the Lieutenant-Governor is disposed, therefore, to make a less exacting definition of sir than that in force in the North-Western Provinces. The definition of sir which is given in section 46(A) of the Bill is for these reasons less stringent in several particulars than that which is laid down in section 1 of the North-Western Provinces Rent Act. It has been proposed on some authority to adjust this definition on the principle of allowing land to fall into sir and as not to fall back into ordinary tenancy land by fixing certain periods after which continuing cultivation by the landlord or by a tenant should determine the character of the cultivating occupancy. The rule of the North-Western Provinces is to fix a long period of continuous cultivation by the landlord, and then to make the lands so cultivated a permanent addition to his original sir, whether he continues to cultivate or lets to a tenant. The Bengal Act prevents any accession to the present sir unless it is recognised by village custom.

The Lieutenant-Governor would have been glad, nevertheless, to admit a proposal which is quite in keeping with the fluctuations of all agricultural enterprise, and the developments and depressions which circumstances frequently induce in agricultural families. No adjustment, however, has been discovered to regulate the recognition of lands as sir and their restoration to the normal conditions of tenancy which the landlord will not be able so to manipulate as to exclude from the statutory provisions an area of cultivated land considerably larger than that which he for the time being occupies. For the purposes of the landlord's cultivation, moreover, there is no restriction on its development. When a tenant's holding falls in by his death, it is open to the landlord to occupy it himself instead of letting it to another tenant. Whether, therefore, it is called sir or not will merely operate in determining whether the landlord can subsequently let it without initiating the usual statutory privileges in his tenant. After mature consideration the Lieutenant-Governor is of opinion that sir to the extent of all present requirements is provided by the definition as it stands in the Bill, that this may, as in the North-Western Provinces and Bengal, be permanently excluded from the operation of the sections which regulate the ordinary holdings of tenants, but that for the future no provision should be made by the law to enable a landlord, by private cultivation for any definite period, to remove permanently any lands from the general operation of those sections.

38. The section 43 (B) of the Bill has been added to meet the case of lessees and mortgagees who during their management have brought lands under their personal cultivation. These are lands which, on the expiry of the lease or redemption of the mortgage, are paying no rent; and unless some express provision is made, the lessee or mortgagee would apparently have not only the statutory rights of a tenant, but be entitled to sit rent-free.

39. In Chapter VI (Distress for Arrears of Rent) the Lieutenant-Governor proposes no change.

40. In Chapter VII (Jurisdiction of the Courts) the change are few.

41. In the preamble of section 53 a small change has been made in the terms of section 93 of the North-Western Provinces Rent Act, excluding definitely the jurisdiction of all Courts other than Courts of Revenue in the classes of cases specified.

In clause 3 it seems unnecessary to limit a suit for enhancement to the case of an occupancy-tenant. A lessee in whose lands there may be large alluvion may be liable to a suit for enhancement.

The last part of clause 4 is unnecessary for reasons stated in an earlier part of this letter.

In clause 9 an addition is necessary from the terms of section 26 of the Bill.

In clause 10 an addition is required by section 24 (A) of the Bill.

42. In section 91 an addition is proposed authorising the Local Government to invest any officer of the grade of a Deputy Collector with the powers of a Deputy Commissioner to hear applications by a tenant under section 24 to make improvements, or of a landlord under section 43 to eject a tenant for arrears of rent.

43. Section 102 of the Act gives summary powers to Deputy Collectors to restore possession which has been illegally disturbed. From orders under this section there is no appeal. Against this section there has been much complaint, and now that the position of the tenant will be comparatively secure it is preferable that the restoration should be by ordinary suit, subject to the usual appeal. For this section of the Act has been substituted a provision enabling the landlord to recover a fair rent for land which has been occupied without his permission. The absence of any such provision has been for many years a frequent cause of notice of ejectment. The only course open to the landlord hitherto, when a tenant has added surreptitiously to his holding, has been to eject him, or to attack him by the cumbersome process of a suit in the Civil Court for damages. If the land happened to be unlet in the previous year, the provisions of sections 35 and 36 of the Act prevent the landlord from recovering any rent in the Rent Court.

44. Section 112 of the Act requires that in all suits under the Act the summons to the defendant shall be for the final disposal of the suit. The suit is in many cases intricate, and will hereafter involve and concern tenancies of a longer and more valuable character. It is proposed to limit this provision to specified classes of suits.

45. Section 116 of the Act is no longer consistent with the general provisions of the Bill, and should be omitted.

46. Section 125 of the Act provides that sale of an under-proprietary tenure shall not be made if satisfaction of the decree can be made by management of the tenure under sections 243 and 244 of the Civil Procedure Code of 1859 (or the corresponding sections of the Code of 1882). Management of under-proprietary tenures by the Deputy Commissioner has for some time, however, been recognized as practically impossible. They are generally small; as they come under the Deputy Commissioner's charge, they are usually scattered; and official management can be neither efficient nor economical. If the under-proprietor can give the Deputy Commissioner any anticipation that a private adjustment of the judgment-debt can be effected by mortgage or otherwise, time can always be given under section 305 of the Code of 1882, and the Lieutenant-Governor's opinion on the whole is that all of the section, except the first sentence, may be without disadvantage omitted.

47. In a concluding chapter (X) of the Bill are entered four new sections.

48. Section 129 reserves to the Local Government authority under the sanction of the Governor General in Council to appoint an officer for the revision of rents in an estate in which from grave mismanagement the condition of the tenantry has been materially deteriorated or the area of the cultivation diminished. This formed the seventh clause of the scheme in paragraph 69 of the letter of 21st December, 1883, and the reasons for the provision have been there sufficiently explained.

49. Under the present registration law all pattas for seven years, for however small a sum, must be registered. The inconvenience of an enforced registration throughout the country would be very serious; and as the pattas of all tenants will be checked by the supervisor-kanúngos, registration seems to be unnecessary. The object of registration is practically effected by his verification, and personation will be difficult when the verification is made in the course of his village rounds. It is proposed, therefore, in section 130, to exempt pattas for the statutory period of seven years from the Registration Act.

50. In section 131 reference is made to a schedule, in which will be entered certain tracts which the Lieutenant-Governor proposes to exclude from the general rule of a statutory right to a seven years' holding. It has been explained in paragraph 78 of the letter of December, 1883, that in part of the northern and submontane districts the rent customs are exceptional, the area in cultivation varies with the season, and the rent is separately settled at each harvest. With these circumstances the general proposals of the Bill will not fit in; but in these tracts the population is sparse, and the tenants can command their own terms. A detail of the areas to be scheduled will be forwarded subsequently.

51. In the last section (132) of the Bill power is taken to the Local Government to make any rules necessary under the Act and consistent with it. The terms of the section have been taken from the last clause of section 211 of the North-Western Provinces Rent Act.

The following Bill was introduced into the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 9th June, 1886, and was referred to a Select Committee —

NO. 8 OF 1886.

A Bill to alter the constitution of the body corporate known as the Trustees of the Indian Museum, and to confer certain additional powers on that body.

WHEREAS it is expedient to alter the constitution of the body corporate known as the Trustees of the Indian Museum, and to amend the law relating to the powers of the said Trustee; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

1. (1) This Act may be called the Indian Museum Act, 1886; and

(2) It shall come into force at once.

2. Sections 3, 4 and 5 of the Indian Museum Act, 1876, are repealed.

3 For those sections the following shall be substituted, namely:—

3. The Trustees of the said Indian Museum shall be—

- (a) the person for the time being holding the office of Accountant General of Bengal;
- (b) five other persons to be appointed by the Governor General in Council;
- (c) five other persons to be appointed by the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal;
- (d) five other persons to be appointed by the Council of the Asiatic Society of Bengal; and
- (e) five other persons to be appointed by the Trustees;

and the said Trustees shall be a body corporate, by the name of the Trustees of the Indian Museum, and shall have perpetual succession and a common seal.

4. All the powers of the said body corporate may be exercised so long as there are nine members thereof.

5. If a trustee appointed under section 3 dies, or is absent from India for more than twelve consecutive months, or desires to be discharged, or refuses or becomes incapable to act, or becomes Accountant General of Bengal, then the authority which appointed the trustee may appoint a new trustee in his place."

4. (1) For the purposes of the Indian Museum Act, 1876, as amended by XXII of 1886, the persons holding office as Trustees under this Act—

(a) the persons nominated by the Governor General in Council under the Indian Museum Act, 1876, and now holding office as Trustees, shall be deemed to be persons appointed by the Governor General in Council under section 3 of that Act as amended by this Act;

(b) the President of the Asiatic Society of Bengal, and the other members of the Council of that Society nominated by that Council under the Indian Museum Act, 1876, and now holding office as Trustees, shall be deemed to be persons appointed by the Council of the Asiatic Society of Bengal under the said section; and

(c) the persons elected and appointed by the Trustees under the said Act, and now holding office as Trustees, shall be deemed to have been appointed by the Trustees under the said section.

(2) The Secretary to the Government of India and the Superintendent of the Geological Survey of India shall cease to be ex officio members of the said body corporate.

5. Notwithstanding anything in the Indian Museum Act, 1876, the Trustees of the Indian Museum shall have power to keep collections not belonging to them.

XXII of 187

(a) the Trustees of the Indian Museum, if they think fit, may, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, and subject in each case to such conditions as he may approve and to such rules as he may from time to time prescribe, assume the custody and administration of collections which are not the property of the Trustees for the purposes of their trusts in that Act mentioned, and keep and preserve the collections either in the Indian Museum or elsewhere; and

(b) in the event of the trust constituted by that Act being determined, collections on which the Trustees have assumed the custody and administration under the foregoing part of this section shall not, by reason of their then being in the Indian Museum, become the property of the Government of India.

And whereas it is provided in the Indian Museum Act, 1876, that the Trustees of the Indian Museum shall have the exclusive possession, occupation and control, for the purposes of their trusts in that

Act mentioned, of the whole of the building called the Indian Museum, except certain portions thereof set apart for other purposes; and whereas the Trustees are by virtue of that provision in possession of the property described in the schedule to this Act; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

6. The Trustees may, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, and subject to such conditions as he may approve, deliver possession of that property to such person as the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal may appoint in that behalf.

THE SCHEDULE.

Land bounded on the north by a straight line drawn between the east and the west boundaries parallel to the main south wall of the Museum at a distance of twenty-five feet from the said wall, on the west and south-west by the Chowringhee Road and the walls of the premises known as No. 29 Chowringhee Road, on the south by Kyd Street, and on the east by the walls of the premises known as No. 15 Kyd Street and No. 4 Chowringhee Lane, measuring in all four acres, three rods and sixteen perches, together with all buildings, roads and tanks existing or erected thereon, and all easements appertaining thereto.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

THE object of this Bill is to give effect to an arrangement, made with the approval of the Government of India, whereby—

- (a) the Bengal Government is to be represented among the Trustees of the Indian Museum;
- (b) the Bengal Government is to entrust the Trustees with the custody and administration of the economic, ethnological, Indian Art-ware and Fine Art collections belonging to that Government; and
- (c) the Trustees, in consideration of the provision by the Bengal Government of additional accommodation required by them, are to surrender certain land adjacent to the Museum on which that Government may build a School of Art and Art Gallery.

Sections 3 and 4 provide for the representation of the Bengal Government among the Trustees, and sections 5 and 6 empower the Trustees to assume the custody of the collections belonging to the Bengal Government, and to make over to that Government the land on which the School of Art and Art Gallery are to be built.

A Bill to amend the law relating to Imprisonment for Debt.

WHEREAS it is expedient to amend the law relating to imprisonment for debt; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

1. This Act may be called the Debtors Act, 1886; and it shall come into force on the first day of January, 1888.
Short title and commencement.
2. (1) This Act shall extend, in the first instance, only to the territories administered by the Lieutenant-Governor of the North-Western Provinces and Chief Commissioner of Oudh.
Extent.

(2) But any other Local Government, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, may, by notification in the official Gazette, extend this Act, with effect on and from a day not less remote than one year from the date of the notification, to the whole or any specified part of the territories under its administration or to any class of debtors within the whole or any specified part of those territories.

3. In this Act the expression "Revenue Court"

Definition. means a Court having jurisdiction in suits for the rent, revenue or profits of land.

4. Notwithstanding anything in the Code

Enforcement of decree or order for money by imprisonment permissible in excepted cases only. of Civil Procedure or any other enactment, a person shall not be liable to arrest or imprisonment for default in compliance with a decree or order of a Civil or Revenue Court for payment of money except in the following cases:—

(a) where the order is for payment of a fine;

(b) where the defaulter is a trustee or person acting in a fiduciary capacity, and the decree or order requires him, as such, to pay any money which is in his possession or under his control, or any money for which he is accountable and of which he has not discharged himself;

(c) where the Court is satisfied that, since incurring the liability in respect of which the decree or order was made, the defaulter has fraudulently transferred, concealed or removed any part of his property, or committed any other act of bad faith in relation thereto, with the object or effect of impeding the enforcement of the decree or order by the attachment and sale of his property;

(d) where the Court is satisfied that the defaulter either has, or has had since the date of the decree or order, the means to pay the money, and has refused or without reasonable cause neglected, or refuses or neglects, to pay the same.

5. In any case coming within the exception specified in clause (b) of section 4 the Court may, after inquiry into the case, grant or refuse, either absolutely or on terms, any application for the arrest or imprisonment of the defaulter, or for his release from arrest or discharge from imprisonment.

6. (1) The High Court, with respect to Courts subordinate to it, and the Chief Controlling Revenue-authority, with respect to Courts subordinate to it, may, with the approval of the Local Government and the sanction of the Governor General in Council, make rules for regulating the procedure to be observed in inquiries for determining whether the case of a defaulter for whose arrest or imprisonment application has been made is a case coming within the exceptions specified in clauses (c) and (d) of section 4, or within either of those exceptions.

(2) Rules may be made under this section—

(a) for the territories administered by the Lieutenant-Governor of the North-Western Provinces and Chief Commissioner of Oudh, at any time after the passing of this Act, and

(b) for territories under the administration of any other Local Government, at any time after the publication of the notification extending this Act to those territories or to any class of districts therein;

but rules so made shall not take effect until the Act comes into force in the territories for which they have been made.

(3) An authority making rules under this section shall, before making the rules, publish a list of the proposed rules in such manner as the Governor General in Council, by notification in the Gazette of India, prescribes.

(4) There shall be published with the draft a notice specifying a date at or after which the draft will be taken into consideration.

(5) The authority making the rules shall receive and consider any objection or suggestion which may be made by any person with respect to the draft before the date so specified.

(6) A rule made under this section shall not take effect until it has been published in the local official Gazette.

(7) The publication in that Gazette of a rule purporting to be made under this section shall be conclusive proof that it has been duly made.

7. The operation of the enactment under which the defaulter is liable to arrest or imprisonment in any case coming within the exceptions specified in clauses (c), (e) and (f) of section 4, or within any of those exceptions, or is entitled to release from the arrest or discharge from the imprisonment, shall be subject to the following provisions, namely:—

(a) the defaulter may be imprisoned for such term, not exceeding six months, as the Court directs;

(b) no allowance for the subsistence of the defaulter, or for supplying him with clothing or bedding, shall be payable by the person on whose application the order for the imprisonment of the defaulter is made;

(c) during the term of his imprisonment the defaulter shall be maintained at the expense of the Government, and be subject, as nearly as circumstances admit, to the discipline prescribed in the case of a criminal prisoner undergoing simple imprisonment;

(d) notwithstanding the payment of the money in respect of which the decree or order was made, or any arrangement for the payment thereof or proof of present inability to pay it, or any expression of intention to apply for a declaration of insolvency, or any declaration of insolvency, or any request by the person on whose application the order for the arrest or imprisonment was made, the defaulter shall not be released from arrest, or, if he is in prison and the term of his imprisonment is not fulfilled, be discharged from prison, without the order of the Court;

(e) an appeal from the order for the imprisonment of the defaulter, and from an order refusing his release or discharge under clause (d) of this section, shall lie—

(i) if the Court making the order is a Civil Court subordinate for the purposes of the Code of Civil Procedure to the District Court, then to the District Court,

(ii) if the Court making the order is any other Civil Court, then to the High Court, and

(iii) if the Court making the order is a Revenue Court, then to the authority to which appeals lie from orders of the Court relating to the execution of decrees, or, where those orders of the Court are final, to such authority as the Local Government may, by notification in the official Gazette, appoint in this behalf; and the order passed on the appeal shall be final.

8. Where the Court is of opinion that the Commitment of fraudulent defaulter has been guilty of any offence under the Code of Criminal Procedure or under any enactment for the time being in force for the punishment of fraudulent debtors, it may, if it thinks fit, instead of ordering his imprisonment under this Act, send him to a Magistrate to be dealt with according to law.

9. Notwithstanding anything in Chapter XXXIV of the Code of Civil Procedure, or any other enactment, a defendant in a suit for money only who has been arrested before judgment shall not, as such, either be required to give security for his appearance at any time after the day on which judgment is given, or, if he has been committed to prison, be detained in prison after that day:

Provided that, if judgment is given against the defendant, and the decree-holder applies, on the day on which judgment is given, for the enforcement of the decree by the imprisonment of the judgment-debtor, the Court may require the judgment-debtor to give such security as it thinks sufficient for his appearance at any time when called upon while the application is pending, and, if he fails to give the security, may commit him to prison, or place him in the custody of an officer of the Court, until the disposal of the application.

10. Nothing in this Act shall affect the liability of any person for whose arrest in execution of a decree or order a warrant has been issued by a Civil or Revenue Court before this Act comes into force in the territory in which the Court is established.

11. The provisions of this Act shall bind the Act to bind the Crown.

12. All powers conferred by this Act may be exercised from time to time as occasion requires.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

Imprisonment for Debt in India.

A decree or order for the payment of money may be enforced in India by the imprisonment of the judgment-debtor (Act XIV of 1882, s. 254). The Court has a discretionary power to refuse execution at the same time against the person and property of the judgment-debtor (s. 250), but has no discretionary power to refuse execution either against person or against property at the option of the creditor. When an application for execution of a decree is presented, it must, if it is not barred by efflux of time and is otherwise in order, be admitted, and then the Court must order execution of the decree according to the nature of the application (s. 245). The Court cannot refuse to issue its warrant for the execution of the decree unless it sees cause to the contrary (s. 250), and "cause to the contrary," as interpreted by the Courts, means some cause which deprives the decree-holder of the right to execute, or to execute against the party against whom execution is sought, or to execute in the mode prayed for.

2. A judgment-debtor may, when arrested, obtain immediate release by payment of the debt; but if he does not, he must be brought at once before the Court (ss. 336-337).

3. The Local Government may by notification* direct that whenever a judgment-debtor is arrested in execution of a decree for money, and brought before the Court, the Court shall inform him that he may apply, under Chapter XX of the Code, to be declared an insolvent, and that he will be discharged if he has not committed any act of bad faith regarding the subject of his application, and if he places all his property in possession of a receiver appointed by the Court (s. 336).

4. If the judgment-debtor expresses his intention so to apply, and furnishes sufficient security that he will appear when called on, and that he will, within one month, apply to be declared an insolvent, the Court is to release him from arrest. But if he fails so to apply, the Court may either direct the security to be realised, or commit him to prison in execution of the decree (s. 336).

5. A person is not to be imprisoned in execution of a decree for more than six months, or, if the debt does not exceed fifty rupees, for more than six weeks (s. 337).

6. Whilst he is in prison, a monthly allowance must be paid for his subsistence according to scales fixed by the Local Government. The allowance is to be supplied by the decree-holder, and is to be deemed costs in the suit (ss. 338 to 340).

7. He is to be discharged from prison—

- (a) on the amount mentioned in the warrant of committal being paid to the officer in charge of the prison, or
- (b) on the decree being otherwise fully satisfied, or
- (c) at the request of the person on whose application he has been imprisoned, or
- (d) on default in the payment of the allowance for his subsistence, or
- (e) on his being declared an insolvent, or
- (f) on the expiration of the term of his imprisonment (s. 341).

His discharge from prison does not discharge him from his debt, but he cannot be re-arrested under the same decree (s. 341).

8. By the Presidency Small Cause Courts Act, XV of 1882, the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure are applied, with modifications and exceptions, to the procedure in the Small Cause Courts at Calcutta, Madras and Bombay. Among the provisions not so applied are those which relate to the release of an arrested judgment-debtor on his expressing an intention to apply for a declaration of insolvency. Chapter XX of the Code, relating to insolvent judgment-debtors, is also not applied to these Courts. (See s. 23 and sched. II.)

9. The Act, however, contains certain special provisions with respect to an arrested judgment-debtor. Under section 29 the Court may release him from arrest on his giving security for payment. And under section 30, if it appears to the Court that a judgment-debtor under its decree is unable, from sickness, poverty or other sufficient cause, to pay the amount of the decree, or of any instalment under the decree, the Court may, from time to time, for such time and on such terms as it thinks fit, suspend the execution of the decree, and release the debtor, or make such order as it thinks fit.

10. In the four districts of the Dekkhan to which the Dekkhan Agriculturists' Relief Acts apply arrest and imprisonment for debt have been abolished in the case of agriculturists.* And certain special Acts for the relief of embarrassed landholders contain provisions protecting the debtor from arrest or imprisonment in respect of the debts to which the Acts apply.

* "No agriculturist shall be arrested or imprisoned in execution of a decree for money passed whether before or after this Act comes into force."—(Act XVII of 1879, s. 21, as amended by Act XXII of 1882, s. 8.)

Imprisonment for Debt in England.

11. Imprisonment for debt was abolished in England by the Debtors Act of 1869 (32 & 33 Vic., c. 62), except in the following cases:—

- (1) default in payment of a penalty, or sum in the nature of a penalty, other than a penalty in respect of a contract;
- (2) default in payment of a sum recoverable summarily before a Justice or Justices of the Peace;
- (3) default by a trustee or person acting in a fiduciary capacity and ordered to pay by a Court of Equity any sum in his possession or under his control;
- (4) default by a solicitor in payment of costs, when ordered to pay costs for misconduct as such, or in payment of a sum of money, when ordered to pay the same in his character of an officer of the Court;
- (5) default in payment for the benefit of creditors of any portion of a salary or other income, in respect of the payment of which any Court having jurisdiction in bankruptcy is authorized to make an order;
- (6) default in payment of sums in respect of the payment of which orders may be made under the Act (that is, cases of contumacious refusal under section 5 of the Act, see para 14).

12. The term of imprisonment in these excepted cases must not exceed one year (s. 4).

13. In cases (3) and (4) the Court has power to enquire into the case, and at discretion to grant or refuse an order for arrest or imprisonment (41 & 42 Vic., c. 51, s. 1).

14. Under section 5 of the Act of 1869, a Court may commit to prison for a term not exceeding six weeks, or until payment of the sum due, any person who makes default in payment of any debt, or instalment of any debt, due from him in pursuance of any order or judgment of that or any other competent Court. But the power is not to be exercised unless it is proved to the satisfaction of the Court that the person making default has, or has had, since the date of the order or judgment, the means to pay the sum in respect of which he has made default, and has refused or neglected to pay it. "Proof of the means of the person making default may be given in such manner as the Court thinks just, and for the purposes of such proof the debtor and witnesses may be summoned and examined on oath, according to the prescribed rules." A summons under this section is usually called a judgment summons.

15. It will be observed that all the cases in which a debtor is liable to imprisonment under the Act of 1869 involve some degree of delinquency†. And it has been held by high authority‡ that the Act was distinctly intended for the purpose of punishing fraudulent or dishonest debtors.

16. Sums recoverable summarily before Justices, or, as they are called in modern statutory language, Courts of summary jurisdiction, are usually fines. But as ordinary civil debts are in some cases so recoverable, it has been provided by the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879 (42 & 43 Vic., c. 49, section 35) that an order of a Court of summary jurisdiction for the payment of a civil debt is not to be enforced by imprisonment, unless the case is such as would make the debtor liable to imprisonment under section 5 of the Debtors Act, 1869.

Imprisonment for Debt in Scotland.

17. In Scotland imprisonment for debt for sums under £8-6-8 was abolished in 1835 by 5 & 6 Wm. IV, c. 70, but alimentary debts (that is, debts for the support of the debtor's wife or children) were excepted from the operation of that Statute. In 1880 was passed the Debtors (Scotland) Act, 1880 (43 & 44 Vic., c. 34), which enacts, by section 4, that,

"with the exceptions hereinafter mentioned, no person shall, after the commencement of this Act, be apprehended or imprisoned on account of any civil debt.

"There shall be excepted from the operation of the above enactment—

- (1) taxes, fines or penalties due to Her Majesty, and rates and assessments lawfully imposed or to be imposed;
- (2) sums decreed for alimony;

"Provided that no person shall be imprisoned in any case excepted from the operation of this section for a longer period than twelve months."

The same Act contains provisions for the relief of insolvent debtors and for the punishment of fraudulent debtors.

18. By the Civil Imprisonment (Scotland) Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vic., c. 42), imprisonment for alimentary debts was abolished, except in cases where there is a wilful failure to obey the decree for the debt (ss. 3 and 4), and the maximum term of imprisonment for failure to pay rates or assessments was reduced to six weeks (s. 5).

Imprisonment for Debt in Ireland.

19. In Ireland the law as to imprisonment for debt is regulated by the Debtors Act (Ireland), 1872 (35 & 36 Vic., c. 57), as amended by 41 & 42 Vic., c. 54, and is practically identical with the English law.

Proposals for amendment of Indian Law.

20. On the 17th November, 1881, a circular was addressed by the Government of India to all Local Governments and Administrations, stating that the Government of India had under consideration the question of amending the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure bearing upon the question of the arrest of undivided women in execution of the decrees of Civil Courts, but that before coming to any final conclusion on the subject the Governor General in Council thought it desirable to deal with the larger question of abolishing imprisonment for debt, and for this purpose to enquire whether sufficient reasons exist for the continued maintenance in India of the present system. Local Governments and Administrations were accordingly requested to favour the Government of India with a full expression of their opinion on the matter.

21. The replies to the circular disclosed much difference of opinion as regards the advisability of maintaining in India the present system of imprisonment for debt.

22. In favour of the maintenance under existing circumstances of the present system of imprisonment for debt were the Madras Government, the Madras High Court, the Bombay Government, the Bombay High Court, the Calcutta High Court, the Calcutta Chamber of Commerce and the Trades Association, Calcutta (unless a change were accompanied by the enactment of a stringent bankruptcy law), the British Indian Association, Calcutta, the Board of Revenue, North-Western Provinces, the Punjab Chief Court, the Chief Commissioner of the Central Provinces, the Chief Commissioner of Assam (provided the law were so altered as to permit the issue of process against the person only after all means of realising the decree by process against property have been exhausted), and the Chief Commissioner and the Judicial Commissioner of Coorg. The arguments which they advanced appear to be in the main the following:—

- (a) that the total abolition of imprisonment for debt in India would be premature, and would remove from the Statute Book the only check upon the fraudulent alienation of property by solvent but dishonest debtors;

- (b) that legislation has proceeded quite far enough in relief of the judgment-debtor,

• Sir C. Sargent, of the Bombay High Court, wrote

"The legal incidents of the undivided Hindu family, the nannte distribution of property caused by the Mohammedan law of descent, and, to which last not least, the practice of creating fictitious titles so common in this country, afford the dishonest debtor endless opportunities of baffling the efforts of the judgment creditor to attach his property."

while there are in India special difficulties in executing a decree by attachment of property when the judgment creditor is a member of an undivided* family. Creditors are not, it is said, in the habit of proceeding to extremities unless the debtor has the means of liquidating a portion at least of the debt. The men who go to prison are for the most part those who obstinately refuse to pay their debts, and cases of imprisonment for debt are not numerous;

- (c) that the abolition of imprisonment for debt would deprive lenders of personal security, would thereby depreciate credit, and would involve an increase in the rate of interest, already very high. In the case of agriculturists this might seriously impair their ability to pay the land-revenue;

- (d) that abolition of imprisonment for debt should only be attempted when the habits of secrecy, engendered by centuries of oppression, have partly worn away, and when transactions are open and the registration of deeds and bonds has become habitual. When the debtor's property can be easily traced and seized in execution of a decree, then it will be reasonable and right to withhold execution on the body of a pauper debtor except as a distinctly exceptional and penal measure in the case of fraud.

23. In support of the abolition of imprisonment for debt were the following authorities:—

- (a) the Advocate General of Bengal, who advocated the introduction of the English system, because there is no reason why the matter should not be regulated in India as in England, if proper exceptions and limitations, as contained in the English Debtors Act of 1869, are prescribed, and because the abolition of imprisonment for debt would not cause any public injury, while, on the other hand, the present system in most instances operates only as a means of oppression, to the total ruin of the party imprisoned and of his family;
- (b) the Bengal Government, which, while not prepared to resist the opinions of the local officers that abolition would at present be premature, thought that, if an alteration of the bankruptcy law were at any time undertaken, measures might then be adopted for the abolition of imprisonment for debt in cases where fraud is not established against the judgment-debtor;
- (c) the North-Western Provinces and Outh Government, which regarded the existing practice of placing in the creditor's hands the power of selecting his own method of coercion as a relic of the old semi-barbarous debt laws which has now been eliminated from almost every civilized code of judicial procedure. The present system operates with severity against all debtors, honest and dishonest, indiscriminately. The power of subjecting a debtor to arrest and imprisonment should be entrusted not to the decree-holder, but to the Courts, and its exercise should be limited to cases where clear proof exists of fraudulent and contumacious attempts on the part of the judgment-debtor to defeat the operation of a decree. Imprisonment is especially hard on the cultivator and working man, whom it deprives of their means of subsistence and of providing for their families;
- (d) the North-Western Provinces High Court, which advocated the abolition of imprisonment for debt, as it is doubtful whether "any useful purpose is served by the perpetuation in this country of that remnant of barbarism";
- (e) the Punjab Government, which believed that there is some reason to fear that, under the present system, creditors occasionally make use of the law to gratify vindictive feelings or personal spite, and to coerce debtors to sell their land and property at a price below its proper value or to relinquish their just rights. Discretionary power ought to be expressly allowed to the Civil Courts, imprisonment not being resorted to as an ordinary process of execution of a decree, unless the Court is satisfied that there has been fraud or wilful concealment of property;
- (f) the Chief Commissioner of British Burma, who pointed out that the imprisonment of debtors who are paupers, but who are not fraudulent, does no real good to any class, works directly and indirectly great harm to the poorer classes, and causes a distinct loss to the community at large. The practice of permitting such imprisonment has been gradually circumscribed among other civilized nations; among some nations it has absolutely ceased; and there is no reason why the way should not be paved for the disappearance of the system in India. Civil Courts should be allowed to grant execution against the body of judgment debtors against whom there might be prima facie ground for presuming fraud or bad conduct, unless the presumption were rebutted by the judgment debtor;
- (g) the Judicial Commissioner of British Burma and the Recorder of Rangoon, who were of opinion that imprisonment for debt should be abolished, except in case of fraud, which should be punished criminally. The Recorder recommended that the law as to poor debtors in England should be applied to India;
- (h) the Resident at Hyderabad, who considered that the present system of imprisonment for debt is not wanted to compel payment, while it may tend to bring undue pressure to bear upon a debtor, especially in an agricultural country where interest is not so generally given as security for debts. He recommended that imprisonment for debt should be retained only to meet cases in which debtors abscond or endeavour to fraudulently evade meeting their obligations.

24. Thus, the preponderance of opinion was on the whole in favour of the maintenance of imprisonment for debt under the present condition of India, but a considerable and influential minority were in favour of its abolition.

25. The arguments on which the upholders of the present system rely fall into two classes: first, arguments which, if valid at all, are valid for England as well as for India; and, secondly, arguments based on the special circumstances and conditions of India.

26. To arguments of the first class belongs the assertion that "to remove from the Statute Book the penalty of arrest and imprisonment in execution of a decree for money would be to paralyze the commerce and trade of the country." The same objection was made in England, first to the abolition of arrest on mesne process,¹ and afterwards to the abolition of arrest on final process. The power of arrest was removed, and neither commerce nor trade shewed any symptoms of paralysis.

27. Those who uphold imprisonment for debt, not as being generally expedient, but as being specially required for India, do so mainly on two grounds: first, the complexity and obscurity of Indian titles to property; and, secondly, the exceptional prevalence of fraud in India, and the exceptional difficulties of detecting it.

As to the first ground, it has been remarked that if it is wrong to allow a debtor to pledge his person as security for his debts, it is not the less wrong, because, owing to the defect of Indian property law, he finds difficulty in giving a satisfactory security over his property.

In the argument based on the prevalence of, and difficulty of detecting, fraud, there is undoubtedly much force, though it may be doubted whether the obstacles which can be placed in the way of a creditor realizing his debt are not as great in England as in India. But, however this may be, to make an honest, though needy, debtor liable to imprisonment, simply because fraudulent debtors are numerous and difficult to detect, appears to be as unjust as it would be to make homicide by misadventure punishable by death, simply because the crime of murder was rife and hard to prove.

28. There are in the opinion of the Government of India two principles which ought to be observed in every law of debtor and creditor. The Court ought not to give effect to any pledge by a debtor either of his person or of the bare necessities of life. The debtor ought not to be allowed, by his own action, sanctioned by the action of the Courts, either to deprive himself of his personal liberty, or to reduce himself to starvation. If he cannot obtain credit except on one or other of these securities, it is better that he should not obtain credit at all. Experience acquired in the Dekkhan goes to show that these principles are as applicable to India as to England. The Code of Civil Procedure recognises one of these principles by exempting from seizure for debt the debtor's home, means of subsistence. But this recognition is nullified by the refusal to adopt the principle of exempting the debtor's person from seizure. Of what use is it to reserve, by law, to the debtor the bare necessities of life, when he can be compelled to give them up, by the threat of imprisonment? By those who advocate the retention of the present system, much reliance is placed on the very small proportion of actual imprisonments to warrants of arrest, and the inference drawn from this proportion is that the law, though harsh in theory, inflicts no hardships in practice. But there is reason to believe that, in the great majority of cases, exemption from arrest is purchased either by renewal of bonds on extortionate terms, or by surrender of property which the law has exempted from seizure, or by surrender of property which does not belong to the debtor at all, but to his relations or friends. In other words, the law enables a creditor to do indirectly what it forbids him to do directly.

29. It is said that the honest debtor has an easy way out of prison through the door of insolvency. But in the first place, the honest debtor ought not to be sent to prison at all; and in the next place, the door which is provided for his release is, for some reason or other, very rarely used. There is, or was until recently, a strong concurrence of opinion to the effect that the Insolvency Chapter of the Code of Civil Procedure is practically a dead letter. As to the causes of its failure,—whether it is to be accounted for by the preliminary proceedings being unnecessarily cumbrous or expensive, or by the difficulty of satisfying the Court under section 351 that the debtor has not been guilty of any kind of misconduct, or by ignorance of the law and of the modes of relief available to debtors,—opinions differ; but about the fact of failure there appears to be no difference.

30. Since 1883 the Government of India has received and published reports obtained from Her Majesty's representatives abroad on the systems of imprisonment for debt in force in the various countries to which they are accredited. Those reports showed that imprisonment for debt has been abolished in nearly all civilized countries.

31. Having regard to the state of the law in the United Kingdom, to those reports, to the success which has attended the abolition of imprisonment for debt in the case of agriculturists to whom the Dekkhan Agriculturists' Relief Acts apply, to the expressions to be found in the opinions of the authorities who considered the Debtors' Relief Bill of 1885, and to the advocacy by the Lieutenant Governor of the North-Western Provinces and Chief Commissioner of Oudh, and by the Chief Justice and Judges of the High Court of Judicature for the North-Western Provinces, of the expediency of the process of arrest for debt, so far as it is a process that can be set in motion at the discretion of a creditor, and of the enforcement of the process being restricted to cases in which the Courts are satisfied that there have been fraudulent and contumacious attempts to defeat the operation of decrees, the Government of India has decided to introduce a Bill giving effect tentatively and, in the first instance, within a limited area, to the policy which dictated the English Act of 1869, and is believed by several authorities of weight to be applicable to India.

Provisions of Bill.

32. Sections 1 and 2.—It is proposed that the measure shall apply in the first instance to the North-Western Provinces and Oudh, and be extendible to other Provinces, or to particular classes of debtors in other Provinces, by Local Governments with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council.

From the opinions recorded by the Chief Commissioner and by Mr. MacEwen, the Officiating Recorder of Rangoon, on the draft Bankruptcy Bill of 1885, and by the Recorder, Judicial Commissioner and other authorities, European and Native, on the circular of 1881, there appears to be a strong feeling in Burma in favour of abolishing imprisonment for debt where the debtor has not been guilty of fraud. But it is considered desirable that the proposed Act should apply in the first instance to the territories under one Local Government, and that its effect there should be ascertained before the Act is extended to other parts of the country.

The date on which the Act is to come into force in the North-Western Provinces and Oudh is the 1st of January, 1888. If therefore the Bill is passed during the present year, decree-holders will have more than twelve months within which they may proceed against their judgment-debtors under the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure. In England the period which elapsed between the passing and the coming into force of the Debtors Act 1869, was less than five months.

33. Section 4.—This section is based on section 4 of the Debtors Act, 1869, but applies only to arrest and imprisonment for default in compliance with decrees and orders of Civil and Revenue Courts. Clause (c) is specially designed to check those fraudulent alienations of property by solvent but dishonest debtors which are relied on by the opponents of any mitigation of the existing law as the main justification of imprisonment for debt.

34. Section 5.—This section, following the 41 & 42 Vic., c. 54, permits the Court to refuse, either absolutely or on terms, an application for the arrest or imprisonment, or for the release or discharge from arrest or imprisonment, of a defaulter who is a trustee or person acting in a fiduciary capacity and is required, as such, to pay any money which is in his possession or under his control, or any money for which he is accountable and of which he has not discharged himself.

"Then we come to the Amendment Act of 1878, which was passed to meet a special class of cases, and the history of that Act was this. An application was made before me for the imprisonment of a trustee who had been ordered to pay a sum of money. It was a very hard case, one of an unintentional breach of trust; and though the man was actually dishonest, I had no alternative but to make an order. Then I had various other cases before me which led me to regret that the Court had no discretion, for it not unfrequently happened that a person who came in strictly under the first class of offences was not guilty of any moral offence. Under these circumstances I thought it would be wise and prudent that a discretion should be given to the Courts to deal with exceptional cases, but not with the intention of repealing the existing Act. Mr. M. then, being a member of the Legislature, then adopted my suggestion, and procured this Amendment Act to be passed."

35. Section 6.—This section empowers the High Court and the Chief Controlling Revenue-authority to make rules for regulating the procedure to be followed in the Courts subordinate to them respectively in matters as to the liability of persons to arrest and imprisonment on the ground of fraud or contumacy.

36. Section 7.—This section modifies the operation of enactments authorising arrest and imprisonment for default in compliance with decrees and orders of Civil and Revenue Courts for payment of money.

Clause (a), following the Code of Civil Procedure, limits the term of imprisonment to six months, notwithstanding that section 103 of the North-Western Provinces Rent Act, 1881, authorises imprisonment in certain cases for so long a period as two years.

Clause (b) relieves the decree-holder of the liability to maintain his judgment-debtor while in prison. If imprisonment is retained, not as a mode of enforcing payment but simply as a punishment, it will hardly be possible to continue the liability. This liability existed under the old Insolvency Law in England, and the Act which imposed it was once described as giving the creditor "the power of imprisoning and tormenting his debtor at the expense of 3s. 6d. per week." If it is abolished, great care should be taken that imprisonment is not inflicted except in cases of misconduct which deserve punishment.

Clause (c) requires that the defaulter, though in the civil jail, shall nevertheless be subject, as nearly as circumstances admit, to the discipline prescribed in the case of a criminal prisoner undergoing simple imprisonment. Where a person is ordered to pay a fine, the nature and term of his imprisonment will be regulated by the general law. This clause relates to the other cases in which a debtor is liable to imprisonment. Those cases, as before observed, all involve some degree of delinquency (L. R. 6 Ch. 151), and the imprisonment contemplated by the Bill, as by the English Act (L. R. 13 Ch. D. 343), is simple, that is, without hard labour. The effect of this clause will be to deprive the defaulter, as a civil prisoner, of the privilege of maintaining himself, and purchasing or receiving from private sources food, clothing, bedding, and other necessaries (Act XXVI of 1870, s. 31).

Clause (d)* provides that, except where the arrest or imprisonment is for default in payment of a fine, the defaulter, when once arrested or imprisoned, shall not be released from arrest, or discharged from prison, without the order of the Court. The Court may grant the order or refuse it. If it refuses the order, the defaulter may appeal.

Clause (e) so far modifies clause (29) of section 588 of the Code of Civil Procedure as to admit of an appeal being preferred from an order for imprisonment in execution of a decree.

37. Section 8.—This section follows section 359 of the Code of Civil Procedure in providing that where the Court is of opinion that the defaulter has been guilty of an offence against the Indian Penal Code or any special enactment for the punishment of fraudulent debtors, it may, instead of ordering his imprisonment in the civil jail, send him to a Magistrate to be dealt with according to law.

38. Sections 9 and 10.—These sections contain special provisions with respect to arrest before judgment, and save proceedings taken before the Act comes into force.

39. Section 11.—It has been decided in re Havens Smith (L. R. 2 Ex. D. 17) that the English Debtors Act of 1869 does not apply to a case in which the defaulter is a debtor to the Crown. It is proposed that the Indian Act shall have the like effect as against the Crown where a decree or order for payment of money is made in its favour by a Civil or Revenue Court, as it will have against a subject.

40. The question of giving the Courts a discretionary power to refuse an order for the arrest and imprisonment of a judgment-debtor, or at least of a female judgment-debtor, will be considered when next the Code of Civil Procedure comes under revision.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

[First publication.]

The following Bill was introduced into the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 9th June, 1886:—

NO. 10 OF 1886.

Bill to declare certain allowances collected known as Oudh Wasikas to be pensions within the meaning of the Pensions Act, 1871.

WHEREAS, on the death of Her Highness the Bahu Begam, His Highness the Nawab Vazir of Oudh delivered to the British Government a sum of money with intent that the interest accruing thereon should, in compliance with the wishes of Her Highness the Bahu Begam as expressed in the Deed of Deposit executed by her in the year 1813, be applied by the British Government to the payment of certain pensions, which pensions are known as the Amanat Wasikas;

And whereas in the year 1813 the said Government guaranteed the payment of certain pensions to persons connected with the Khás Mahál of Her Highness the Bahu Begam, which pensions are known as the Zamanat Wasikas;

And whereas in the years 1814, 1825, 1829 and 1838 loans, known respectively as the 1st, 2nd, 3rd and 6th Oudh loans, were made by the Ruler of Oudh to the Hon'ble the East India Company with intent that the interest accruing thereon should be applied by the said Government to the payment of certain pensions, which pensions are known as the Loan Wasikas;

And whereas the said Government reserved to itself the right of commuting the pensions to the payment of which the interest accruing on the 5th Oudh loan was to be applied;

And whereas the Amanat, Zamanat and Loan Wasikas have been regarded as pensions to which the Pensions Act, 1871, applied, and no objection has then have been made and paid under section 11 of that Act;

And whereas, since the introduction and publication of the Bill, doubts have arisen as to whether the said Wasikas are pensions within the meaning of the Pensions Act, 1871;

And whereas it is expedient to declare them to be pensions within the meaning of that Act;

It is hereby enacted as follows:—

1. This Act may be called the Oudh Wasikas Act, 1886.
2. The allowances respectively known as the Amanat Wasikas, the Zamanat Wasikas and the Loan Wasikas are, within the meaning of the Pensions Act, 1871, pensions conferred by a former Government and continued by the British Government on political considerations.
3. Notwithstanding anything in section 10 of the Pensions Act, 1871, the Local Government may, without the consent of the holder of a pension payable out of the interest accruing on the 5th Oudh loan, order the whole or any part of the pension to be commuted in the terms referred to in the fourth article of the treaty executed with respect to that loan on the first day of March, 1829, and ratified by the Governor General in Council on the eighth day of May in the same year.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

CERTAIN allowances, locally known as Amanat Wasikas, Zamanat Wasikas and Loan Wasikas, are paid by the British Government to the descendants of certain relatives and dependants of the Bahu Begam and the Vazirs and Kings of Oudh. Till the year 1880 no doubt was entertained that these allowances were pensions within the meaning of the Pensions Act, 1871. In that year it became desirable on financial grounds to commute one of the largest of them, and a dispute having arisen as to the person entitled to receive the capitalized amount of the allowance, the Government had to consider whether it could safely pay the amount under cover of the Pensions Act to the person who appeared to be best entitled. The Hon'ble the Advocate General inclined to the opinion that a Wasika was a pension within the meaning of the Act, but thought there was a good deal to be said in favour of the opposite view. As the sum involved was so very large that the Government would not have been justified in incurring any risk in disposing of it, a special Bill was introduced into the Legislative Council and passed as the Táj Mahál's Pension Act, 1881.

This step, which the Government was compelled to take for its own protection, necessarily suggested a doubt as to the applicability of the Pensions Act to Wasikas.

As it is expedient on political considerations that there should be no room for question as to the applicability of the Act to Wasikas, the Government has decided to introduce this Bill to remove the doubts created by the legislation of 1881.

REVIEW OF THE REGISTRATION REPORTS OF THE SEVERAL PROVINCES
FOR THE YEAR 1884-85.

795-807.

Extract from the Proceedings of the Government of India, in the Home Department (Public),— under date Simla, the 4th June, 1886.

Home Department Resolution No. 15—617-29, dated the 22nd April 1885, reviewing the Registration Reports of the several Provinces for the year 1883-84.

The Registration Reports of the several Local Governments and Administrations for the year 1884-85.

R E S O L U T I O N .

OBSERVATIONS.—The Governor General in Council notices with satisfaction the progress which has been made in this important department of the Administration under Local Governments and Administrations. Regarding the operations of the Registration Departments as a whole, there has been, as the figures in the margin show, an increase of 138,465 in the number of documents registered during the year under review compared with the results of 1883-84. The receipts have risen to Rs. 28,37,933 from Rs. 25,67,916, while an expenditure of Rs. 19,03,957 in 1884-85, compared with Rs. 17,02,760 in the preceding year, shows that the Department is alive to the necessity of affording the public increased facilities for registration.

2. The increase in the number of documents registered, which in itself testifies to the growing popularity of the system of registration, manifests itself alike in both classes of documents—those which it is compulsory upon parties to register and those of which the registration is optional. It is, however, possible that the operation of the Transfer of Property Act, which, by rendering compulsory the registration of all deeds of sale of immoveable property under Rs. 100 in value, practically effaces the distinction between sections 17 and 18 of the Registration Act in regard to such transactions, may have had some effect in producing the increased number of registrations shown as optional. The question of modifying the statistical returns with reference to the effect in this direction of the Transfer of Property Act is now under the consideration of the Government of India.

The following statement compares the number of documents of each class registered during the year under review with similar registrations in 1883-84; and in the tabulated statement appended to this Resolution further information of statistical interest is furnished in connexion with the operations of the Department:—

		Number of registrations affecting immoveable property.			Number of other registrations.	Grand Total
		Compulsory.	Optional.	Total.
1883-84	...	815,976	465,596	1,281,572	207,613	1,489,185
1884-85	..	886,610	516,579	1,403,189	224,461	1,627,650

3. The aggregate results for the various Governments and Administrations, as stated above, are on the whole satisfactorily distributed with regard to localities. To begin with the Madras Presidency, the progress which has been so marked during the past few years has been fully maintained. In this presidency the number of registrations has risen from 478,131 in 1883-84 to 510,699 in 1884-85; and it is a satisfactory feature in this increase that it is even more apparent in the optional than in the compulsory class of registrations. In the latter the percentage of increase is 5·6, while in the former it is 7·7. The financial results are also very satisfactory, the income of the year having risen to nearly 7½ lakhs, showing an increase of 19 per cent. above the highest revenue obtained in any year since the organisation of the department. This increase is no doubt to some extent attributable to the introduction of a revised scale of fees, by which fees leviable on documents of high values were slightly raised. The Governor General in Council would be glad to know whether, concurrently with this enhancement of fees at the top of the scale, any reduction in the fees at the bottom, with which the poorer classes are chiefly concerned, has been found practicable. It is noted with approval that in the expenditure of the department attention was paid to providing additional office accommodation.

4. In the Bombay Presidency an increase of 9·89 per cent. in the number of (mostly compulsory) registrations was also accompanied by a substantial increase in receipts, which amount for the year under review to Rs. 3,18,351. In only one district, Kanara, do results show any noteworthy falling off; and here the decline is attributed to diminished sea-borne export trade, in consequence of the opening of the Southern Mahratta Railway. In this Presidency a system of registration by a peripatetic agency, which is being tried experimentally, has not hitherto been financially successful, though it is stated to have proved a convenience in certain localities. The system is being given a further trial. The Government of India regards with approval all well-considered efforts to popularize or extend facilities for registration.

5. In the Lower Provinces of Bengal, the year's results show a very satisfactory increase both in registrations and in receipts. In the number of documents registered the increase amounts to 11·5, and in the receipts to 10·23 per cent., in the corresponding figures for the preceding year. The increase in registrations is fairly distributed between the optional and the compulsory class. A noticeable feature in the returns is the increase in deeds of sale of petty holdings and leases of agricultural land. The latter is, the Government of India is glad to observe, attributed to some extent to the conclusion of amicable arrangements between landlords and ryots in the Mymensing district, which has been unfavourably known as the theatre of long standing agrarian quarrels. The Governor General in Council notes that in the opinion of His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor the increase in deeds of sale of petty holdings is not due so much to the necessities or wishes of the owners as to increasing appreciation of the benefits of registration. The point is one, however, to which the Government of India is anxious that special attention should be paid by registering offices.

6. The Reports from the North-Western Provinces and Outh for the last two years showed a decline in registration in the united provinces, which the Governor General in Council was disposed to attribute to defective organization. The Report under review shows an improvement on its immediate predecessors; but the Government of India agrees with the Lieutenant-Governor in thinking that there is still room for amendment. Last year there was in both Provinces a slight rise in the total number of registrations, the increase in the North-Western Province being due to a rise in optional transactions relating to immoveable property. This increase, however, may, in the opinion of the Local Government, be possibly due to the operation of the Transfer of Property Act, to which allusion has been made in the second paragraph of this Resolution. On the other hand, there was a decrease in the transactions affecting moveable property, the decline being attributed to a change in the system under which the sugar industry is carried on. Instead of making advances direct to the tenants who are cane-growers, sugar-refiners have, it is stated, begun to make advances to the landlords, thereby making one bond serve the purpose for which heretofore several were necessary. This change of system suggests matter for consideration from an agrarian as well as from a fiscal standpoint.

In Oudh there was some increase of registrations under all heads, the chief rise, however, being under the head of compulsory transactions affecting immoveable property, mostly deeds of mortgage and term leases. Mortgages of low value are, comparatively speaking, more frequent in Oudh than in the North-Western Provinces, but sales are fewer. The Lieutenant-Governor, it is observed, desires that the causes underlying this variation should be, if possible, ascertained; and the Government of India would be glad to learn in due time the results of any enquiry in this direction that may be instituted.

There was but slight variation in the total receipts and expenditure compared with the previous year, and the small increase in receipts which is shown was counterbalanced by a larger expenditure on improved administration.

7. The results of the year's operations in the Punjab show a slight increase in the number of compulsory, and a considerable decrease (16 per cent.) in the number of optional, registrations regarding immoveable property. The provisions of the Transfer of Property Act do not at present extend to the Punjab, and have, therefore, had no effect on the registration statistics of the year similar to that noticed in the case of the North-Western Provinces and Oudh. The net result was a small decline compared with the preceding year in the total number of documents registered. The principal causes assigned for the decline are the agricultural prosperity of the province and the liberal distribution of loans to agriculturists, which obviated the necessity of their contracting debts or selling property. There was, notwithstanding the decline in the number of registrations, a slight rise in the receipts of the department, while the increase in these payments from Rs. 88,039 to Rs. 1,00,117 shows that steps were taken to afford the people increased facilities for registration. Considerable changes were made during the year in the organization of the registering agency. The most important change was in the direction of gradually replacing official by non-official gentlemen at the head-quarters of five districts as sub-registrars, thus entirely relieving the Treasury Officers of those places of registration duties. Another important change was the employment, for the first time, of Tahsildars in the work of registration, the object of this measure being to exact some return from this class of officers for the allowances they receive from the Registration Department, and at the same time to give relief to Treasury Officers whose registration allowances have been withdrawn.

As to the special registrations under the provisions of section 80 of the Act impose work on the Registration Department, in respect of which it obtains no accession to its income, the Lieutenant-Governor considers that the Department should be relieved of this duty, and that it should be entrusted to Revenue officers. In the draft of a Bill to amend the Land Revenue Act now under consideration, it has been proposed that the fees payable for the certificates required under the Land Immoveable Act, 1871, shall be forwarded to the Deputy Commissioners, who will cause them to be entered in the register of charges and ownerships affecting lands in the record of rights for the estate to which they relate. The Local Government considers that this will be a simple and convenient procedure, and, if approved by the Legislature, should satisfy the objections of the Registration Department, which will no longer be concerned with work bringing it no advantage.

8. In the Central Provinces there was a slight decline in the total number of registrations. The decline was due to a falling off in the number of compulsory registrations affecting immoveable property; while registrations of the optional class showed an increase. The decrease in compulsory registrations was chiefly owing to a falling off in the number of registrations of mortgages of immoveable property in the Hoshangabad District, while the increase in optional registrations was due to the rise in the number of transactions in the Jabalpur and Nimar Districts. Taking the results as a whole, it appears that registration has been stationary in the province for the past few years. Some important reforms, having for their object the provision of more efficient inspection, were either carried out or inaugurated. It is believed that these measures when completed will have a beneficial effect on the operations of the department. The income of the department declined slightly (by 7 per cent.), while the expenditure rose by 23·4 per cent., the increase in expenditure being due to the reforms referred to.

9. There has been an increase in British Burma in the total number of registrations, which rose from 8,176 to 9,498. The increase was general under all the principal heads of registration, but was most marked in the case of compulsory registrations of mortgage deeds affecting immoveable property, which advanced by 19·5 per cent. The value of such instruments rose from Rs. 40,62,208 to Rs. 71,48,817, the increase being chiefly due to the depressed state of trade in Rangoon and Akyab. The receipts and expenditure of the department rose by 23·92 and 24·32 per cent. respectively, the increase in expenditure being chiefly due to the strengthening of the establishment in the Rangoon Town office.

10. The operations of the Registration Department in Assam increased by 2,110 transactions. The increase was confined to transactions relating to immoveable property; the advance of 1,202 in the number of optional registrations being a satisfactory feature. As in the previous year, the most marked increase occurred in the Surma Valley districts of Sylhet and Cachar, in which more than five-sixths of the total number of transactions were effected. The receipts of the department increased by Rs. 2,780, and the expenditure, including refunds, amounted to Rs. 3,055 more than in 1883-84.

11. There was a slight rise in the total number of registrations in Coorg and there was a proportionate increase in the receipts and expenditure of the department, of 15·64 and 19·11 per cent. respectively.

12. In the Hyderabad Assigned Districts, exclusive of the increased work done in the Cantonment of Secunderabad, there was a satisfactory increase of 14·5 per cent. in the number of registrations under all heads. The districts of Amraoti, Buldana, and Ellichpur chiefly contributed to the increased business, which is due to the opening of additional sub-registry offices and to the introduction of increased special agency. The increase in the number of optional registrations shows, as remarked by the Resident, that the people are beginning to better appreciate the benefits arising from registration. The receipts and expenditure of the department increased by 12·4 and 11·6 per cent. respectively, the increase in expenditure being mainly due to the substitution of Sub-Registrars on fixed salaries for those paid by commission.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

REVENUE AND AGRICULTURAL DEPARTMENT.

REPORTS ON THE STATE OF THE SEASON AND PROSPECTS OF THE CROPS FOR THE WEEK ENDING 5th JUNE, 1886.

GENERAL REMARKS.—Rain is reported generally from all parts of India, except Sind, the North-Western Provinces, and the Punjab. In the south of the peninsula, in Assam, and in the tracts east of the Bay of Bengal, especially at Chittagong, the falls have been heavy.

In most parts of Madras and in Mysore and Coorg prospects continue good.

Preparations for the kharrif are in progress in Bombay, Berar, and the Central Provinces, and have commenced in the North-Western Provinces and Oudh and in the Mooltan and Shahpur districts of the Punjab. The rabt in the Punjab is not yet completely gathered.

Agricultural prospects have improved in Rajputana, the water-supply in most States having been replenished by the recent rain.

Cultivation is going on well in Bengal, and the crops in the ground are thriving. The state and prospects of the crops in Assam continue satisfactory.

The public health is fair in Madras, Bombay, and the Central Provinces, and generally good elsewhere.

Prices, except in the Punjab, where they are fluctuating, are generally steady.

Extract from the Proceedings of the Government of India in the Revenue and Agricultural Department (Meteorology), dated Simla, 10th June 1886.

Read the following:—

Memorandum on the Snowfall of the Himalaya and Western Mountains to the end of April 1886.

The following is a summary of the reports received up to date.

The Deputy Commissioner of Dera Ismail Khan reports that the snowfall on the Suleiman range was unusually heavy in the months of January, February and March. The snow line, on the hills beyond the border generally, was lower than in average seasons. The snow remained on the higher ranges through February, and melted towards the commencement of March. After the beginning of March, there was a fresh fall on the Takht-i-Suleiman and the higher ranges, but it melted towards the middle of the month. The season was a severe one with unusual cold.

The report of the Deputy Commissioner of Bannu is to the like effect. The fall of snow on the hills near Bannu in the months of January, February and March was somewhat heavier than usual, but not sufficiently to call for any special remarks.

The Deputy Commissioner of Kohat reports a good fall of snow on the Safed Koh, and mountains and plains of Tirah, in January, to the depth of about 6 feet on the Safed Koh, and 1 foot on the Tirah plains. The Assistant Commissioner of Thull further reports an unusually heavy fall on the 15th and 16th February, which he estimates at from 10 to 15 feet on the Spinghar, (Safed Koh), 3 feet on the Tirah plains, and 1½ to 2 feet in the Kurram valley.

He considers that the snowfall of the season has been exceptionally heavy. There was a further good fall in March on the Safed Koh and Tirah and Ali Khel Mandans, but the heavy rain, which followed, washed it away from the lower hills. There were also two falls in April; on the 1st and 2nd, and again on the 21st and 22nd, on the Spinghar and other high mountain ranges.

The Deputy Commissioner of Peshawar, reporting on the Khyber and Tirah (Afridi) hills, says that the heavy rainfall of the 18th–20th January in the Peshawar valley (28 inches), was accompanied with a fall of 2 feet of snow on the Lakka Lur and hills of the Lurghur range, and the fall must have been proportionally heavier on the higher Bua, Tirah, and Morg'ha ranges. This was succeeded by further falls on the 22nd–24th and again on the 31st January and 1st February, and on the 15th to the 17th February. This last fall was 3 feet deep on the Landi Kotah, and 2 feet at Ali Masjid.

On the 17th and 18th March, a slight fall took place on some of the higher ranges, but it melted soon afterwards.

With respect to the hills adjacent to the Euufzye Subdivision, the Assistant Commissioner sends a return of the total fall, on the several hills, during January and February, varying up to 9 feet, the heaviest being in the Utman Bolak Subdivision on the Banrah range.

At Murree, the total fall of snow in January is reported as 8 feet 8 inches, and on the hills adjacent to Kuhuta as 5 feet; in February, as 5 feet 8 inches at the former, and 9 feet on the latter; in March as 6 inches only at the former and 2 feet on the latter. In April the falls were insignificant.*

Sir O. St. John reports, from Cashmere, that the first snow fell on the Pir Panjal on the 31st September, i.e., 15 days later than in 1884. There were slight falls only in October and November, and a further fall from the 16th to the 18th December appears not to have been very heavy. The latest report, dated 16th January, reports about 3 inches of snow on the 4th and 5th of the month.

* In the corresponding months of 1885 it was 12 feet 3 inches in January, 7 feet 7 inches in February and about 8 inches in March at Murree; and on the Nurrur hills adjacent to Kuhuta, 6 feet in January, 5 feet in February, and none later. At Murree, therefore, the snowfall of 1885 exceeded that of the present year, and, excepting in February, the same at Kuhuta.

As has been the case in previous years, the Resident Commissioner of Kulu sends very full and detailed reports on the depth of the snow, and gives a monthly tabular return of its thickness on the different passes. The following is a summary of this table for some of the principal passes in Kulu and Plach:

Name of Pass	Elev. Ft.	Depth of snow at the end of the month.
		January. Ft.	February. Ft.	March Ft.	April. Ft.
KULU ...	Rotang	13,000	12	10	7
	Hamta	14,500	12	10	7
	Balbu	16,000	4	4	4
PLACH ...	Basleo	10,500	4	9	4
	Jalori	19,000	3	2	2

The first important fall occurred on the 3rd January, when the valley was under snow down to 1,900 feet. This melted rapidly up to 6,500 feet, and the snow line remained about that level till the 22nd January, when another heavy fall brought it down to 1,500 feet. At the end of the month, the lowest snow was at 5,500 to 6,000 feet. Both in Kulu and Plach, the season was mild. It remained so during February; and at the lower elevations, there was little rain or snow; early in the month, and again on the 20th, the snow fell down to 5,000 feet; but, by the 1st March, it was certainly not lower than 7,500 feet.

The snowfall of March was normal. There were falls on the higher ranges, and, as late as the 29th, stormy weather whitened the hills down to 7,000 feet. But, on the whole, the weather was mild. The Hamta pass was closed throughout the month; but a few Lahaulis crossed the Rotang, though the pass was not open to traders; and the lower Balbu pass, though crossed by pedestrians, was not passable to laden coolies or animals.

A somewhat remarkable dust cloud enveloped the whole valley on the night of the 30th March, and lasted through the 31st, in such density, that the sun was not visible at any time of the day. A similar occurrence is reported from Lahaul.

In April, the weather in the valley was remarkably mild, though there were several snowstorms in the higher ranges, and there was a considerable amount of fresh snow. On the 23rd, there was a great snowstorm on the Rotang, and 4 feet of snow fell at Koksar bungalow.

The Superintendent of the Kailang Observatory in Lahaul, the Revd. A. W. Heyde, writes on the 12th March:—"The present winter has been so far about a normal one, though there has been much cloudy weather. Since the 17th December we have had 27 days with snow, but not more than about 7 feet down here at Kailang (10,500 feet)."

In a subsequent letter dated 6th April: he says: "Since the middle of March we have had very rough weather and much snow; especially on the 19th, 30th and 31st." Describing the dust cloud above noticed, he says: "On the 30th in the afternoon, while the snow was densely falling, the whole valley was suddenly lit up for about 1 hour or more, by a gloomy yellow light, which was so strong that the white walls of the room looked quite yellow. When it had cleared up next morning, the fresh snow was everywhere up to the height of more than 15,000 feet covered with some yellowish dust-like substance."

In April the weather in Lahaul, unlike that in Kulu, was remarkably 'rough,' wet, and cold with much wind. Snow and rain fell on not less than ten days; from the 9th to the 12th, on the 16th, and finally, daily, from the 20th to the 24th.

Up to the 8th May (the latest date of report), it was extremely cold, and the 5th, 6th and 7th were rainy days. But Mr. Heyde remarks that the spring is more favorable for agriculture than that of last year; the snow having so far disappeared that the fields could be ploughed a month earlier than in 1885.

The Deputy Commissioner of Simla gives a return of the snowfall at Simla, Korkhai, and Kotgurb and Kilba in the Satlej valley, for the 3 months, December to February, as follows :—

		December 1885.	January 1886.		February 1886.
			ft.	inch.	ft. inch.
Simla	...	Slight	3	5	0 10
Korkhai	...	Do.	1	1	0 9
Kotgurb	...	Do.	1	4	0 10
Kilba	...	1 ft.	12	0	5 7

The Deputy Conservator of Forests, Bashahir Division, who resides at Kilba, sends the following report dated 24th March :— “The depth of snow on the passes from the North-Western Provinces, Spiti, and Tibet is reported to be unusually deep. Above Kilba, 10,000 feet elevation, the depth of snow was measured ten days ago, and was over 4 feet.

I measured myself on a pass (9,000 feet elevation) from Sarparu to the Ganwi valley in Pandrabis, and found it 3 feet 6 inches in depth. At present the snow lies at 7,000 feet on the northern slopes, and about 8,000 feet on the southern.

At Mussoorie, 7 inches of snow fell on the 4th January, 6 inches on the 1st, and 1 inch on the 7th February: all other falls being insignificant.

The reports of the Senior Assistant Commissioner of Kumaon on the snowfall on the Johar, Dármá and Byams passes, are tabulated as follow :—

	December 1885.	January 1886.	February.	March.	April.
Johar pass	1 ft.	2 feet.	2 feet.	2½ feet.	2 feet.
Darma and Byams	?	?	?	2½ „	?
Neighbouring ranges	?	?	2½ feet.	3 „	2½ feet.

The Deputy Commissioner of Darjeeling reports 1 foot 3 inches on the Sikkim passes, Jelep, Cho, Guathin, Donkia, Thanka, Giagong, and Noko in October 1885, 1 foot 6 inches in November, 4 feet 6 inches in December, 2 feet 1½ inches in January, 1 foot 6½ inches in February, and 3 feet 5 inches in March. The accuracy of the measurement in January and February, (to fractions of an inch), taken in conjunction with the remarkable uniformity of the fall, on all the passes, in every month, is a circumstance to be noted.

On the whole, it appears that, although there has been a considerable amount of snow on the North-Western Himalaya and the hills of Eastern Afghanistan during the past winter and spring; and in January and February, greater than usual, there has been less than last year, especially in the spring months; and it is certain that the snowy range, as seen from Simla in May, and now at the beginning of June, is less thickly covered, than in 1885, and the snow does not extend to such low levels.

At the same time the winds on the west coast of the peninsula have been less northerly; and, during the month of May, those in the Punjab have been decidedly more southerly and easterly than usual. On the Bombay side, therefore, there seems no present reason to anticipate a retardation of the monsoon.

The atmospheric pressure during May has been slightly below the average on the plains of the Punjab, Rappatna, Central India, Bombay and the Central Provinces, but above it on the hills, on the plains of the North-Western Provinces and Bengal, and most so in Bengal. This is favourable to the advance of the easterly branch of the monsoon, and generally to southerly winds; on the assumption, which experience renders probable, that the same general conditions continue to hold. As compared with the average of former years, the barometer is lowest in Bombay and on the west coast.

The Hon'ble W. W. Hunter, C.S.I., C.I.E., LL.D.

Colonel the Hon'ble W. G. Davies, C.S.I.

The Hon'ble Rana Shankar Bakhsh Singh Bahadur, C.I.E.

OUDH RENT BILL.

The Hon'ble Mr. QUINTON moved that the Bill to consolidate and amend the law relating to rent in Oudh be referred to a Select Committee consisting of the Hon'ble Mr. Ilbert, the Hon'ble Sir S. Bayley, the Hon'ble Sir A. Colvin, the Hon'ble Mr. Hunter, the Hon'ble Rana Shankar Bakhsh Singh Bahadur and the Mover. He said:—

“I had intended, in accordance with the wishes of the Government of India and that of the North-Western Provinces and Oudh, to make this Motion during the last Calcutta session, but was prevented from carrying out my intention by the unfortunate illness of our hon'ble colleague Rājā Amir-ud-dowlah Bahadur. It was obviously desirable that in discussing the principles and provisions of this Bill the Council should have the assistance of a representative of the taluqdārs, whose interests are largely affected by it. And in fairness to them the Motion was suspended in the hope that the illness of Rājā Amir-ud-dowlah would be but of short duration. Unhappily my hon'ble friend is still unable to attend our meetings. In his temporary absence the Legislative Council has been reinforced by the addition of Rana Shankar Bakhsh Singh, Vice-President of the Taluqdārs Association and owner of a large taluqa in Southern Oudh, whose knowledge and experience will, I have no doubt, be of great value to us in carrying the Bill through its remaining stages. I hope also that we may still have the benefit of Rājā Amir-ud-dowlah's attendance either here or at the consultations on the Bill which Sir Alfred Lyall hopes to hold at Lucknow before it is finally read.

“The interval that has elapsed has given members an opportunity of making themselves acquainted with the contents of the lengthy papers which have been printed and circulated, and of appreciating the motives and reasons which have induced Government to recommend legislation on behalf of the Oudh tenantry. It has also enabled the taluqdārs to assemble and discuss the measure, and to inform the Local Government of their views respecting it. When moving for leave to introduce the Bill I dwelt at some length on the necessity for legislation of the nature proposed, and even at the risk of repetition I shall again briefly invite the attention of Council to the prominent facts which in the opinion of the Government leave it no option in the matter.

"The province of Oudh is very densely populated; the bulk of the population live by agriculture, manufactures being few and inconsiderable; 79 per cent. of the cultivated area is occupied by tenants-at-will holding farms averaging something under five acres, and liable to annual enhancement of rent and to eviction at the mere will of the landlord; and of the total number of cultivators only one in 200 enjoys any protection against these incidents of tenure. The landlords consist of 346 taluqdárs and 180,000 proprietors of the zamindari class. Tenants with rights of occupancy under the Oudh Rent Act are 8,117, and tenants-at-will 1,800,000. During the last 15 years there has been a rise of rents which varies in different districts but averages for the province 24 per cent., the average rise of prices during the same period having been about the same. The power of ejectment has been freely exercised by the landlords, the number of notices having risen from 23,600 in 1876 to 92,692 in the current year. An examination of 28,477 tenancies in different districts made three years ago showed that of that number there were only 5 per cent. in which the component fields and the rent had remained materially unchanged during the last fifteen years, and that in 46 per cent. the tenants were all new-comers. The provisions of the existing law which allowed tenants to claim compensation for improvements on enhancement of their rent have remained a dead-letter, and those which gave a similar right on ejectment have been largely evaded by contracts.

"When bringing these facts to the notice of Council I stated that they showed that the cultivation of the soil was carried on by a body of raiyats holding under a tenure which might be described as a yearly tenancy in its simplest and most rudimentary form, and I declined to waste your time by attempting to prove, what is notorious to all who have thoughtfully considered the subject, that this form of tenure when the pressure of population is severe is the one most discouraging to agricultural efficiency and most likely to lead to the impoverishment and degradation of the cultivators of the soil.

"It has, however, been urged as an objection to the Bill that the condition of the tenantry has, on our own showing, improved, and that we have made out no case to justify legislation. On this point, I am quite prepared to join issue.

"As regards the improvement in the condition of the tenantry, special causes have been at work to bring about this result, the continued operation of which can no longer be relied upon. The substitution of the British for the Native Government after the pacification of the province enabled every man to enjoy the fruits of his industry in peace, and thereby gave a great stimulus to production. Good roads were everywhere opened out, and of late years railways have brought tracts hitherto practically inaccessible within reach of the markets of the East and West. The cultivation of waste land has extended with great rapidity. The latest returns available give reason for believing that the increase since settlement is some 20 per cent. These causes have efficiently promoted the prosperity of the province, and have enabled the tenantry, whose rents were largely regulated by custom, to share in it.

"But, as I have already stated, they cannot be expected to give rise to the same progress in the future as they have done in the past.

"The establishment of our Government substituted for the good old rule of each party taking and keeping what he could a strict reign of law, which affords security to landlords as well as tenants, but arms the former with the whole power of an irresistible Land Act, and, as always happens in such cases, gives the advantage in the struggle to the richer and stronger of the two parties. A generation has grown up accustomed to the benefits of British government; the main lines of roads and railways throughout the province have been completed; the area of cultivable waste land is rapidly diminishing and customary rents are fast disappearing. We have reached the summit of the watershed, and have to guard against a facile descent in the opposite direction. Moreover, the progress testified to by no means excludes exceptional cases of great hardship, which tend to increase in number.

"Here I may fitly reproduce a passage from the report of Mr. (now Sir) H. Davies quoted by Mr. Strachey when introducing the present Oudh Rent Act in 1867:—

"The doctrine that rents paid by labourers raising their wages from the soil cannot safely be exposed to competition, as expounded by Mr. J. S. Mill, is now generally accepted by political economists. It is seen that a rapidly increasing population is soon straitened for food, that they will contend fiercely among themselves for the payment of the rent of land from which alone in a purely agricultural country they can extract it; that such contention, whilst nominally and transiently raising rents, must lead to impoverishment and reduced wages; that with increasing poverty the secondary wants necessarily diminish, self-respect vanishes, whilst the multiplication of numbers is accelerated; that the end is to the landlord a shrunken rent roll and deteriorated property; to the country a degraded and desperate peasantry. It is admitted, on the other hand, that rents paid by capital may safely be left to competition, that sensitive fund giving timely and early warning of over-extension to the investor. Contending, not for bread, but for the fair interest of his money, he, unlike the starving cultivator, can and will separate from the soil. Whence is suggested an answer to the question often asked 'why allow competition for grain and not for the rent of land paid by peasants?' Because competition for grain has no tendency to multiply the number of mouths to be fed; but, by adjusting its price in proportion to the supply, rather puts people on their tariff; whereas competition for rackrent leases, by encouraging false confidence, by eventually lowering wages, and by minimising the prudential checks, has a direct tendency to stimulate the increase of population and in course of time to lessen the fund for its support."

"This is a forcible statement of an economic deduction the soundness of which is unassailable. If any one wants an inductive proof of the proposition, he has but to study the history of the land question in Ireland for the last 50 years, and to consider the results there brought about by the operation of competition on a teeming agricultural population.

"I would ask Your Excellency and hon'ble members bearing in mind this theoretical argument to weigh the facts stated in the following passages from Major Erskine's report:—

"126. Although I am able to say that the condition and prosperity of the cultivating classes as a body have not yet been injuriously affected under the administration of Act XIX of 1868, I cannot regret the number of these classes, the size of their farms, the incidence of the rent they pay and the insecurity of their tenure without feeling that, as the inevitable multiplication of their numbers proceeds and competition for the land becomes more keen, their condition will under the present law deteriorate, and that it is advisable to take some action on their behalf. And I am strongly of opinion that any remedial measures which are adopted should be such as will protect all cultivating tenants as a body, and not merely those of certain castes or classes, those who are descended from former proprietors or those who have been in occupation for certain periods arbitrarily fixed. Interference is justified on the broad ground that it is imperatively necessary in the interests of the general community that the complete efficiency of the agricultural industry be maintained, and that that efficiency is under present conditions seriously threatened.

"127. The ordinary tenant now holds from year to year; he is liable to be called on each year to agree to an enhancement of his rent on pain of summary eviction if he refuses the enhancement; and he is moreover liable to summary eviction at the end of any year at the mere caprice of the landlord. The landlord need not give him notice to quit until the 15th April; and unless he is in a position to contest the notice, he must vacate the land by the 15th May or he may be forcibly removed. From all parts of the province it is said that landlords throw obstacles in the way of tenants seeking to make improvements, and withhold their consent to the construction of these works until the tenant contracts himself more or less out of the provisions of the Rent Act which secure him compensation. When the rent is a produce-rent, it is regulated by custom; but when it is payable in money it is mainly determined by competition, by which I do not of course mean that the lease of the tenancy or field is put up to auction (though even that is spoken of by the Deputy Commissioner of Feroz), but that the landlord ordinarily takes as high a rent as he can get: it is to be feared that, except in rare instances, the landlord does not trouble himself to ascertain the relative productive capacity of his fields and to fix the rent of each on this basis; he treats the tenancy as a whole, and demands what he thinks the tenant will pay or what he thinks another man will give.

"128. Under a system which places him in such circumstances as are above described the Oudh peasant has little incentive to exercise self-denial, prudence and thrift. It may be true that even with greater security of tenure he would still be deficient in those characteristics; that he would still adhere to his old habits; indulge without restraint his sexual instincts and embarrass himself by extravagant expenditure on marriages, &c.; but at least he should be put in a position in which it would be to his plain advantage to be prudent and economical. Such a position he does not now occupy.[^]

"It has also been argued that the evils for the removal of which we propose to legislate are apprehended, not actual, and that until they come into existence legislation is unwarranted.

"If the evils were in themselves slight, or if the apprehensions of their approach rested on insufficient grounds, then no doubt there would be some force in the arguments; but I hope I have satisfied the Council that neither of these conditions exist in the present case, and that we have only too strong grounds to dread the approach of serious evils, and to believe that, if we do not interpose, their arrival at no distant date is a matter of certainty.

"If this be so, it is surely the duty of Government to take timely measures to keep out the deluge before the country is submerged—to lay by a store in the present plentiful years against the famine which awaits us. In homely phrase, prevention is better than cure. And measures adequate to ward off the disaster will fall far short of those necessary to remedy the calamities caused by it if we allow it to fall upon us.

"In this connection I would read to the Council an extract from a memorandum by Mr. Quinn, written when Commissioner of Sitapore, which is referred to in Major Erskine's report. Mr. Quinn is an officer of sound judgment and long experience in Oudh, and the division from which he wrote consists of one district the lowest as regards density of population, and of two in which the population to the square mile is under the provincial average:—

'I myself am convinced that the keen competition for land which is essential to rack-renting is only commencing, but will rapidly develop. Twenty years hence the whole of the culturable land in Oudh will probably be under cultivation. An ejected cultivator will then become a ruined man. I would earnestly protest against waiting till the cultivator has reached the destitute condition of the Bengal (he might more fitly have said Behar) raiyat, and till landlords have come to live up to an unduly inflated income. Now, when class animosities have not sprung up between landlord and tenant, and when the cultivator is still fairly prosperous, is the time for such a moderate reform of the rent law as may ward off the evils which alone the backward state of Oudh has hitherto kept in check.'

"In Southern Oudh, where population is more dense and the area of waste land is much smaller, the state of things dreaded by Mr. Quinn is within very measurable distance, competition rents are rapidly superseding those regulated by custom, and in one district there has been a rise of 49 per cent. in rents in 15 years.

"No candid observer of these facts can accuse the Government of precipitation in initiating the present proposals.

"I stated in my speech on the introduction of the Bill that most of the taluqdars were understood to admit that under the circumstances some amendment of the existing law in the direction of the draft Bill is expedient, necessary and inevitable, and that I had grounds for anticipating that they would acquiesce in a measure of this kind. Since that speech was made the taluqdars have met and considered the Bill, and in their corporate capacity have accepted its main principles. This acceptance was intimated to His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor in a reception of taluqdars held by him at Lucknow in the end of April, and was formally notified to the Secretary to Government in a letter of the 24th of that month, giving cover to a memorial which will be found at page 9 of No. 2 of the printed papers on the Bill. As the memorial is short, I shall make no apology for reading it:—

'May it please your Honour,—We, the taluqdars of Oudh, beg to submit a translation of the proceedings of a Meeting of the Committee of our Association held on the 22nd April, 1886, in deliberation on the Oudh draft Rent Bill, from which it will appear that we accept in their entirety the rules of seven years' lease and of the limitation of enhancement to 6½ per cent. We, however, beg to suggest that land given on clearance lease, chajac jungle, new alluvial land, parti, and land subsequently to this Bill rendered culturable by landlords at their own expense, should be exempted from the provisions of the above clauses.

'We would also, with due respect and deference, draw Your Honour's attention to sections 38 and 129 of the Bill, which, in our estimation, contain provisions derogatory to our position and rights, and which also are, in our opinion, unnecessary for the protection of our tenants. These sections we wish to see removed from the Bill.

‘We further respectfully beg to be allowed to point out what seem to us certain defects and errors in the Bill, which we consider should be removed, and also to suggest some useful provisions which may be inserted therein.’

“It confirms what I then stated—and before going on with my argument I may add that on the points to which exception is taken we are prepared to allow the fullest weight to the objections consistent with securing the objects at which we aim, namely, moderate stability of tenures for the cultivator, and a reasonable assurance that the power of enhancement will not be pushed so far as to make that stability a nullity, for no tenure is worth fixing if the enhancement is severe.

“I have thus, I hope, successfully met the objection as to the absence of any necessity for legislating on behalf of the Oudh tenantry. I now turn to the provisions of the Bill as introduced.

“With the Statement of Objects and Reasons will be found printed a letter from the Local Government, giving reasons for the form which the Bill assumes, and for the various minor alterations proposed in the present Rent Act. I shall not trouble Council with recapitulating these on this occasion. They will be fully discussed in Select Committee, and such of them as are finally agreed upon can be referred to so far as is necessary when the Report is presented and taken into consideration.

“I confine myself now to the more important changes, the first of which is that the tenant should have rest for seven years. For that period, dating from the last change in his rent or the last alteration in the area of his holding, we propose to bar enhancements of rent and the issue of notices of ejectment. The present Rent Act does not provide for the issue of notices of enhancement, and the consequence is that notices of ejectment are largely issued for the purpose of securing enhancement as well as for eviction—a fact which must be borne in mind in weighing the annual statistics respecting them. I have already stated that the number of these notices has risen from 25,744 in 1869, the year in which the present Act came into force, to 92,602 in the current year. I shall not trouble Council with the figures for each year, though I have them by me, but state simply that the total number issued in 18 years has been 1,869,964, which would give more than one for every cultivator in the province. This, however, conveys a very inadequate idea of the effect of the notices, for there are districts in which the issues have been comparatively few, and estates where they are little known; and here it is right that I should state that by far the largest proportion of notices has been issued on coparcenary properties, and that tenants on taluqdari estates, speaking generally, have been much less subjected to this form of pressure. Zamindari or coparcenary estates constituted two-fifths of the area of the province, and hence it may be conjectured to what an extent landlords of this class have availed themselves of the power of exaction or eviction with which the law arms them.

“Further the enquiries reported on by Major Erskine clearly brought out the fact that the number of notices issued was no satisfactory gauge of the degree to which rents were enhanced under their operation. A few notices on the boldest recusants are sufficient to induce the bulk of the cultivators to comply with the landlord’s demands. In one large village of Kurni tenants, the most careful and industrious class of cultivators in Oudh, in which a special enquiry was made in 1881, the Government demand was Rs. 400. The rent-roll had been brought up to Rs. 1,027. A stranger got possession, and by the issue of only 18 notices and availing himself of dissensions, among the cultivators succeeded in raising the rents of nearly all the tenants from 10 to 20 per cent. The Deputy Commissioner of another district writes in an annual report:—

‘The results of the notices appear to have been much the same as last year. Over the greater portion of the Atraula taluk enhancement of rent is practically made without having recourse to process by notice. The raiyat is actually able to pay something more than he pays at present; the landlord’s karinda visits a village and calls on all the raiyats to sign a new kistbandi at enhanced rates. They all refuse at first, then gradually by dint of vigorous harassment and no doubt occasional violence a few are forced to give in, after which most of the rest follow like sheep, inwardly resolving not to pay a penny more than they used to do. A few independent souls hold out, and are marked down for next notice season. The bulk of the agricultural population in this district are timid and spiritless and extremely ignorant peasants.'

"I could adduce much more testimony did time allow in support of my proposition that the number of tenants affected by the notices of enhancement largely exceeds that of those on whom those notices were served, large though that be.

"On the other side the tenants did not fail to avail themselves, so far as in them lay, of the means of resistance in their power against these attacks of their landlord. The law allows of a tenant giving a notice of relinquishment, and a considerable number of these were issued year by year. Where there were most disturbances at the instance of the landlords there were most relinquishments on the part of the tenants. The districts most distinguished for the action of the landlords in ejectment are those which show the greatest number of tenants' relinquishments. This, however, was a weak defence, and failed when it was most wanted, as in bad years the proportion of relinquishments to ejectments invariably fell, and the landlord was master of the situation. The Commissioner of Rai Bareilly writes:—

"The proportion of rents enhanced by notices of ejectment to rents abated by notices of relinquishment is as ten to one.'

"It requires no lengthy argument to prove that the existence and continuance of such a struggle between two parties so unequally matched must prove fatal to the prosperity of the localities where it prevails, and that the first step to be taken for the protection of the weaker and the ultimate good of both is to make the war to cease. This, as I have stated, is the first point aimed at by the Bill in the provisions fixing a statutory tenancy for seven years. That period is an arbitrary one, but it has been fixed in what seemed to be the interests of both parties, and has met with no serious opposition. Like all such arbitrary periods, it may be too long to please one party and too short to please another; it may be impossible to say why it should not be six or eight rather than seven; but it was not arrived at without mature consideration, and I need not detain Council with the reasons which led the Government to adopt it.

"The next point to be considered is what is to happen at the end of the seven years. Are we to allow the present law to come into force again, and had landlords with appetites whetted by seven years' abstinence to enhance and eject ad libitum. This is obviously impossible, and the mode in which protection should be afforded to tenants has been the subject of long and anxious consideration. It might have been proposed that rents should not be enhanced for the term of settlement, and that the landlord's power of ejectment except for non-payment of rent and breach of the conditions of tenure should be carefully swept away. This course, however, was not for a moment contemplated, and, as in Oudh it is beyond the sphere of practical politics, it may at once be dismissed from our consideration.

"Many authorities were in favour of allowing only such enhancements of rent as might be judicially determined by Courts or officers specially empowered to settle rents. This view has in theory much in its favour. The decisions of Courts of Justice are looked upon, if not as the perfection of human reason, yet as the fairest means attainable of doing right in the controversies between man and man. The Courts, however, must decide on evidence furnished to them by the parties, and are shut out from sources of information which, in cases like those involving the fixation of rents over large areas, are essential to the right determination of particular cases and vital as regards the welfare of the agricultural community. Officers specially appointed for the task may indeed after careful study and practical experience acquire such a knowledge of the different soils prevailing in selected localities and of the amount and nature of their produce as may render their decisions less dangerous than those of Courts giving judgment in isolated cases, but they must fail in allowing due weight to the countless diversities which make uniform rates of rent inapplicable to all the fields in a village, circle or other arbitrarily assumed area. No satisfactory standard has yet been devised for determining the fairness of a given rent; and in the North-Western Provinces, where the Settlement-officer's assessment rates, which are easily ascertained, are generally used for this purpose, I can vouch from experience that no more difficult task is thrown upon the Revenue Courts than the trial of enhancement cases. No doubt, valuations of land and produce for the purpose of fixing rent are not uncommon in England and elsewhere, and, where farms are large and capital abundant, furnish a rough and ready means of settling disputes between landlord and tenant. Profits in such countries are large enough to allow a margin for errors in calculation on one side or the other; but in Oudh there is no such margin. The average size of the farms is but five acres, upon which the first burden must be the support of the cultivator and his family; and when the funds necessary for this are deducted, the balance available for the rent is too small to allow of room for miscalculations or error. Any increase to it, however trifling, can only be made at the expense of the subsistence fund, the diminution of which means the deterioration of the peasant, upon whom in the last resort the support of society depends. The system of determining rent at the present day in this part of India by estimating the money value of a proportion of the gross produce received its deathblow in the lengthened discussions on the Bengal Tenancy Act a year or so ago, and I hope it is unnecessary for me to take up time by arguing against it.

"Another difficulty attendant on the introduction of this system of judicial rents into Oudh I shall just touch on—that is the provision of machinery adequate and competent for the task. Existing establishments have been cut down to the lowest scale, and are working under high pressure; so that it would be obviously impossible for them to undertake the duty of settling rents in hundreds of thousands of cases at the close of the seven year period, and it would be equally impossible for Government to provide at once from other provinces a sufficient number of officers qualified to conduct an operation so delicate and so gigantic even if the successor of my honorable friend Sir A. Colvin saw his way to make the necessary financial provision for them—a contingency which the outlook at present scarcely warrants our contemplating.

"All projects for fixing rents judicially being thus abandoned, Government were driven to the alternative of leaving those most interested to adjust rents by mutual agreement, subject to a certain maximum imposed for the protection of the weaker party to the contract. That maximum is an increase of $6\frac{1}{2}$ per cent on the existing rent. This gives the landlord an opportunity of revising his rents four times within the currency of a 30 years' settlement, and would enable him under the most favourable circumstances to raise his rents about 27 per cent during that period, while it would at the same time afford him some assurance as to the principle on which the Government demand would be adjusted at the next settlement of land-revenue. Assessments would be based not on conjectural valuations of produce, but on rents actually paid.

"The proposal to fix the limit of enhancement at a proportion of existing rents is not free from objections; like all arbitrary limitations it is open to criticism, but if we are to wait until we can find a solution of the Oudh tenant-right question against which no objection can be brought, the amelioration of the condition of the tenantry must be deferred to the Greek kalends. The practical question is not what is a theoretically perfect system, but what changes in the present system, effective for the object we have in view, is open to the fewest and weakest objections.

"This limitation of enhancement proposed is based on a principle universally admitted, that sudden and harsh enhancements are injurious and should be restrained; and existing rents are taken as a starting point, because under the almost unrestricted influence of competition through a series of years and after a general and steady advancement of rents they are understood to be on the whole very closely approximate to the full market-rates, and to bear probably a more uniform relation to the net produce than could be attained by any official revision of them however carefully conducted. It is very probable that the landowner will at the expiry of each statutory period avail himself of his legal right of enhancement should the circumstances of the market admit it, but this is an incident of tenure not unknown in the most prosperous examples of British farming.

“The arrangement also poses as the undeniable advantage of certainty, the only affording to the tenant at the same time security against eviction and excessive enhancement and a stimulus to devote his utmost skill and industry to the improvement of his holding during the seven years for which the law guarantees him undisturbed possession of it.

“The Government, however, are not unaware that change of circumstances may render useless or mischievous a hard-and-fast rule as to the maximum rate of enhancement, and in view of this we have taken power enabling the Local Government to vary within periods of not less than seven years the limits of the enhancement to which tenants with rights of occupancy are liable. I pointed in my speech on the introduction of the Bill to some causes which might render a fixed maximum oppressive or inadequate, and recent experience in Ireland, if such were necessary, warns us that a few bad seasons may have such an effect on rents fixed on what seemed at the time to be equitable principles. The power is no doubt an important one to be entrusted to the executive Government, but it would be put in force only on exceptional occasions, and its exercise would be carefully watched. It is not desirable that on every occasion where circumstances may call for a variation of the limit of enhancement the intervention of the Legislature should be resorted to, and the whole question of the relations between landlord and tenant be thereby again opened up. It must also be borne in mind that Government has a substantial interest in holding the balance fairly between them on this point. As the interdependence of land-revenue and rents is becoming closer every year, any large reduction of rents must affect the Government revenue. I now pass on to the subject of ejection.

“Enhancement and ejection hang together. As I have pointed out on a previous occasion, provisions for protecting the tenant from enhancement are of little use if the power of ejection at his will and pleasure is left to the landlord. A tenant in an agricultural community such as we have to deal with will agree to any demand which does not involve starvation sooner than part with what affords the means of subsistence for himself and his family; and the unrestricted power of ejection is really a power to rackrent. That this power has not everywhere produced its natural consequences hitherto is due to the moderation of the majority of the landlords, and to the fact of the pressure of the population on the land not having reached its extreme limit in all parts of the province. But this state of things is passing away, and the moderation of landlords will be subjected to a strain too great to be resisted. Moreover, cases are but too numerous, where the power, chiefly I am bound to say among the smaller landlords, has been unsparingly exercised, and also where the lessees of absentee proprietors have not failed to push to the utmost the advantage which the law gives them. Limitations on the power of ejection are therefore a necessary consequence of those on enhancement.

“The Bill proposes in the first instance to render more effective the provisions of the existing law regarding the payment of compensation for tenants’ improvements. On this point I need not now dwell. The new section has been drawn on the lines of that passed for Bengal last year, and is likely to excite little controversy. The principles on which it is based were thoroughly discussed in this Council on more than one occasion, and have encountered no opposition.

“The mere payment, however, of compensation for improvements is not a sufficient deterrent as in the cases where it will operate the landlord is sure of receiving again a return for the money expended by him. Something further is required to prevent landlords from using the power of ejection harshly or capriciously to the detriment of their tenants generally, and this the Bill furnishes in the shape of compensation for disturbance. A landlord who ejects a tenant willing to pay the statutory enhanced rent at the end of the seven years’ period of occupancy must pay the tenants so ejected one year's rent. Compensation for disturbance is not altogether a new idea in India. In No. 1 of the printed papers hon'ble members will find an account by Mr. J. B. Lyall of a system based on this principle which was introduced and worked by him for a time with the assent of the zamindárs in the Kangra district. Three years ago this Council accepted the principle and embodied it in the Central Provinces Tenancy Act. I have referred to my friend the Officiating Chief Commissioner as to the working of the provision. He tells me that the time that has elapsed since the Act came into force has been too short to allow of the law on this point being made much use of, or to admit of any valuable opinion being formed as to its operation. The principle was also contained in the Bengal Tenancy Bill as introduced, and was dropped out only at the last moment, having been found to be not required for occupancy-tenants. The non-occupancy-tenants were believed to be only a minority of the cultivators of Bengal, and it was considered that they would derive sufficient protection from the system of judicial leases established by the Act. In Oudh, circumstances, I need scarcely point out, are certainly different. The whole of the Oudh cultivators are practically tenants-at-will, and the Bill makes no distinction between classes among them, and establishes no favoured grade—a principle which has been steadily kept in view in maturing the present proposals. Compensation for disturbance has thus been for some time under discussion in this country, and Government has failed to discover any more effective means of checking evictions made with the view of securing harsh and unreasonable enhancements.

"A low scale of compensation for disturbance will not operate strongly, it is true, in checking enhancements where there is a keen competition for land, and the landlord can look forward to receiving at once from the incoming tenant a bonus sufficient to recompense the compensation paid to the tenant who vacates; but, unless under very favourable conditions, it must act in some degree as a deterrent to a landlord who wishes to proceed to enhancement by way of eviction. The necessity of paying down cash the recovery of which may be open to some doubt will in such cases make a landlord pause, and the knowledge that if ejected he will not be turned out on the world as a pauper will promote the self-respect of the tenant and nerve him to apply his skill and industry to making the most of his holding.

"This is, however, one of the points in the Bill to which objection is made by the Taluqdárs Association.

"In the discussions on this Bill the Government have shown themselves desirous as far as possible to meet the objections of the taluqdárs, and is my hon'ble friend can bring before the Select Committee any modification of our plan of compensation for disturbance, or any substitute for it which is likely to prove equally effective for checking capricious evictions, I can assure him of the fullest and most favourable consideration for it.

"I may, however, state here some considerations which have occurred to me respecting the objections to our proposal urged by the taluqdárs. Their objection, as I understand, is not so much to the imposition of a penalty on the exercise of their power of ejectment as to the indignity of being obliged to pay money to a tenant from whose presence they are anxious to free their estate. There is doubtless force in this objection in the case of a good landlord who desires for the benefit of his property to get rid of a bad tenant. But all landlords are not good and all tenants are not bad. And we are legislating to prevent bad landlords from doing what good landlords have not hitherto felt inclined or compelled to do. A bad tenant would in most cases be slack in the payment of his rent, and we have introduced a new provision into the Bill which will enable a landlord at any time to get rid of a tenant who cannot or will not pay up arrears of rent decreed against him. This is a considerable extension of the powers of realising arrears of rent by ejectment possessed by landlords under the existing law, and will, I hope, be taken as outweighing in some degree the obligation of paying compensation for disturbance to tenants ejected on other grounds.

"It is also urged that the right of compensation for disturbance at the close of the seven years' tenancy implies a right of occupancy in the land against the will of the landlord, and that the recognition of any such right in the tenants derogates from the rights guaranteed to the taluqdárs. This applies only to taluqdári estates, and has no bearing on two-fifths of the land of Oudh, which is not held by taluqdári landlords; and I would appeal to my hon'ble friend to consider before he pushes home the argument, whatever be its worth, whether, having acknowledged most candidly the necessity for affording tenants stability of tenure for a period of seven years and protection from excessive enhancements at the end of that period, the taluqdárs of Oudh are prepared to nullify the provisions on this last head by insisting on opposing for the benefit of bad landlords measures by which alone those provisions can be made a reality.

"The Bill as it stands enables any landlord to get rid of the obligation of paying compensation for disturbance by granting leases for a longer period than seven years, which, coupled with the power of requiring the prompt ejection of a tenant who fails to pay arrears of rent decreed against him, limits the range and mitigates the stringency of the provisions objected to.

"My Lord, I feel I have trespassed on the patience of Council to an unconscionable extent, and I shall add only one word as to the objection taken to section 129 of the Bill, which reserves power to the Local Government to revise and settle rents under certain conditions. I explained on a former occasion that this section was drafted in order to define the liability of the taluqdárs under the sanads by virtue of which they hold their estates. I showed that even in case of small zamindárs the grant of such powers was not unprecedented, that it would really be a relief to good landlords to know exactly what they might and might not do without incurring the risk of penalty, and that it was supported by a warm friend of the taluqdárs. Their Association, however, objects strongly to the grant of this power to the Local Government; and as the enforcement of the conditions of the sanad is of the highest political importance and one on which no doubt as to the views of the Government of India and indeed of Her Majesty's Government at home should be allowed to remain, I shall leave the objection to be dealt with by the members of the Executive Council who follow me."

The HON'BLE RANA SHANKAR BAKSH then addressed the Council in the vernacular, a translation of his speech being read by the Secretary as follows:—

"My Lord,—As a Member of this Hon'ble Council, I feel it my duty to express my humble views on the broad and difficult questions involved in the Oudh Rent Bill, which is now before Your Excellency's Council. But I shall confine myself to a few remarks which will not take up much of the valuable time of the hon'ble members.

"From the results of formal and elaborate enquiries which have from time to time been made into a tenant-right in Oudh, it has been universally admitted that the landlords in Oudh have never practised extortion towards their tenants. In support of this I respectfully refer Your Lordship to the Minute of His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor, North-Western Provinces and Oudh, dated 28th December, 1882; to letter No. 135, dated 1st June 1883, from Major Erskine, the Special Commissioner; and to letter No. 3939, dated 21st December 1882, from the Secretary to the Government, North-Western Provinces and Oudh. In the face of such high authorities exonerating the taluqdárs from the charge of rackrenting and oppression, I humbly submit that I am quite unable to understand how such a charge can for a moment be supposed to be true or well-founded, and how the notorious Sahlamao case can be cited in support thereof.

"The sanads granted to the taluqdárs, when read with the letters of the 10th and 19th October, 1859, leave no doubt as to the fact of the protection therein afforded being confined, with certain conditions, to those under-proprietors who occupied an intermediate position between the superior proprietors or taluqdárs and tenants-at-will, and who were actually found to possess an occupancy-right in 1855. But in obedience to the will of Government, and with the sole view of benefiting these immediate holders, the taluqdars have loyally submitted to the extension of the period, during which their claims may be heard, to twelve years. This is sufficiently proved by the following legislative enactments and official circulars to which I humbly draw the special attention of this Hon'ble Council:—

"By Act XVI of 1845 the period in question was extended from the 13th February, 1844, to the 23d February, 1850.

"By Act XXVI of 1846 under-proprietary rights in sir, &c., were conceded to sub-lessees and under-proprietors.

"By Act XLII of 1850 the right of redemption of mortgage was allowed, contrary to the express provisions of the sanad.

"By Circular IV of 1857 compensation was made to ex-proprietors in the shape of an under-proprietary title.

"By section 5, Act XIX of 1853, a right of occupancy was conferred on ex-proprietors in their thakbhisht land.

"Having mentioned briefly some of the most valuable concessions made by the taluqdars in favour of their tenants, I proceed to examine the broader question of an alleged 'tenant-right' in Oudh. On this important question I think I cannot do better than draw the attention of this Hon'ble Council to the elaborate and complete enquiries made in 1855, which resulted in the famous despatch of His Majesty's Secretary of State dated 10th February, 1855, wherein it was finally settled and authoritatively declared that no tenant-right had ever existed in Oudh, that is, tenants do not possess any right whatever in the land they cultivated. But the taluqdars of Oudh, in deference to the wishes of Government and with the sole view of gaining their goodwill and promoting the welfare of their tenants, have, of their own accord, by a Resolution of the Committee of the British Indian Association held on the 22nd April, 1836, agreed to make two fresh valuable concessions in favour of the latter, and cheerfully accepted the rules of seven years' lease, and of the limitation of enhancements, subject to the following very important exceptions:—

"(a) naufore (land given on clearance lease);

"(b) banjar;

"(c) jungle;

"(d) new alluvial land;

"(e) partti;

"(f) land reared or cultivated by the landlord at his own expense.

"The very Lord, the taluqdars of Oudh have on every occasion proved their loyalty and devotion to the British Government, have always earnestly endeavoured to gain its goodwill and have always shown moderation and liberality to their tenants and those who labour under them. Under these circumstances, I respectfully submit that the charge of rackrenting and oppression brought against them is far from being just and reasonable. But, as experience has shown that section 43, Act XIX of 1858 has not worked as well as could be desired, and that some amendment should be made therein in the interests of all concerned, I do not feel myself justified in saying that I hold a different opinion.

"Now, with Your Lordship's permission, I propose to examine some other provisions of the Oudh Rent Bill which, in my humble opinion, are open to serious objection.

"Among these I would, with due deference, draw Your Lordship's attention to the provisions of section 33 (A), regarding compensation for disturbance, and of section 129, authorizing the Local Government to interfere in cases of great mismanagement. These sections, I humbly submit, should be entirely expunged from the Bill, because 'compensation' presupposes the existence of a right in lieu whereof something is given; and as no tenant-right is proved to have ever existed in Oudh nor can any be created, it does not appear for what the proposed compensation is to be given. If this compensation is for ejection, it involves the loss of the proprietary rights of the landlords, and will inevitably have the effect of depriving them thereof. It will be a very great hardship to the landlord if, after being debarred from ejecting his tenant for seven years, and enhancing his rent beyond one anna in the rupee on the expiration of that period, he is compelled to pay one year's rent to the tenant so ejected. Such a measure would almost be intolerable to the landlord. As an illustration of this I would humbly ask Your Lordship to look into the case of a tenant who has to pay an annual rent of one hundred rupees, and who, on being ejected after the expiration of the statutory period of seven years, is paid that amount, and the land is let to another tenant on a rent of Rs. 100 plus Rs. 6-4. During the next seven years the landlord will realize from the new tenant Rs. 43-12 only, which is less than one-half of the amount he has paid to the old one as compensation for disturbance; that is to say, out of a total rent of Rs. 100 the landlord will lose Rs. 56-4, and will have no prospect of realizing that amount from any one by any means, nor will he be able to recoup himself during the next fourteen years for the loss thus sustained. The compensation for disturbance rule, which is a very hard-and-fast rule indeed, will, in the long run, deprive the landlord of his power of ejection altogether, and will give the tenant a right to hold the land for a practically unlimited period. Upon those who cannot afford to pay any compensation at all, it will have the effect of permanently transferring their properties to their tenants. It is the duty of this Hon'ble Council to have due regard for the rights and interests of all classes for whom it proposes to legislate.

"Another effect of this compensation for disturbance rule will be that it will be an irresistible temptation to tenants to shift their holdings as frequently as they could, and will set them wandering about in quest of a better land and a more lenient landlord from whom they could squeeze a larger amount as compensation for disturbance. One of the main objects of this Bill, as I understand it, is to give fixity of tenure to the cultivator, and to induce him to devote more time and labour to the cultivation of his holding. This object, I humbly submit, will be utterly defeated by the rule in question, which, diverting the tenant's attention from the cultivation of his holding, will fix it on compensation. This, as a matter of fact, will lead to the deterioration of the soil, and will leave no chance of its improvement. What justification is there, I would respectfully ask, for depriving the party justly entitled of a portion of his right and giving it to another party which does not possess the shadow of a right? Will it be just and reasonable to deprive the landlord of the only means of getting rid of a bad tenant by making this objectionable rule applicable to all classes of tenants? The ejection of recalcitrant tenants should, like that of defaulters, be made a rule rather than an exception.

"Now, with due respect and deference, I beg to draw the attention of this Hon'ble Council to the provision of section 129. I will not dwell upon the reasons and motives which have prompted the insertion of this section in the present Bill. I will leave it to the hon'ble members to consider and decide whether it is necessary to retain this section after adequate provisions have been made for fixing the term of the lease and limiting the enhancement of rent. The term of the lease having been fixed and the rate of enhancement limited, I humbly submit that this section seems to me to be entirely unnecessary and undesirable, and should be expunged from the Bill.

"In conclusion, I humbly pray that sufficient time may be allowed to the taluqdárs for submitting their objections to certain provisions of this Bill, and suggesting some useful provisions for insertion therein, and explaining the exceptions subject to which they have accepted the rules of seven years' lease and of the enhancement of rent. I beg leave to support the Motion that the Oudh Rent Bill be committed to the Select Committee for consideration and report."

The HON'BLE SIR STEUART BAYLEY said:—"I think, my Lord, that the Council are to be congratulated in the circumstances under which they are now proceeding with this Bill, as the announcement which we have just heard from the hon'ble member who represents the Taluqdárs' Association, that they accept the two main principles of the Bill, renders unnecessary a great deal of irritating controversy as to the legislation of 1868, and the circumstances of the inquiries which led up to it. There is a great deal to be said on both sides of the question, but it cannot be said without raising a certain amount of unpleasantness, and for that reason I am very glad that it has not come to be discussed. With regard to the legislation of 1868 itself, I have only to make one observation, and that is that Sir John Strachey, who introduced the Bill himself, looked forward to the time when under the stress of unlimited competition it would be necessary to take fresh legislative action in order to strengthen the tenants' position; and he was careful to point out that the hands of the Government of India were as much unfettered in intervening in questions between the landlord and tenant in Oudh as in any province in India, except in regard to the one point as to the conditions under which the rights of occupancy should be exercised. He mentioned this, and he significantly added that it would be desirable that there should be no misunderstanding on that point. Nor need I now, after the exhaustive explanation which the hon'ble mover of the Bill has given us, enter at any length into the present condition of affairs, which has rendered legislation necessary. The Council are well aware that the province of Oudh is a purely agricultural country, that it is very thickly populated, and that, of the tenant-cultivators, over 99 per cent. are cottier tenants-at-will, liable to be ejected every year on a notice of one month. The inquiries instituted, and which lasted for several years, were very exhaustive, and the result, as the papers before you show, was that there was an unanimous opinion on the part of the district officers that, in view of the rapid rise in rents, of the rapid increase in notices of ejectment and of the general status of the cultivators which I have just pointed out, it would be absolutely necessary to strengthen their position with a view to giving stability to cultivation and encouraging improvements. Those were the conditions which led to the introduction of the Bill.

"Turning now to the speech of the hon'ble member who represents the taluqdárs,—a speech which follows the main lines of the memorial of the 23rd April, submitted by them,—I have first to remark that I think the Government ought to acknowledge heartily the loyalty and moderation with which the body of taluqdárs have advanced half-way to meet the wishes of the Government; and I think that, on our part, we ought to give very careful consideration in consequence to whatever objections they may urge to the special provisions of the Bill, and that as far as possible, with due reference to the security which it is the main object of the Bill to obtain for the cultivators, we ought to do our utmost to meet their wishes. The two points to which both in the memorial and in the hon'ble gentleman's speech the greatest attention is given are sections 38 and 129. Section 38 provides that, when a landlord elects to eject a tenant at the expiry of his lease without giving him the option of staying on at an enhanced rent, he shall give that tenant compensation for disturbance equal to one year's rent. Section 129 provides that, when the agricultural condition of an estate is greatly deteriorated owing to gross mismanagement, the Government shall have the power to send in an officer to settle the rents, and the rents so settled shall be stable for a period of ten years.

"I will, with the permission of the Council, deal with the latter of those two sections first. The history and object of that section, as has been explained by my hon'ble friend Mr. Quinton, was to give effect in a modified form and in a legal method to a well known provision of the taluqdárs' sanad. That provision is to the effect that they should be retained in possession of their estates so long as they maintained the agricultural prosperity of those estates and secured those holding under them in the possession of their rights. This clause in the sanad has been the subject of a great deal of discussion. Sir Charles Wingfield, who was the strongest upholder of taluqdári rights, refers to it distinctly as a condition which warrants the Government in interfering in order to prevent oppression; and Sir George Couper in one of his letters speaks of it as the Magna Charta of the Oudh rights. Well, no doubt that condition in the sanad does give Government the power of interfering to prevent oppression, but the terms are somewhat vague and indefinite, and the penalty—no less than confiscation or sequestration—is so enormous that it is not to be wondered at that the Government have been very reluctant to take executive action under that condition. As a matter of fact, it has only once been acted upon. It therefore appeared possible that, instead of leaving this tremendous "bludgeon clause" hanging over the heads of the taluqdárs, a modified penalty to be exercised under the definite provisions of the law might be found to meet all the requirements of the condition, and might not be unacceptable from that point of view as a definite and milder penalty to the taluqdars. For my own part I cannot confess to feeling any surprise that, on consideration, the taluqdars have preferred to go on living under the same indefinite terror, to which they have become accustomed, rather than to accept a more definite, although very much milder, penalty about which they could only predicate that in occasional cases it might be reverted to with less reluctance than the severer one. Speaking for myself, I should say that this Bill gives generally such protection to the raiyats as to render it unnecessary to have recourse to special and exceptional action in regard to individual ill-doers. Consequently, if the proposal is accepted by the Local Government, I shall without regret see the section expunged by the Select Committee.

"The question of compensation for disturbance is a much more difficult one. It is discussed very fully and carefully in Sir Alfred Lyall's letter of the 21st December, 1883; it runs in and out throughout the whole correspondence, is perpetually cropping up, and argued first from one point of view and then from another; and when you think it is put aside for the moment, you find that every question comes back to this as the main prop on which almost all the other provisions of the Bill hinge. The point is this—In order to give stability to the cultivator and encourage him to make improvements, Sir Alfred Lyall has laid very great stress upon the necessity of giving the sitting tenant at the end of his seven years' lease option of holding on at the enhanced rate. I should explain that under the accepted provisions of the Bill he gets under a seven years' lease and a limit on the enhancement. Sir Alfred Lyall then says that the sitting tenant ought to have the first option of a new lease at the enhanced rate. But, if side by side with that provision you leave it in the power of the landlord to eject a tenant without compensation, what becomes of the safeguard that Sir Alfred Lyall thinks absolutely necessary? The condition that the sitting tenant shall have the first option of the renewed lease at an enhanced rate is nullified; as a matter of fact you come up to almost unrestricted competition. On the other hand, the position taken up by the taluqdars is very strong. I cannot quite follow my hon'ble friend in the first of his arguments that, because a tenant has no occupancy-right, therefore, the offer of compensation is a distinct deduction and derogation from the proprietary right of the landlord. It is true that the decision of the Government was that the tenant has not, and never had, an occupancy-right which could be enforced; but it is well known—and I do not think that the fact will be disputed anywhere—that the tenant in Oudh, as elsewhere, has by custom an hereditary occupation. That was the opinion of Lord Lawrence's Government in their letter to the Chief Commissioner of the 16th February, 1885, in which it is said:—

'3. The evidence adduced tends to show that under the Native Government of Oudh there was vested in the raiyat no right of occupancy which could be successfully maintained against the will of the landlord.

'4. It is at the same time held by no means certain that the landlord had a legal right to oust a raiyat who continued to pay the customary rent, and there existed a prevailing usage by which the occupant-cultivators did, in point of fact, generally maintain the hereditary possession of their lands at the customary rents.

'5. It is unnecessary here to enquire whether this usage was the remnant of a former right of occupancy surviving thus imperfectly a long reign of anarchy, or whether it sprung spontaneously out of the mutual relations and necessities of landlord and raiyat. It is admitted very generally to exist, and in some quarters with such strength and distinctness as closely to resemble an actual right.'

"Well, it is admitted the raiyat's status is a question of custom and not of right, but, admitting this, I cannot see that compensation involves any real weakening of what is generally understood as the landlord's proprietary rights. Apart however, from this objection, I think that from the landlord's point of view there is objection to be taken very strongly on two other sides of the question. The landlord might very properly say 'Why, if I want to get rid of a recalcitrant tenant, should I be fined for it?' Or, even if he does not look at the matter from that point of view, he may very strongly say 'Why, when I find it essential to the peace of the neighbourhood, owing to the carelessness of a man or to his disposition to cause trouble, or even owing to caste prejudices—if I find it necessary for my own peace and perhaps to retain my other tenants—if I find it necessary to oust him—why should I have to make him a present of a year's rent?' This really becomes a premium on turbulence and misconduct, and from that point of view I must confess there is a great deal to be said in favour of the objection; and Sir Alfred Lyall, in the letter from which I have quoted, had not failed to notice the point. He discussed it and tried to find a remedy; the remedy which he proposed, or rather discussed, was that, when it became a question of getting rid of a recalcitrant tenant, a landlord should be able to get rid of him by satisfying the Revenue Courts that he had sufficient reason for so doing. Sir Alfred Lyall in discussing the matter came to the conclusion that in the first place this would involve a great deal of unpleasant litigation—litigation which would probably cost the landlord quite as much as the year's rent which he was asked to pay as compensation for disturbance, and which, if the cost were thrown on the raiyat, would ruin him; and further he objected that the particular grounds for getting rid of the man were such that the question would be one in which no Court could come to a satisfactory decision. He consequently rejected that suggestion and fell back upon the proposal now made in the Bill. The point is one on which there is a great deal to be said on both sides, and on which I confess I should like to reserve my final opinion. I think that, while we ought to attach very great importance to the object Sir Alfred Lyall has in view, the particular method here brought forward in the Bill is one to which an equal importance does not attach; that is to say, if this security can be attained by any other method, or if after full consideration the local officers and the Local Government think that the Bill gives sufficient security without any further safeguards, then I for my part should be very willing to be guided by their advice.

"The other points discussed in the memorial are mainly questions which must be viewed in the light that may be thrown upon them by local custom; they are consequently questions upon which I am not prepared at present to give any opinion at all, and they will be more properly discussed in Select Committee. I am glad to learn from what my hon'ble friend has mentioned that before the question comes before the Select Committee it is the intention of the Lieutenant-Governor of the North-Western Provinces and Oudh to meet the taluqdars at Lucknow, and to go into the question again fully with them. Under these circumstances I think the Select Committee will have the best possible advice; their task will be very much simplified, and they will be able to arrive at a much more satisfactory decision than they otherwise could have done.

"Finally, I have only to say that, believing as I do that this Bill is calculated to do much for the agricultural prosperity of the province, I think that Sir Alfred Lyall is to be congratulated on having initiated it. I think also that he is to be congratulated on the confidence in his justice and farsightedness which he has inspired in the taluqdars, and which has influenced them in accepting the two main principles of the Bill, although no doubt they derogate somewhat from their present powers."

His Excellency THE PRESIDENT said :—

"I shall only trouble the Council with a very few observations, and I cannot preface them in a manner more consonant to my own feelings and to the sentiments which I know to prevail amongst my colleagues than by congratulating them and myself upon the acquisition of our new member, who has already shown by the ability with which he has expressed his views what a useful and worthy accession he is likely to prove to the Legislative Council of the Government of India.

"At our last meeting in Calcutta I explained that the reason why we did not then proceed with the Bill was the unavoidable absence of our colleague, the Hon'ble Rājā Amir Hosan, who was prevented from taking his place among us by severe illness. I added, however, that the Local Government, in order to save time, intended to publish a draft of the Bill, and to collect the opinions of competent authorities upon it. Rājā Amir Hosan is, to our great, regret still disabled from attending here, but a very well-qualified representative of the taluqdars, the Vice-President of their Association, has been appointed to assist us by his advice. The Bill has now been examined by the taluqdars, and we are in possession of their views; and I am glad to learn that in the main principles of the Bill they have expressed their acquiescence. I myself am fully convinced of the expediency of legislation on the basis of this Bill, and, while congratulating the taluqdars on the moderation they have shown, I am glad to understand from the previous speakers that there is a disposition to meet, as far as possible, the wishes of the Association on minor points.

"There is one special matter, however, upon which I should like to say a word in reply to what has fallen from my hon'ble colleague Rana Shankar Baksh Singh, and that is the question of compensation for disturbance. I understand that the taluqdars are inclined to consider that, were a claim of this sort to be conceded to the tenants, it would be tantamount to an acknowledgment of a right of permanent occupancy in their favour. Now, this is a matter which has for many years past occupied my attention, and I must confess that in my opinion no such consequences can be held to flow from it. When a yearly tenant is unexpectedly evicted from his holding, the injury he sustains is not limited to the loss of his improvements, but it entails a further loss occasioned by the disturbance introduced into his plan of life and his industrial undertakings. As a landlord I have myself always recognized the equitable claim of the tenant-at-will to compensation on this account, especially under a system of agriculture such as that which prevails in Oudh and in my own country, but I never held nor admitted that it implied either a proprietary or an occupancy right. When, moreover, we remember that this claim only amounts to one year's rent (in Ireland it was assessed at between four and seven years), and that it can be neutralized by the grant of an eight years' lease, I do not think that its recognition by the legislature can be complained of by any one. I admit however, that the interests of the landlord in regard to the tenant's disturbance claim should be safeguarded by allowing him to plead certain considerations as an offset or justification. However, I will not dilate further on this particular point, because it falls more properly within the competence of the Committee to which this Bill has been referred. I will only conclude by saying that there is now no reason for further delay, and the Bill will proceed in due course through the regular stages. Between this and the time when the Select Committee will meet, the criticisms of the public on the Bill will be invited, and it will be examined anew by the Association of the taluqdars and discussed with His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor and Chief Commissioner, who will visit Lucknow for the purpose."

The Motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble MR. QUINTON also moved that the Bill and Statement of Objects and Reasons be published in the North-Western Provinces and Oudh Government Gazette in English and in such other languages as the Local Government thinks fit.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

NORTH-WESTERN PROVINCES RENT ACT, 1881. AMENDMENT BILL.

The Hon'ble MR. QUINTON also moved that the Report of the Select Committee on the Bill to amend the North-Western Provinces Rent Act, 1881, be taken into consideration. He said:—

"When I obtained leave via Calcutta to introduce this Bill and that to which the following Motion refers in February last, and refer them to a Select Committee, I stated at length the reasons which in the opinion of the North-Western Provinces Government rendered legislation necessary. I have not had the advantage of attending the meetings of the Select Committee, but the criticisms received have been duly considered and the Bills have emerged from the crucible with no alterations of importance.

"Under these circumstances I feel justified in asking the Council to pass them today."

The Motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble MR. QUINTON also moved that the Bill, as amended, be passed.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

NORTH-WESTERN PROVINCES LAND-REVENUE BILL.

The Hon'ble MR. QUINTON also moved that the Report of the Select Committee on the Bill to amend the North-Western Provinces Land-revenue Act, 1873, be taken into consideration.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble MR. QUINTON also moved that the Bill be passed.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

INDIAN MUSEUM BILL.

The Hon'ble SIR S. BAYLEY introduced the Bill to alter the constitution of the body corporate known as the Trustees of the Indian Museum, and to confer certain additional powers on that body, and moved that it be referred to a Select Committee consisting of the Hon'ble Mr. Libert, the Hon'ble Sir A. Colvin and the Mover.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble SIR S. BAYLEY also moved that the Bill and Statement of Objects and Reasons be published in the Calcutta Gazette in English and in such other languages as the Local Government thinks fit.

DEBTORS BILL.

The Hon'ble MR. LIBERT moved for leave to introduce a Bill to amend the law relating to imprisonment for debt. He said:—

"I am reminded by the audience who are facing me that the Council is practically sitting to-day as a local legislature for the territories under the administration of the Lieutenant-Governor of the North-Western Provinces and Chief Commissioner of Oudh,—territories to which a separate legislature has not been given under the provisions of the Indian Councils Act,—and accordingly this is, I think, a suitable opportunity for the introduction of a measure the immediate application of which will be confined to those territories.

"In moving recently for leave to introduce the Indian Bankruptcy Bill I referred to the important subject of imprisonment for debt, and, whilst frankly stating my personal opinion that the present law is a bad law, I went on to say that in the present state of Indian public opinion I was not prepared to propose any amendment of it which should apply to the whole of India. But I took care to reserve my opinion on the question whether the Government would not be justified in proposing legislation confined in its scope to a particular province where the balance of authoritative opinion was in favour of such legislation. It is a measure of such limited application that I am now asking leave to introduce.

"The present state of the law is this. Under the Civil Procedure Code a decree or order for the payment of money may be enforced by the imprisonment of the judgment-debtor. The Court has a discretionary power to refuse execution at the same time against both person and property, but has no discretionary power to refuse execution either against person or against property at the option of the creditor. When an application for execution of a decree is presented, it must, if it is not barred by efflux of time and is otherwise in order, be admitted, and then the Court must order execution of the decree according to the nature of the application. The Court cannot refuse to issue its warrant for the execution of the decree unless it sees cause to the contrary, and "cause to the contrary," as interpreted by the Courts, means some cause which deprives the decree-holder of the right to execute, or to execute against the party against whom execution is sought, or to execute in the mode prayed for.

"But to this general law there is one remarkable local exception. In the four districts of the Dekkhan to which the Dekkhan Agriculturists' Relief Act applies, arrest and imprisonment for debt have been altogether abolished in the case of the class of persons described in the Act as agriculturists. 'No agriculturist,' says the Act, 'shall be arrested or imprisoned in execution of a decree for money'. The Act has now been in operation for more than six years, and the periodical reports of its working show that this simple and trenchant provision has worked well, and has been attended with beneficial results. Now the Dekkhan Relief Act is, substantially, an amendment of the Civil Procedure Code, confined in its scope to a specified, but extensive and important, set of transactions; and I have always considered that such of its provisions as are found by experience to work well ought eventually to be generalized and embodied in the Code. The experience already gained of this particular provision is, I think, at least sufficient to justify us in trying it on a more extensive scale.

"It will have been seen that, under the general provisions of the Civil Procedure Code, the discretion as to whether a debtor shall be arrested and imprisoned or not rests not with the Court but with the creditor. It may be clear that the debtor has property available for attachment, and that a warrant of arrest has been applied for from vindictive or other improper motives, and yet, if the creditor asks for a warrant of arrest, a warrant must issue. The debtor may be a woman, she may even belong to the class of women who by the law of this country are exempted from public appearance in Court, and yet, if the creditor says that he wishes to send her to prison, to prison she must go.

"Now, in the year 1831 a case occurred which illustrated the working of this provision of the law and attracted a good deal of public attention. The case was one in which a paradánashin lady in Calcutta was arrested and imprisoned in execution of a decree for money obtained against her. Some correspondence with respect to the case took place between the Government of India and the Government of Bengal, and eventually, as a result of the correspondence, a circular was in November, 1831, addressed by the Government of India to all Local Governments and Administrations, stating that the Government of India had under consideration the question of amending the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure bearing upon the question of the arrest of paradánashin women in execution of the decrees of Civil Courts, but that before coming to any final conclusion on the subject the Governor General in Council thought it desirable to deal with the larger question of abolishing imprisonment for debt, and for this purpose to enquire whether sufficient reasons exist for the continued maintenance in India of the present system. Local Governments and Administrations were accordingly requested to favour the Government of India with a full expression of their opinion on the matter.

"The replies to the circular disclosed much difference of opinion with respect to the advisability of maintaining for India the present system of imprisonment for debt, and the usual arguments, with which most of us are familiar, were duly marshalled on either side.

"The arguments on which the upholders of the present system relied fall into two classes: first, arguments which, if valid at all, are valid for England as well as for India; and, secondly, arguments based on the special circumstances and conditions of India.

"To arguments of the first class belongs the assertion that "to remove from the Statute-book the penalty of arrest and imprisonment in execution of a decree for money would be to paralyze the commerce and trade of the country." These general predictions are dangerous. Precisely the same objection was made in England, first to the abolition of arrest on mesne process, and afterwards to the abolition of arrest on final process. It is the kind of objection which, as logicians would say, solvitur ambulando. The power of arrest was removed, and neither commerce nor trade shewed any symptoms of paralysis.

"Those who uphold imprisonment for debt, not as being generally expedient, but as being specially required for India, do so mainly on two grounds: first, the complexity and obscurity of Indian titles to property; and secondly, the exceptional prevalence of fraud in India, and the exceptional difficulties of detecting it.

"As to the first ground, I will only say that two wrongs do not make a right. If it is wrong, as I hold it is, to allow a debtor to pledge his person as security for his debts, it is not the less wrong because, owing to the defects of Indian property law, he finds difficulty in giving a satisfactory security over his property.

"In the argument based on the prevalence of, and difficulty of detecting, fraud there is undoubtedly much force, though, after having in the course of my professional career studied most of the reports and evidence bearing on the law of debtor and creditor in England and conversed with a large number of persons who have a practical experience of its working, I am inclined to doubt whether the moral complexion of the Indian debtor is really so much darker than that of his English brother, and whether the obstacles which can be placed in the way of a creditor realizing his debts are not as great in England as in India. But, however this may be, to make an honest, though needy, debtor liable to imprisonment, simply because fraudulent debtors are numerous and difficult to detect, appears to me something like making homicide by misadventure punishable by death, simply because the crime of murder is rife and hard to prove.

"There are, in my opinion, two principles which ought to be observed in every law of debtor and creditor. The Courts ought not to give effect to any pledge by a debtor either of his person or of the bare necessities of life. The debtor ought not to be allowed, by his own action, supplemented by the action of the Courts, either to deprive himself of his personal liberty, or to reduce himself to starvation. If he cannot obtain credit except on one or other of these securities, it is better that he should not obtain credit at all. These principles appear to me to be as applicable to India as to England—to an uncivilized as to a civilized country. The Code of Civil Procedure recognises one of these principles by exempting from seizure for debt the debtor's bare means of subsistence. But this recognition is nullified by the refusal to adopt the principle of exempting the debtor's person from seizure. Of what use is it to reserve by law to the debtor the bare necessities of life, when he can be compelled to give them up by the threat of imprisonment? By those who advocate the retention of the present system much reliance is placed on the very small proportion of actual imprisonments to warrants of arrest; and the inference drawn from this proportion is that the law, though harsh in theory, produces no hardships in practice. But my belief is that, in the great majority of cases, exemption from arrest is purchased either by renewal of bonds on extortionate terms, or by surrender of property which the law has exempted from seizure, or by surrender of property which does not belong to the debtor at all but to his relations or friends. In other words, the law enables a creditor to do indirectly what it forbids him to do directly.

"It is said that the honest debtor has an easy way out of prison through the door of insolvency. But in the first place, the honest debtor ought not to be sent to prison at all; and in the next place, the door which is provided for his release is, for some reason or other, very rarely used. There is, or was until recently, a strong concurrence of opinion to the effect that the Insolvency chapter of the Code of Civil Procedure is practically a dead letter. As to the causes of its failure,--whether it is to be accounted for by the preliminary proceedings being unnecessarily cumbrous or expensive, or by the difficulty of satisfying the Court that the debtor has not been guilty of any kind of misconduct, or by ignorance of the law and of the modes of relief available to debtors,--opinions differ; but about the fact of failure there appears to be no difference. The legislation of 1879 has done something towards the improvement of the Insolvency chapter of the Code. But I believe that the experience of those who have been concerned in the working of that chapter will bear me out in saying that notwithstanding those improvements the number of orders passed under it falls very far short of what might be expected under a thoroughly satisfactory and workable law. And whilst this is so it would be unfair to point to the provisions of the chapter as a justification of a law which, but for those provisions, would be admittedly unjust and defective.

"My own strong opinion, on the evidence before me, is that imprisonment for debt, as such, ought to be abolished in India as it has been abolished in England and other civilized countries, but that in India as in England imprisonment should be retained as a punishment in those cases where indebtedness involves an element of fraud.

"If I thought that the objections to the present law were merely theoretical, if the conclusions at which I have arrived were based merely on à priori reasoning and were not supported by practical experience, I should hesitate to bring forward proposals about the expediency of which doubts are entertained by a large number of the Indian judicial authorities. But this is not the case. The evidence collected by the Dekkhan Riots Commission is sufficient to show, if other evidence were wanting, that the existing law is not only defective in theory but oppressive in practice, and my opinions are shared by those whose authority to speak on Indian subjects no one could question. Looking round this table, I can appeal to Sir S. Bayley, who, writing in April 1882 as Resident at Hyderabad and with the experience which he had acquired in Bengal and Assam, was of opinion that the present system of imprisonment for debt is not wanted to compel payment, while it may be used to bring undue pressure to bear on a debtor, and that this is especially the case in an agricultural country where land is generally given as security for debt; to Sir Theodore Hope, who, in the speech which he made in 1879 in introducing the Dekkhan Agriculturists' Relief Bill, stated the case against the present system more forcibly and concisely than it had ever been stated before; to Sir Auckland Colvin, who was himself a member of the Dekkhan Riots Commission; and to Sir Charles Aitchison, who intimated very clearly in 1882 that, but for 'the weight of learned opinion' by which he was embarrassed, the Punjab Government would then have been ranked among the decided opponents of the present law.

"With Sir T. Hope's permission I will read to the Council some extracts from his admirable and exhaustive speech on the Dekkhan Relief Bill. In referring to the provisions of the Bill with respect to the mode of enforcing execution of a decree, he expressed himself as follows:—

'As to execution against the person by arrest and imprisonment, I rejoice to state that it is now considered expedient to abolish it altogether. Imprisonment will still be inflicted as a punishment for fraud detected on insolvency; but that is a totally different thing. The maintenance of imprisonment for debt, as found in the Indian law, is equally indefensible in principle and in practice. As to principle, the Dekkhan Riots Commission make clear that point, utilising the opinions of John Stuart Mill. Their appendices teem with evidence in detail as to the extortion and wrong of which the warrant of arrest becomes in practice the engine. Unacknowledged payments, fresh bonds for sums unadvanced, life-long slavery and even female dishonour may all be obtained—the first three constantly, by the mere production of the warrant of arrest without enforcement. They say, for instance, that in 1874 "it would seem probable that somewhere about 150,000 warrants had been used as threats only." The outcry against imprisonment from officers well qualified to judge of it has been uniform and persistent. Its abolition is unanimously recommended by the Dekkhan Riots Commission. Mr. Pedder and Miss Nightingale have in The Nineteenth Century brought the evils it causes prominently before the British public. Sir Erskine Perry gives its abolition his "unqualified approval" in a note dated December 1st, 1877. Judicial officers and pleaders take the same view as the Executive. Were it even defensible in theory, which we have seen that it is not, the abuses to which, in a country like Western India at least, it is proved to lead in practice afford sufficient ground for its condemnation in the districts to which the Bill is to apply. * * * Imprisonment was, at best, a barbarous device to meet the case of a debtor's concealing his property or refusing to give it up. Under the draft Bill, it will be quite unnecessary for these purposes, and reserved for cases of flagrant fraud or dishonesty in insolvents. In this altered position I trust that no hesitation will now be felt by the Council in abolishing a system which has been proved to be grossly abused as an engine of extortion, and is in opposition to the legislation of the civilized world.'

"These are the opinions of an officer whose experience was derived mainly from the Bombay Presidency. Let me add equally weighty testimony from another part of India. This is what was said by the Lieutenant-Governor of the North-Western Provinces in 1882:—

'5. Sir A. C. Lyall has long been of opinion that the powers of subjecting a debtor to arrest and imprisonment should not be entrusted to the decreeholder, but to the Courts only; and, in leaving with the Courts the authority to imprison, he would limit its exercise to cases in which clear proof should be shown of fraud or dishonest evasion of payment on the part of the judgment-debtor. The existing practice of placing in the creditor's hands the power of selecting his own method of coercion is, Sir A. C. Lyall believes, a relic of the old semi-barbarous debt laws which has now been eliminated from almost every civilised code of judicial procedure. The retention of this process in our Indian code would, upon this principle, be justified only by showing that it was specially required by the circumstances and conditions of the administration of the debt law in this country; and Sir Alfred Lyall does not think that any such imperative reasons for retaining it can be adduced.

‘6. It has been argued that, by restricting the process of arrest to cases of proved dishonesty or contumacious refusal to pay debts, the debtor would be given an opportunity for getting out of the way, and thus evading arrest if the Court should determine to order it. But, in the first place, the position of an absconder from process is a very uncomfortable one; so that only the class of debtors who now run away from the creditor are likely to run away from the Court; and, in the second place, the additional risk that would be imposed on the creditor in his realisation of bad debts seems quite worth incurring for the purpose of relaxing the severity with which the present system operates against all debtors, honest and dishonest, indiscriminately. Of the persons arrested, only a comparatively small number seem to be actually imprisoned after arrest; and this fact has been taken to prove that most of these debtors were able to pay but refused to do so till arrested. But it is at least quite as probable an explanation that the debtor, when arrested, preferred, rather than go to jail, to accept any terms which his creditor chose to dictate to him, and to save himself from prolonged imprisonment by executing or renewing bonds on hard or ruinous conditions, or by mortgaging or selling all his property, including property exempt by law from attachment under a Civil Court decree. The effect of arrest, in neutralising the legal exemptions from attachment, seems indeed to merit particular attention. For although section 260 of the Code of Civil Procedure provides that certain things shall be exempt from attachment under a decree, the provision can be practically of little use when the creditor can, by exercising or threatening to exercise his power of arrest, compel the debtor to give up any property whatsoever that he may possess. The Judicial Commissioner of Oudh has cited, as an instance of the difficulty which creditors would experience in realising their debts if the power of arrest were abolished, the case of a debtor who holds a pension, which the law forbids the Court to attach, but who owns no other tangible property. It is argued that such a man may be made to pay his debt while the law allows him to be arrested, but might defy his creditor if the power of arrest were removed. But, according to this view of the case, it is clear that the power of arrest now operates in a great degree to annul the exemption from attachment assigned by law to the pension, since the creditor, though he cannot directly attach the pension, can imprison the pensioner till he comes to terms that may be equivalent to its transfer.

‘7. There may be cases falling under section 251 of the Code of Civil Procedure in which it may be necessary to reserve power to the Court to order the imprisonment of a judgment-debtor who has wilfully disobeyed the Court's specific order, for instance, in the case of a suit for the recovery of a wife. (I will remark here, parenthetically, that I wish to reserve my opinion as to the expediency of a law which enables a husband to obtain the imprisonment of a contumacious or runaway wife, but this question does not arise on the present Bill, which is confined to money debts. To proceed with my quotation.) But all such cases would fall under the rule of dishonest or contumacious evasion; and it would be quite sufficient to invest the Court with discretion and authority sufficient to enforce its own specific mandates. And the reservation of the power of personal coercion to the Courts would prevent the process being employed, as there is reason to believe it occasionally is employed, to gratify a vindictive feeling on the part of the creditor, as in cases where there has been a quarrel, or where a debtor, knowing himself to be insolvent, has favoured another creditor at the expense or to the disadvantage of the decreeholder.

‘8. Sir A. C. Lyall would therefore advocate the entire abolition of the process of arrest for debt, so far as it is a process that can be set in motion at the discretion of the creditor, and would allow the Courts to order arrest only on proof of fraudulent and contumacious attempts to defraud at the operation of a decree.

‘9. It is possible that the abolition of the power of arrest would make the recovery of debts somewhat less easy; but, granting this, the law is not bound to go beyond a certain limit in aiding creditors, and in Sir A. C. Lyall's opinion it goes too far when it leaves to creditors uncontrolled power of imprisoning their debtors. Imprisonment is especially hard on the cultivator and working man, whom it deprives of their means of subsistence and of providing for their families, and these are the classes who probably are most frequently imprisoned.

“There is no branch of the law which more intimately affects the welfare of the poorer classes throughout India than the law of debtor and creditor; and if the Government of India entertains an opinion that that law is seriously defective it would incur a grave responsibility if it were to hesitate or unduly delay to give its opinion practical effect.

“Why then, I may be asked, did not the Government of India undertake legislation in 1882 or 1883? The answer is that it would have been inconvenient and inexpedient to do so at a time when analogous legislation was still under discussion in Parliament. The English legislation of 1869 proceeded on the sound principle that provisions for the relief of the honest debtor should be accompanied by provisions for the punishment of the fraudulent debtor. The Debtors Act of 1869, which abolished imprisonment for debt, as such, contains two Parts, of which one is headed ‘Abolition of Imprisonment for Debt’ and the other ‘Punishment of Fraudulent Debtors.’ Concurrently with it was passed the Bankruptcy Act of 1869, which remodelled the system of bankruptcy for England, and with reference to which the penal provisions of the Debtors Act are framed. Now in 1882 and 1883 the English bankruptcy law was in the legislative crucible, and it appeared to me that, much as the Indian insolvency law stood in need of amendment, it would be desirable to defer proposals for its amendment until the new English law had been passed, and some little experience of its working had been obtained, and that then, and not till then, would be the proper time for dealing with the cognate subject of imprisonment for debt. As soon as the new English Bankruptcy Act had become law I set about the preparation of a corresponding measure for India, but the preliminary steps occupied some time, and it was not until a fortnight ago that I was able to introduce the Indian Bankruptcy Bill into this Council. The main provisions of that Bill will operate only within the Presidency-towns and a few other like places, but it contains one Part, the Part headed ‘Fraudulent Debtors and Creditors,’ which applies to the whole of British India. This part is taken from the English Debtors Act of 1869, as amended by the English Bankruptcy Act of 1883. When read with the Indian Penal Code, it will be found to contain those full and strong powers for the arrest and punishment of fraudulent creditors and debtors which are the essential adjuncts of every proper bankruptcy law. Therefore I am now in a position to say that I have already brought forward those proposals for the amendment of the penal law which in the opinion of the Parliament of 1869 were the proper supplement and corollary of proposals for the relief of the innocent debtor.

“I may add that the interval which has elapsed since 1883 has not been wholly unfruitful of results. I was anxious to fortify myself with information about the law of imprisonment for debt in foreign countries, and through the kindness of Sir H. Maine I obtained from Her Majesty’s representatives abroad a series of interesting reports on that subject. A summary of those reports has been published, and fully bears out the statement made by Sir T. Hope in 1879 that the existing Indian system is ‘in opposition to the legislation of the civilized world.’

“I have described the steps which were taken with reference to this subject in 1881, and have explained why legislation was not initiated as an immediate consequence of those steps. It remains for me to explain the nature of the proposals which on behalf of the Government of India I am bringing forward now. Having regard to the authority and experience of some of those who are opposed to a change in the law, and bearing in mind the immense diversity of circumstances and conditions which prevails throughout this vast peninsula, we thought that, while we should not be justified in further delaying legislation, our most prudent course would be to confine its application in the first instance to some one province where the balance of authority, administrative and judicial, is clearly and strongly in its favour. There is such a province. I have read to the Council the opinion that was expressed by the Lieutenant-Governor of the North-Western Provinces and Chief Commissioner of Oudh in 1882, and I am in a position to say that the opinion which Sir A. Lyall held then he holds after four years’ further experience now. His opinion was briefly but emphatically endorsed by the Hon’ble Judges of the Allahabad High Court, who were, and are, strongly in favour of abolishing imprisonment for debt as such.

"Under these circumstances I propose that the measure which I am asking for leave to introduce should apply in the first instance only to the North-Western Provinces and Oudh, but that it should be capable of extension hereafter to other provinces by the Local Governments with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council. From the opinions which were received from Lower Burma in 1882, and again with reference to the draft Bankruptcy Bill which was published last year, there appears to be a strong feeling in that province in favour of abolishing imprisonment for debt where the debtor has not been guilty of fraud." But on the whole I think it is preferable that the primary application of the measure should be confined to the territories under one Local Government only, and that its effect there should be ascertained before the Act is extended to other parts of the country. The Bill follows generally the principles of the English Act of 1869, by enacting that a Civil Court shall not imprison for debt except in certain specified cases, and that in those cases imprisonment is to be treated not as a measure of coercion but as a punishment. The excepted cases are—

- "(a) where the order is for payment of a fine ;
- "(b) where the defaulter is a trustee or person acting in a fiduciary capacity, and the decree or order requires him, as such, to pay any money which is in his possession or under his control, or any money for which he is accountable and of which he has not discharged himself ;
- "(c) where the Court is satisfied that, since incurring the liability in respect of which the decree or order was made, the defaulter has fraudulently transferred, concealed or removed any part of his property, or committed any other act of bad faith in relation thereto, with the object or effect of impeding the enforcement of the decree or order by the attachment and sale of his property ;
- "(d) where the Court is satisfied that the defaulter either has, or has had since the date of the decree or order, the means to pay the money, and has refused or without reasonable cause neglected, or refuses or neglects, to pay the same.

"In these excepted cases the debtor may be sentenced to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months: he is to be imprisoned in the civil jail, but is nevertheless to be subject, as nearly as circumstances admit, to the discipline prescribed in the case of a criminal prisoner undergoing simple imprisonment, and his creditor is not to be liable to pay subsistence-money for his maintenance in prison. It appears to me that these consequences logically follow from the theory that imprisonment is inflicted as a penalty and not as a screw. The liability of the judgment-creditor to maintain his debtor when in jail existed under the old insolvency law in England, and the Act which imposed it was once described as giving the creditor 'the power of imprisoning and tormenting his debtor at the expense of 3s. 6d. per week.' I regard it as a bad qualification of a bad law, and think that the law and the qualification should disappear together.

"These are, very briefly, the main provisions of the Bill. For its subsidiary provisions I must refer the Council to the Bill itself and to the Statement of Objects and Reasons, both of which I propose to publish at once. The Bill is comparatively short and simple, but the subject with which it deals is as important as any that have ever engaged the attention of the Indian legislature."

The Motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble MR. ILBERT also introduced the Bill.

The Hon'ble MR. ILBERT also moved that the Bill and Statement of Objects and Reasons be published in the local official Gazettes in English and such other languages as the Local Governments think fit.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

ODDH WASIKAS BILL.

The Hon'ble MR. QUINTON moved for leave to introduce a Bill to declare certain allowances collectively known as Oudh Wasikas to be pensions within the meaning of the Pensions Act, 1871. He said :—

“Certain allowances, locally known as Amanat Wasikas, Zamanat Wasikas and Loan Wasikas, are paid by the British Government to the descendants of certain relatives and dependants of the Bahu Begam and the Vazirs and Kings of Oudh. Till the year 1880 no doubt was entertained that these allowances were pensions within the meaning of the Pensions Act, 1871. In that year it became desirable on financial grounds to commute one of the largest of them, and, a dispute having arisen as to the person entitled to receive the capitalized amount of the allowance, the Government had to consider whether it could safely pay the amount under cover of the Pensions Act to the person who appeared to be best entitled. The Hon'ble the Advocate General inclined to the opinion that a Wasika was a pension within the meaning of the Act, but thought there was a good deal to be said in favour of the opposite view. As the sum involved was so very large that the Government would not have been justified in incurring any risk in disposing of it, a special Bill was introduced into the Legislative Council and passed as the Taj Mahal's Pension Act, 1881.

“This step, which the Government was compelled to take for its own protection, necessarily suggested a doubt as to the applicability of the Pensions Act to Wasikas.

“As it is expedient on political considerations that there should be no room for question as to the applicability of the Act to Wasikas, the Government has decided to introduce this Bill to remove the doubts created by the legislation of 1881.”

The Motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble MR. QUINTON also introduced the Bill.

The Hon'ble MR. QUINTON also moved that the Bill and Statement of Objects and Reasons be published in the North-Western Provinces and Oudh Government Gazette in English and in such other languages as the Local Government thinks fit.

The Motion was put and agreed to.

The Council adjourned to Wednesday, the 23rd June, 1886.

(Chapter II.—Of certain Rights and Liabilities of Landlords, Under-proprietors and Tenants.—Sections 4-7.)

[Act VIII, 1885, section 178]

4. Nothing in any contract made between a landlord and a tenant before or after the passing of this Act shall entitle a landlord to eject a tenant or enhance his rent otherwise than in accordance with the provisions of this Act.

Nothing in any contract made between a landlord and a tenant after the passing of this Act shall take away or limit the right of a tenant, as provided by this Act, to make improvements and claim compensation for them:

Provided that nothing in this section shall affect the terms or conditions of a lease granted bonâ fide for the reclamation of waste land.

OF CERTAIN RIGHTS AND LIABILITIES OF LANDLORDS, UNDER-PROPRIETORS AND TENANTS.

Right of Occupancy.

5. Tenants who have lost all proprietary right, whether superior or subordinate, in the lands which they hold or cultivate, shall, so long as they pay the rent payable for the same according to the provisions of this Act, have a right of occupancy under the following rule:—

Every such tenant who, within thirty years next before the thirteenth day of February, 1856, has been, either by himself, or by himself and some other person from whom he has inherited, in possession as proprietor in a village or estate, shall be deemed to possess a heritable but not a transferable right of occupancy in the land which he cultivated or held in such village or estate on the twenty-fourth day of August, 1866: provided that such land has not come into his occupation, or the occupation of the person from whom he has inherited, for the first time since the said thirteenth day of February, 1856: provided also that no such tenant shall have a right of occupancy in any village or estate in which he or any co-sharer with him possesses any under-proprietary right.

Nothing contained in the former part of this section shall affect the terms of any agreement in writing hereafter entered into between a landlord and tenant.

5. (A). Nothing contained in section 5 shall be deemed to restrict the power of the landlord to confer on any persons other than those therein mentioned a right of occupancy in the lands which they hold or cultivate.

6. If a tenant having a right of occupancy be ejected, in accordance with the provisions of section 37, from the land in which he possesses such right, he shall thereupon lose his right of occupancy in such land.

Tenants' Right to Pattas.

7. Every tenant is entitled to receive from his landlord a patta or memorandum of the terms of the holding, signed by him

proprietors and Tenants.—Sections 8-13.)

or his authorized agent, and containing the following particulars:—

the quantity of land and, where the fields comprised in the patta have been numbered in a Government survey, the number of each field:

the term for which the tenancy is to run:

the amount of rent payable:

the instalments in which and the times at which the same is to be paid:

and, if the rent is payable in kind, the proportion of produce to be delivered, and the time, manner and place of delivery.

[any special conditions of the lease:]

8. Tenants having a right of occupancy are entitled to receive pattas having right of occupancy is entitled. at rates of rent determined in accordance with the provisions contained in sections 32, 33 and 34.

9. Tenants not having a right of occupancy are entitled to pattis for the terms and at the rates prescribed in Chapter IV (B) of this Act.

Landlords' Right to Counterparts.

10. Every landlord who grants a patta is entitled to receive from the tenant a counterpart executed by him.

II. Vide section 43 (A).

Arrears of Revenue or Rent.

12. Any instalment of revenue or rent which is not paid on or before the day when the same becomes due, whether under a written agreement or according to law or local usage, shall be deemed to be, for the purposes of this Act, an arrear of revenue or rent, as the case may be:

Provided that, unless the proprietor and under-proprietor shall have otherwise agreed in writing, the rent payable to the former by the latter shall be held to become due one month before the date fixed for the payment of the revenue on account of the village in which the land in respect of which such rent is payable is situate, and to be payable in the same number of instalments as the said revenue; and the amount of each instalment of such rent shall bear the same proportion to the whole of such rent payable for the year as the amount of each instalment of such revenue bears to the whole of such revenue payable for the year.

Receipts.

13. Receipts for rent and acknowledgments of the tender of rent shall specify the year or years on account of which it has been paid or tendered; and any refusal to make such specification shall be held to be a withholding of a receipt or acknowledgment.

If such receipt or acknowledgment is withheld from any under-proprietor or tenant without sufficient cause, he may recover compensation from the landlord, not exceeding the amount so paid or tendered.

Deposit of Revenue or Rent in Court without Suit.

[having a right of occupancy, or holding under an unexpired lease or under an agreement or decree]

14. If any co-sharer, under-proprietor, or tenant ^{Power to pay into Court, without suit brought, amount of revenue or rent due.} shall, at the place where the revenue or rent of the land held or cultivated by him is usually payable, tender to the person authorized to receive the same payment of the full amount of such revenue or rent due in respect of such land, and if such amount is not accepted and a receipt in full forthwith granted, it shall be lawful for the co-sharer, under-proprietor or tenant, without any suit having been instituted against him, to deposit such amount in Court to the credit of the person authorized to receive it.

Such deposit shall, so far as regards the co-sharer, under-proprietor or tenant, and all person-claiming through or under him, operate as a payment then made to the lambardár or landlord of the amount so deposited.

15. The Court shall receive such deposits on ^{Procedure on making and withdrawing such payment.} the written application of the co-sharer, under-proprietor or tenant, or his recognized agent; the application shall bear a stamp of eight annas, and on such co-sharer, under-proprietor, tenant or agent making a declaration in the form set forth in Schedule A hereto annexed, or as near thereto as circumstances will admit, the Court shall give him a receipt for the deposit.

Such declaration shall be verified in the manner prescribed for the verification of plaints in the Code of Civil Procedure, and the provisions of sections 52 of the said Code shall apply to the person making the verification.

Upon receiving the money so deposited, the Court shall issue to the person to whose credit it has been deposited a notice in the form set forth in Schedule B hereto annexed.

Such notice shall be served by the proper ^{Service of notice.} officer, without the payment of any fee, upon the person to whom it is addressed, or upon his recognized agent.

In the absence of any such agent, it may be served by putting up a copy of the same at the court-house, and another copy at the ordinary place of residence, within the jurisdiction of the Court, of such person, or, if there be no such place, at the place where the revenue or rent is usually paid to the lambardár or landlord, as the case may be, for the land in respect of which the money has been deposited.

If the person on whom such notice is served, or his recognized agent, appears and applies that the money in deposit be paid to him, it shall immediately be paid accordingly.

The Oudh Rent Bill.(Chapter II.—Of certain Rights and Liabilities of Landlords, Under-proprietors and Tenants.—Sections 16-19.)

16. Whenever a deposit has been made under Limitation of suits for the provisions of this Act, balance of revenue or no suit shall be brought rent. against the depositor or his representative on account of any revenue or rent which accrued due in respect of the land last hereinbefore mentioned prior to the date of the deposit, unless such suit is instituted within six months from the date of the service of the notice mentioned in section 15.

17. If, at the time of passing the decision in Compensation for any such suit, the Court is non-acceptance of revenue or rent. satisfied that the full amount of revenue or rent due at the time of the deposit was tendered to, and was not accepted by, the lambardār or landlord or his recognized agent, as the case may be, or that a receipt or acknowledgment was withheld for such amount without sufficient cause, the Court may award to such depositor compensation from the lambardār or landlord, not exceeding the amount so paid or tendered.

If the Court be satisfied that the amount of the deposit was less than the amount of revenue or rent due, the Court shall pay the amount of the deposit to the lambardār or landlord, and shall make a decree for the balance due by the depositor.

Illegal Enforcement of Payment of Rent.

18. If payment of rent or of any sum in excess Compensation to under-proprietor or tenant for illegal enforcement of payment. of the rent legally claimable is illegally enforced, and any under-proprietor or tenant institutes a suit to recover compensation for such enforcement, the Court may award to him compensation, not exceeding the sum of rupees two hundred, in addition to any amount for which it makes a decree in respect of such payment.

An award of compensation under the former part of this section shall not bar any prosecution to which the person enforcing such payment may be liable under any law for the time being in force.

Abatement of Rent.

19. No suit for an abatement of rent shall be Suit for abatement of rent brought by any under-proprietor or tenant, except on the ground that the area of the land has been diminished by deluvion, or on some ground specified in any lease, agreement or decree, under which he holds:

Provided that, if the under-proprietor hold a sub-settlement in a revenue-paying estate, no such abatement shall be allowed to the under-proprietor, unless a remission of revenue has been allowed on the same ground and by competent authority in the same estate.

[provide that if the under-proprietor hold a sub-settlement, or if the tenant hold a lease for a term of not less than five years, or have a right of occupancy in a revenue-paying estate, no such remission shall be allowed to him, unless a remission of revenue shall have been allowed on the same ground and by competent authority in the same estate]

[or unless it has been let to any other person by such landlord or agent]

Remission of Rent.

20. Notwithstanding anything contained in section 19 [] the Court, in making a decree for an arrear of rent, may allow such remission from the rent payable by any under-proprietor or tenant as appears equitable, if the area of the land in his occupation has been materially diminished by diluvion or otherwise, or if the produce of such land has been diminished by draught or hail, or other calamity beyond his control, to such an extent that the full amount of rent payable by him cannot, in the opinion of the Court, be equitably decreed.

Relinquishment of Land.

21. Every tenant shall continue liable for the rent of the land in his holding, unless on or before the fifteenth of March in any year he gives notice in writing to the landlord or his recognised agent of his desire to relinquish such land, and relinquishes it accordingly [].

If the landlord or his recognised agent refuse to receive such notice or to sign and deliver a receipt for the same, the tenant may, before the latest date prescribed for giving such notice, apply to the tahsildar or proper officer, and written notice of such desire shall thereafter be served on such landlord or agent, and the tenant shall pay the costs of service.

The notice shall, if practicable, be served personally on the landlord or agent; but if he cannot be found, service may be made by affixing the notice at his usual place of residence, or, if he does not reside in the district wherein the land is situate, at the choupal or other conspicuous place in the village wherein the land is situate.

21. (A). If a tenant voluntarily abandons his holding without informing his landlord and without arranging for the cultivation of the holding, it shall be lawful for the landlord at any time after the fifteenth of May to enter on the holding. Before a landlord enters under this section, he shall file a notice in the prescribed form with the supervisor-kauāngo, stating that he has treated the holding as abandoned and is about to enter on it accordingly.

When a landlord enters under this section, the tenant shall be entitled to institute a suit under section 83, clause 10, of this Act, to recover occupancy of the holding; and the Court shall, on being satisfied that the tenant did not voluntarily abandon his holding, order recovery of possession on such terms, if any, with respect to compensation to persons injured and payment of arrears of rent as to the Court may seem just.

Compensations for Tenants' Improvements.

22. If any tenant, or the person from whom he has inherited, make any improvements on the land in his occupation as are hereinafter mentioned, neither he nor his representative shall be ejected from the same land, unless and until he or his representative, as the case may be, has received compensation for the [] improvements made on the land by him, or the person from whom he has inherited, or whom he represents [].

[outlay, in money or labour, or both, expended in making such]
[within thirty years next before the date of such enhancement or ejection]

23. Except as provided in the next following section, no tenant shall be entitled to claim compensation for an improvement made subsequently to the passing of this Act without the written consent of the landlord.

24. If in any case the tenant apply to the landlord for his written consent to his making an improvement on his holding, and the landlord withhold or refuse to grant it, it shall be lawful for the tenant to apply to the Deputy Commissioner for sanction to make the improvement. The Deputy Commissioner, after taking into consideration any objections which the landlord may have to urge, either on the ground that—

(a) the improvement is too costly or is unsuitable to the nature of the tenant's holding, or that

(b) he is prepared to make such improvement himself,

shall grant sanction on such conditions as he may consider fair and equitable or refuse the application. No appeal shall lie against an order passed by the Deputy Commissioner under this section.

25. The word "improvements," as used in this Act, means works by which the annual letting value of the land has been, and at the time of demanding compensation continues to be, increased, and comprises—

1st.—The construction of works for the storage of water, for the supply of water for agricultural purposes, for drainage, and for protection against floods; the construction of wells; the reclaiming and clearing of waste lands and jungles, and other works of a like nature.

2nd.—The renewal or reconstruction of any of the foregoing works, or such alterations therein or additions thereto as are not required for maintaining the same, and which increase durably their value.

Act VIII, 1885, section 53

25 (A). In estimating the Principle on which compensation is to be made for improvements which are incidental, the following principles shall be observed:

- (a) to the amount by which the value, or the produce, of the holding, or the value of that produce, is increased by the improvement;
- (b) to the condition of the improvement and the probable duration of its effects;
- (c) to the labour and capital required for the making of such an improvement;
- (d) to any reduction in remission of rent or any other advantage given by the landlord to the tenant in consideration of the improvement; and
- (e) in the case of a reclamation, or of the conversion of un irrigated into irrigated land, to the length of time during which the tenant has had the benefit of the improvement.

Date, clause 2

25. (B) When a Court has assessed the amount of the compensation payable to a tenant under the provisions of the last preceding section, it may, if both landlord and tenant desire that the compensation assessed, instead of being paid wholly in money, shall be paid wholly or partly in any other way, proceed to give judgment according to the terms agreed upon between them.

26. A landlord shall be entitled to make any improvement of the nature specified in section 25 on the holding of a tenant not having a right of occupancy with or without the consent of the tenant.

A landlord who proposes to make an improvement shall, if the tenant is to be constructed in the holding of a tenant, give notice to the tenant through the talukdar.

Survey and Measurement.

27. Every landlord, his agents and surveyors, may at all reasonable times enter and measure every portion of any land comprised in his estate for the purpose of surveying and measuring the same.

CHAPTER III

COMMUTATION AND PAYMENT OF RENT IN KIND

28. In any district in which a settlement of revenue is in progress, it shall be in the discretion of any officer employed in making or revising such settlement, in any case in which the rent of a tenant having a right of occupancy is paid in kind, or by the estimated value of a portion of the crop, to commute, on the application either of the landlord or the tenant, such rent into a rent in money.

30. Wherever rent is taken by division of the produce in kind, or by estimate of the standing crop, or other procedure of a similar nature, requiring the presence both of the tenant and landlord either personally or by a recognized agent, if either party neglect to be present at the proper period, or if a dispute arise between the parties regarding such division, estimate or appraisement, either party may present an application to the Court on a paper bearing a stamp of eight annas, requesting that a proper officer be deputed to make the division, estimate or appraisement.

31. On receiving such application, the Court shall issue a written notice to the other party to attend on the date and at the place specified in the notice, and shall depute an officer before whom the division, estimate or appraisement shall be made.

The award of such officer in respect of such division, estimate or appraisement shall be final, unless, within one month from the date thereof, either party institutes a suit to set it aside.

[The amount of rent thus fixed shall be binding upon the parties concerned.]

[All decisions already passed by any such officer, commuting rents in kind or by valuation to rents in money, shall, subject to the same appeal as is given by this Act in respect of decisions passed in suits, be binding on the parties concerned.]

[29.] The Chief Commissioner of Oudh may extend the provisions of section 28, and declare officers to hear and decide cases therein, to any district or portion of a district in which a settlement of revenue is not in progress ; and may declare that officers are empowered to hear and decide cases under this section :

and may make rules for the guidance of officers acting under this section and section 28, and, from time to time, [with the like sanction] alter and add to the rules so made :

Provided that such rules, alterations and additions are consistent with this Act.]

CHAPTER IV

ENHANCEMENT AND FIXING RATES OF RENT.

A.—Tenants with Right of Occupancy.

32. No tenant having a right of occupancy in any land shall, in case of dispute as to the rent to be paid in respect of such land, be liable to an enhancement of the rent, except in pursuance of a decree made under this Act on one of the following grounds (that is to say) :—

1st ground.—That the rate of rent paid by him is below the rate of rent usually paid, by the same class of tenants having a right of occupancy, for land of a similar description and with similar advantages, situate in the same village.

Rule.—In this case the Court shall enhance his rent to such amount as the plaintiff demands, not exceeding such rate.

2nd ground.—That the rate of rent paid by him is more than 12½ per cent. below the rate of rent usually paid, by tenants of the same class not having a right of occupancy, for land of a similar description and with similar advantages, situate in the same village.

The Oudh Rent Bill.

(Chapter IV.—Enhancement and fixing Rates of Rent.—Sections 33-35A)

Rule.—In this case the Court shall enhance his rent to such amount as the plaintiff demands, not exceeding such rate, less 12 per cent.

3rd ground.—That the quantity of land held by him exceeds the quantity for which he has previously paid rent.

Rule.—In this case the Court shall decree rent for the land in excess, at rates to be fixed by the first or the second of the rules contained in this section, as the case may be.

Nothing contained in the previous part of this section shall affect the terms of any agreement in writing hereafter entered into between a landlord and tenant.

33 After a decision has been passed in accordance with section 32 no suit shall lie for re-enhancement of such rent until the expiration of five years from the date of such decision, except on the said 3rd ground, or, in the case referred to in section 34, until by re-assessment within the said term of five years the revenue of such land has been increased.

34. On such re-assessment, if the rent of such tenant cannot be enhanced under section 32 by reason of the absence of the grounds therein mentioned, the landlord may institute a suit to enhance the rent to a sum not exceeding double the average amount of the revenue imposed at such re-assessment upon land of a similar description and with similar advantages held by tenants of the same class in the same village.

B—Other Tenants.

35. Every tenant, not being a tenant with a right of occupancy, shall be entitled to retain possession of his holding occupied by him at the time of the passing of this Act at the rent then payable by him for a period of seven years from the date of the last change in his rent or of the last alteration in the area of the holding.

35. (A). Every such tenant hereafter admitted to the occupation of a holding shall be entitled to retain possession of his holding occupied by him for a period of seven years from the date of his admission at a rent agreed upon with the landlord in accordance with the provisions of this Act, and every tenant, not being a tenant with a right of occupancy, in the area of whose holding or in the amount of whose rent any charge shall be made by the landlord subsequently to the passing of this Act, shall be deemed to be admitted to the occupation of a holding within the meaning of this section.

Explanation.—Holding means a parcel or parcels of land held by a tenant and forming the subject of a separate engagement. Such engagement may be express or implied.

36. If the landlord desires to enhance the rent Enhancement or ex- of any tenancy on the expiration of statutory term of the term of seven tenancy tenanted. years referred in sections 35 and 35 (A), or at any time thereafter, he shall cause a notice to that effect to be served in the manner prescribed in section 36B. Until such notice is issued, the tenant shall be entitled to hold at the former rate.

Provided—(a) that the enhancement shall in no case exceed one anna in the rupee or six and a quarter per cent, on the annual rent payable when the notice is issued.

(b) that the terms of this section shall not apply to a tenant paying rent in kind.

36 (A). The notice shall be given in Hindi The notice shall be given in Hindi or in English, and shall specify enhancement. The land, the nature of the present rent and the amount of the enhancement, and shall require the tenant, at the time of paying the enhancement, to make the deposit on the fifteenth day of May next following, or to institute a suit in the District Court to contest the notice of enhancement within a month from the date on which it was served.

36 (B). On the application of the landlord On the application of the landlord Section 36 (B) shall apply to the Tahsildar or officer authorized to serve such notices, the notice shall be served by such officer on or before the fifteenth day of February, and the landlord shall pay the cost of service.

The notice shall, if practicable, be served personally on the tenant. But if he cannot be found, service may be made by affixing the notice at his usual place of residence, or, if he does not reside in the district wherein the land is situate, at the village chaupal or other conspicuous place in the village wherein the land is situate.

36 (C). A tenant may A tenant may contest enhancement or may contest liability to enhancement on any of the following grounds—

1st—That he holds a lease or agreement or a decree of Court under the terms of which he is not liable to enhancement.

2nd—That he has a right of occupancy in the land.

3rd—That the enhancement claimed is in excess of the rate authorized by law.

4th—That seven years have not elapsed since the date of the last change in the rent or alteration of the area of the holding by the landlord.

The Oudh Rent Bill.(Chapter IV.—Enhancement and fixing Rates of Rent.—Sections 36D-36J.)

5th — That the notice has not been served in the manner prescribed in section 36 B.

36 (D). If the objection of the tenant is found by the Court to be invalid, or, if no suit has been instituted to contest the notice within a period of thirty days from the day on which it was served, on the expiration of such period, the tenant shall, if he retain possession of the land after the fifteenth day of May next following the date of service of the notice, be held liable for the enhanced rent.

36 (E). If the tenant accepts the enhanced rent claimed by the notice, or remains in possession of the land under the terms of the preceding section, he shall be entitled to hold the land at such rent for a further period of seven years.

36 (F). If the tenant refuses to accept the enhancement claimed and recedes the holding, he shall be entitled to recover by separate suit from the landlord compensation for any improvements made by him on the holding.

36 (G). Except in the cases mentioned in the next following section, the rent of a tenant admitted to the possession of any land the tenure of which has determined according to the provisions of this Act shall not exceed by more than one anna in the rupee, or six and a quarter per cent, the rent payable by the tenant immediately preceding to time, within periods of not less than seven years, the limits of the enhancement to which tenants, not having rights of occupancy, are liable.

36 (K). Nothing in the preceding sections shall bar the right of a landlord to an enhancement of rent on the ground that the productive powers of the land held by the tenant have been increased by an improvement effected by, or at the expense of, the landlord during the currency of the tenancy.

Where an enhancement is claimed on the ground of such an improvement, the Court in determining the amount of such enhancement shall have regard to—firstly—the increase in the productive powers of the land caused, or likely to be caused, by the improvement;

secondly—to the cost of the improvement;

thirdly—to the cost of the cultivation required for the utilisation of the improvement.

CHAPTER V.

EJECTMENT.

Tenants with Right of Occupancy.

37. No tenant having a right of occupancy, or holding under an unexpired lease, or special agreement, or decree of Court, shall be ejected otherwise than in execution of a decree for ejectment:

[Act XIX, 1868, section 11.]

Provided that, if the tenant have a right of occupancy in the land from which the landlord desires to eject him, the decree shall not be made, unless, at the date of the decree, a decree against such tenant for an arrear of rent in respect of such land has remained unsatisfied for fifteen days or upwards.

Other Tenants.

38. A tenant not having a right of occupancy, and not holding under an unexpired lease, or an agreement, or a decree of Court, may be ejected in accordance with the provisions of this Act, first, in execution of a decree for [] ejectment under section 43A or by application under section 43; or, second, by notice given by his landlord in the manner described in the next following sections.

[Act XIX, 1868, section 12.]

[arrears of rent or for]

38(A). A landlord who desires to eject a tenant on the expiration of his tenancy may serve a notice of ejectment on such tenant, but shall deposit with the notice in the hands of the officer authorized to serve the notice a sum equal to the rent payable by the tenant for the year immediately preceding as compensation for disturbance.

In the case of a tenant paying rent in kind the amount of compensation to be deposited under this section shall be a sum equal to the average annual value of the produce paid as rent during the preceding three years.

Provided that no such compensation shall be payable to a tenant in respect of so much of his holding as he has sub-let without the consent of the landlord, or in the cases provided for by sections 36 (1), 43 and 43 (A).

[Act XIX, 1868, section 43.]

39. The notice mentioned in section 38 A shall

Notice of ejectment be written in Hindi and or in any other language in use in the district of occupancy, and shall be signed by the landlord or by the tenant if he is to be ejected; and it shall be a condition that if the tenant refuses to execute the ejectment, he must, within thirty days of the service of the notice, or the expiry of the time specified in the notice, deposit with the officer the sum of five rupees.

On the application of the landlord to the Magistrate or officer authorised to serve such notice, the notice shall be served by such officer on or before the fifteenth day of October, and the landlord shall pay the costs of service.

The notice shall, if practicable, be served personally on the tenant. But if he cannot be found, service may be made by affixing the notice at his usual place of residence, or, if he does not reside in the district wherein the land is situate, at the village chak or other conspicuous place in the village wherein the land is situate.

[Act XIX, 1868, section 37.]

40. A tenant on whom a notice has been served on which he is liable to be ejected, may contest his liability to be ejected from the land specified therein on any of the following grounds:—

1st—That he holds a lease or an agreement, or a decree of Court, under the terms of which he is not liable to such ejectment.

2nd—That he has a right of occupancy in the land.

3rd—If he be a tenant not having a right of occupancy, that notice of ejectment has not been served upon him in manner provided by section 39.

4th—That seven years have not elapsed since the date of the last change of rent or alteration of the area of the holding.

5th—That he is entitled to compensation for disturbance, and that the landlord has not deposited the sum required by this Act.

The Oudh Rent Bill.(Chapter V.—Ejectment.—Sections 40A-43.)

Explanation.—A tenant is not entitled to contest a notice of ejectment on any ground other than that he holds a lease under the terms of which he is not liable to ejectment.

40 (A). If the tenant has any claim for compensation for improvements effected by him on the holding, he shall file with his plaint a statement of the claim and of the grounds on which it is based.

40 (B). If the Court finds the objections of the tenant to be invalid, it shall determine the amount of the compensation, if any, due for improvements, and shall declare the ejectment to be conditional on payment of that amount into Court.

41. If the tenant on whom such notice of ejectment has been served fails, if notice is not contested, to comply with the terms of the notice, to institute a suit to establish his liability to be ejected, his tenancy of the land in respect of which the notice has been served shall be held to cease on the expiration of the period of six months, unless, after the service, the landlord has expressly authorised him to continue to occupy the land.

[Act XIX, 1868, section 41.]

42. If no such suit is instituted, and the tenant has failed to pay the amount of the compensation, if any, due for improvements, the Court may, if it is satisfied that the tenant is liable to be ejected, order the ejectment of the tenant, and may, if it is so satisfied, award costs to the landlord, and may, if it is so satisfied, award to the tenant such assistance as may be necessary for such assistance, and, if the Court is satisfied that notice of ejectment was duly served on such person, and that he has failed to pay the amount of the compensation, if any, due for improvements, which may be necessary for such assistance, it shall give such assistance as may be necessary.

[Ditto, section 15.]

Provided that nothing done by the Court under the previous part of this section shall affect the right of any tenant to institute a suit to establish his liability to be ejected, and to recover compensation for the same.

[under the provisions of section 11]

43. If a landlord desires to eject a tenant, and the tenant has failed to pay the amount of the compensation, if any, due for improvements, the Court may, if it is satisfied that the tenant is liable to be ejected, order the ejectment of the tenant, and may, if it is so satisfied, award costs to the landlord, and may, if it is so satisfied, award to the tenant such assistance as may be necessary for such assistance, and, if the Court is satisfied that notice of ejectment was duly served on such person, and that he has failed to pay the amount of the compensation, if any, due for improvements, which may be necessary for such assistance, it shall give such assistance as may be necessary.

[Act XIX, 1861, section 35.]

If the amount be not so paid, the Deputy Commissioner shall, unless good cause be shown to the contrary, eject the tenant.

[Act VIII, 1895, section 25.]

43 (A). A decree for ejectment may be passed against a tenant on the ground—

(a) that he has used the land comprised in his holding in a manner which renders it unfit for the purposes of his tenancy; or,

(b) where the rent is payable in kind, that his cultivation has diminished to a point which by the custom of the locality involves the forfeiture of the holding.

The tenant shall continue liable for the rent of the land until the decree is executed.

General.

[Act XIX, 1868, section 38.]

44. No tenant [] shall in any case, whether in execution of a decree or otherwise, be ejected from the land in his occupancy, except between the first day of April and the fifteenth day of June in any year after the passing of this Act [].

[unless, while his rent is in arrear, he has failed to cultivate the land in his possession in accordance with the terms on which he holds it]

[Act XIX, 1868, section 39.]

45. A thikadār liable to be ejected under the provisions of this Act may be ejected at any time during his tenancy.

46. Any tenant ejected in accordance with the provisions of this Act shall be entitled to receive from the landlord the value of any growing crops or other ungathered products of the earth belonging to such tenant, and being on the land at the time of his ejectment:

Provided that, if the land shall have been sown or planted by the tenant after the service on him of the notice mentioned in section 39, he shall not be so entitled, unless, after such service, the landlord has expressly authorised him to continue to occupy the land.

Sir lands.

46 (A). The rights conferred upon tenants by sections 24, 35, 35(A), 36, 36(E), 36(F), 36(G), 36(I) and 38(A) shall not accrue to cultivators of any of the following lands:—

(a) Land which for the seven years immediately preceding the passing of this Act has been continuously dealt with as sir in the distribution of proprietary profits and charges. This condition shall be presumed, until the contrary is proved, where land was recorded as sir at settlement and has been continuously so recorded since:

(b) Land which for the seven years immediately preceding the passing of this Act has been continuously cultivated by the proprietor himself or by his servants or by hired labour.

46 (B). A person holding land as a thikadār or mortgagee shall not, while so holding, acquire any of the rights enumerated in the preceding section in any of the land comprised in his thika or mortgage.

Explanation.—A person having such rights in land does not lose them by subsequently taking a thika or mortgage in which his holding is comprised

CHAPTER VI.

DISTRESS FOR ARREARS OF RENT.

47. When an arrear of rent is due from any tenant, the landlord may recover of arrears of rent by distress. distrain the produce of the land in respect of which the arrear is due, subject to the rules contained in the following sections:

Provided that, when a tenant has given security for the payment of his rent, the produce of the land in respect of which such rent is payable shall not be liable to distress so long as the security is in force.

48. Distress shall not be made for any arrear which has been due for a longer period than one year; nor for the recovery of any sum in excess of the rent payable in the last preceding year for the land in respect of which the arrear is due, unless the tenant has agreed in writing to pay such excess, or unless he has been declared to be liable for the same by a decree of Court.

49. The power of distress vested by section 47 in landlords may be exercised by managers under the Court of Wards, managing agents and tahsildars of estates held under khām management, and other persons lawfully entrusted with the charge of land, and also by the agents employed by landlords or any such persons as aforesaid in the collection of rent, if expressly authorised by power-of-attorney to distress:

Provided that, if any such agent, purporting to act in the exercise of the said power, commits an act which, under the provisions of this chapter, is illegal, the person employing such agent shall be liable, as well as the agent, to be sued for compensation for any injury caused by such act.

50. Any person empowered to distress property under section 47 or section 49 may employ a servant or other person to make the distress; but in every such case he shall give to such servant or person a written authority for the same, and the distress shall be made in the name and on the responsibility of the person giving such authority.

 reaped or gathered and deposited in any threshing-
 floor or place for treading out grain or the like, whether in the field or within a homestead, may be distrained by persons invested with powers of
 distress under this Act.

But no such crops or products, other than the produce of the land in respect of which an arrear
 of rent is due, or of land held under the same agreement as the land in respect of which the arrear is due, and no grain or other produce
 after it has been stored by the cultivator, and no other property whatsoever, shall be liable to distress under this Act.

52. Before or at the time when any distress is a written demand for the amount of the arrear, together with an account exhibiting the grounds on which the demand is made.

The demand and account shall, if practicable, be served personally on the defaulter, but if he cannot be found, they shall be affixed at his usual place of residence, and shall thereupon be deemed to be duly served upon him.

53. Unless the amount of the demand is by the tenant, and may be stored in such granaries or other places as are commonly used by him

 for the purpose.

If the tenant neglect to do so, the distrainer may cause the said crops or products to be reaped or gathered, and in such case shall store the same either in such granaries or other places as aforesaid, or in some other convenient place in the neighbourhood.

In either case the distrained property shall be placed in the charge of some proper person appointed by the distrainer for the purpose.

If the crops or products do not, from their nature, admit of being stored, the distress shall be made (if at all) at least twenty days before the time when the crops or products or any part thereof would ordinarily be fit for cutting or gathering.

The Oudh Rent Bill.(Chapter VI.—Distress from Arrears of Rent.—Sections 55-59.)

55. If a distrainer is opposed or apprehends resistance, and desires to obtain the assistance of a public officer, he may apply to the Court, and the Court may, if it think necessary, depute an officer to assist the distrainer in making the distress.

56. If at any time after property has been distrained as aforesaid, and before the sale thereof as hereinafter provided, the owner tender payment of the arrear demanded and of the costs of the distress, the distrainer shall receive the same and give a receipt therefor, and shall forthwith withdraw the distress.

57. Within five days from the time of storing any distrained crops or products, or, if such crops or products do not from their nature admit of being stored, within five days from the time of making the distress, the distrainer shall apply for sale of the same to the proper officer authorized to sell property in satisfaction of decrees of the Court within whose jurisdiction the distrained property is situate.

58. The application shall be in writing; it shall contain a list or description of the property distrained, and it shall state the name of the defaulter, his place of residence, the amount due and the place in which the distrained property is deposited.

Together with the application, the distrainer shall deliver to the proper officer the sum payable for the service of a notice upon the defaulter as hereinafter provided.

59. Immediately on receipt of the application, the proper officer shall send a copy of it to the Court, and shall serve a notice in the form contained in Schedule C hereto annexed, or to the like effect, on the person whose property has been distrained, requiring him either to pay the amount demanded, or within fifteen days from the receipt of the notice to institute a suit to contest the demand.

The officer shall at the same time send to the Court, for the purpose of being put up at the court-house, a proclamation fixing a day for the sale of the distrained property, not less than twenty days from the date of the proclamation; and shall deliver a copy of the proclamation to the peon charged with the service of the notice, to be put up by him in the place where the distrained property is deposited.

The proclamation shall contain a description of the property, and shall specify the demand for which it is sold, and the place where the sale is to be held.

proper officer thinks that it is likely to sell there to better advantage.

The property shall be sold by public auction in one or more lots as the officer holding the sale thinks advisable; and if the demand, with the costs of distress and sale, be satisfied by the sale of a portion of the property, the distress shall be immediately withdrawn with respect to the remainder.

65. If, on the property being put up for sale, a price which the officer holding the sale shall think fair be not offered, and if the owner of the property or his recognized agent apply to have the sale postponed until the next day, or (if a market be held at the place of sale) until the next market-day, the sale shall be postponed until such day, and shall be then completed at whatever price may be offered.

66. The price of every lot shall be paid in ready money at the time of sale, or as soon thereafter as the officer holding the sale thinks fit; and in default of such payment the property shall be put up again and re-sold.

When the purchase-money has been paid in full, the officer holding the sale shall give the purchaser a certificate stating the property purchased by him and the price paid therefor.

67. The officer holding the sale shall deduct from the proceeds one anna for every rupee and fraction of a rupee on account of the expenses attending the sale.

He shall then pay to the distrainer the expenses incurred by him on account of the distress and of the notice and proclamation of sale provided in section 59, to such amount as, after a statement of the statement of expenses made by the distrainer, the officer thinks proper to allow.

The certificate shall be applied to the discharge of the debt for which the distress was made, and the surplus (if any) shall be delivered to the person whose property has been sold.

68. Officers holding sales of property under this Act, and all persons employed by, or subordinate to, such officers, are forbidden to purchase, either directly or indirectly, property sold by such officers.

69. The officer mentioned in section 57 shall bring to the notice of the Court any illegal act which shall come to his knowledge as having been committed by any person in making a distress under this Act.

If in any case, on proceeding to hold a sale under this Act, such officer finds that the owner has not received due notice of the distress and intended sale, he shall postpone the sale and report the case to the Court, and the Court shall direct the issue of another notice and proclamation of sale under section 59, or make such other order as it thinks proper.

70. When such officer has gone to any place for the purpose of holding a sale, and no sale takes place, either for the reason stated in section 69, or because the distrainer's demand has been previously satisfied, the said charge on account of expenses attending the sale shall be leviable by the officer, and shall be calculated on the value of the distrained property, as estimated by him, unless the distrainer's demand has been satisfied before the day fixed for the sale and notice of such satisfaction has been given by him to the officer.

If the distrainer's demand be not satisfied on the day fixed for the sale, the charge shall be paid by the owner of the property, and may be recovered by sale of such portion thereof as may be necessary.

In every other case the charge shall be paid by the distrainer, and may be recovered under the warrant of the Court by attachment and sale of his property.

Provided that in no case shall an amount exceeding ten rupees be recoverable under this section.

71. When a suit has been instituted to contest a distrainer's demand, and the property has not been released on security, if the demand or any portion of it shall be adjudged to be due, the Court shall issue an order to the proper officer authorizing the sale of the property.

On the application of the distrainer (which shall be made within five days from the receipt of such order by such officer), such officer shall publish a second proclamation in the manner prescribed in section 59, fixing another day for the sale of the distrained property, not less than five nor more than ten days from the date of the proclamation; and, unless the amount adjudged to be due with cost of distress be paid immediately, shall proceed to sell the property in the manner hereinbefore provided.

72. In all suits instituted to contest a distrainer's demand the defendant must prove the arrear in the same manner as if he had himself brought a suit for the amount under the foregoing provisions of this Act.

If the demand or any part thereof is found to be due, the Court shall make a decree for the amount in favour of the distrainer.

and if the distress has not been withdrawn, and if any balance remain due after such sale, by execution of the decree against the person and any other property of the defaulter, or, if the distrained property have been released on security, by execution of the decree against the person and property of the defaulter, and, if his surety has been made a party to the suit, against the person and property of such surety.

73. If the distress is adjudged to be vexatious or groundless, the Court, after giving notice to the landlord, may order the release of the distrained property, may award compensation to the plaintiff as it thinks fit, not exceeding twice the value of the property distrained.

74. If any person claiming any property as his own, or as the property of a third party, who has been distrained for arrears of rent, or for any other debt, alleged to be due from any other person, the claimant may institute a suit against the distrainer and such other person to try his right to the property, and the same manner and under the same rules as to the time of instituting the suit shall apply to the defendant notwithstanding of any law in force, whose property has been distrained for an arrear of rent alleged to be due from him; and may institute a suit to contest the demand.

75. When any such suit is instituted, the property may be released upon payment of a sum of money by way of security for its value, being given to the satisfaction of the Court.

If the claim is disallowed, the Court shall make an order in favour of the distrainer, for the sale of the property, or the recovery of its value, or the case may be.

If the claim is upheld, the Court shall order compensation for the release of the distrained property, and may award such compensation as it thinks fit, not exceeding twice the value of the property distrained.

76. No claim to any produce of land liable to be distrained under this Act, and no claim to distrainable land found at the time of the distress in the possession of a defaulting tenant, whether such claim be in respect of a previous sale, mortgage or otherwise, shall bar the landlord's prior claim, nor shall any attachment in execution of a decree of any Civil Court prevail against such claim.

77. Whenever property has been distrained for an arrear of rent, and a stranger claiming to be landlord and to have right of distress to be made a party, a suit has been instituted to contest the demand, and the right to distrain for such

arrear is claimed by or on behalf of any person other than the distrainer on the ground of such other person being actually and in good faith in the receipt and enjoyment of the rent of the land, such other person shall be made by a party to the suit, and the question of the actual receipt and enjoyment of the rent by him before and up to the commencement of the suit shall be inquired into, and the suit shall be decided according to the result of such inquiry :

Provided that the decision of the Court shall not affect the right of any person having a title to the rent of land to establish such title in a Court of competent jurisdiction, by suit instituted within one year from the date of the decision.

78. Any person whose property has been distrained for the recovery of a demand not justly due or of a demand due or alleged to be due from some other person, and who is prevented by any sufficient cause from bringing a suit to contest the demand or try the right to the property, as the case may be, within the period allowed by sections 59 and 71, and whose property is in consequence brought to sale, may institute a suit to recover compensation for any injury which he has sustained from the distress or sale.

79. If any person empowered to distrain property, or employed for the purpose under a written authority by a person so empowered, distrains or sells any property for the recovery of an arrear of rent alleged to be due, otherwise than according to the provisions of this Act, or if any distrained property is lost, damaged or destroyed, by reason of the distrainer not having taken proper precaution for the due keeping and preservation thereof, or if the distress is not immediately withdrawn when any provision of this Act requires such withdrawal,

the owner of the property may institute a suit to recover compensation for any injury which he has thereby sustained.

80. If any person not empowered by this Act to distrain or sell, nor duly authorized for that purpose by a person so empowered, purports to distrain or sell any property under this Act, the owner of such property may institute a suit to recover compensation from the person so distraining or selling for any injury which the plaintiff has sustained from the distress or sale.

Such suit shall not affect the defendant's liability to be prosecuted under any law for the time being in force.

The Oudh Rent Bill.(Chapter VII.—Jurisdiction of the Courts.—Sections 81-83.)

81. If any person resists a distress of property duly made under this Act, or forcibly or clandestinely removes any detained property, the Court, upon complaint being made within ten days from the date of such resistance or removal, shall cause the person accused to be arrested and brought before the Court with all convenient speed, and the Court shall proceed forthwith to try the case.

If the case cannot be at once heard and determined, the Court may, if it think fit, require the party arrested to give security for his person, whenever the same may be required, and, in default of such security, may commit him to the civil jail until the case is tried.

82. If such resistance or removal of property be proved, the Court may order the offender to pay a fine not exceeding one hundred rupees, together with all costs and expenses incurred in the case or in making the distress, and, in default of payment, may order him to be imprisoned in the civil jail until payment is made. Provided that no such imprisonment shall continue for more than six months.

CHAPTER VII

JURISDICTION OF THE COURTS.

Suits cognizable

83. No Courts other than Courts of Revenue shall take cognizance of the following descriptions of suits, and such suits shall be heard and determined in the said Courts of Revenue in the manner provided in this Act and not otherwise:—

A.—Suits by a Landlord.

(1.)—For the delivery by a tenant of the crop or a palta under section 10;

(2.)—For the rent of land;

(3.)—For the enhancement of the rent of a tenant [];

(4.)—For the ejectment of a tenant [];

(5.)—Suits by landlords against patwāris or agents employed by landlords in the management of land or the collection of revenue or rent, or against the surties of such patwāris or agents for money received or accounts kept by such patwāris or agents in the course of such employment, or for papers in their possession, or for the rendering and settlement of accounts.

[having a right of occupancy]

[or for cancelling any lease on account of the non-payment of arrears of rent or on account of a breach of the conditions of such lease]

B.—Suits by an Under-Proprietor or a Tenant.

The Oudh Rent Bill.(Chapter VII.—Jurisdiction of the Courts.—Section 53.)

(7.)—For the delivery by a landlord of a patta;

(8.)—For contesting a notice of ejectment;

(9.)—For compensation—on account of illegal enforcement of payment of rent, or of any sum in excess of rent, due, or on account of the refusal of receipts or acknowledgments for rent paid or tendered, or on account of illegal ejectment, or on account of the value of standing crops under section 16, or on account of loss arising for the making of improvements under section 26;

(10.)—For the recovery of the occupancy of any land of which an under-proprietor or tenant has been dispossessed or from which he has been illegally ejected by the landlord;

(11.)—For contesting the exercise of the power of distraint conferred on landlords and others by this Act, or any acts purporting to be done in exercise of the said power, or for compensation for illegal distraint;

(12.)—For abatement for rent in accordance with the provisions of section 19;

(13.)—For the recovery of compensation for improvements in accordance with the provisions of section 22

C.—Suits regarding the Division or Appraisement of Produce.

(14.)—Suits under section 51, regarding the division, estimate or appraisement of the produce of land.

D.—Suits by and against Lambardárs, Co-sharers and Muafidárs

(15.)—Suits by a sharer against a lambardár or co-sharer for share of the profits of an estate or any part thereof, or for the rendering and settlement of accounts in respect of such profits;

(16.)—Suits by a lambardár or pattidár who is called to collect the rents of the patti, for arrears of revenue or rent payable through him by the co-sharers whom he represents, and by a lambardár for village-expenses and other dues for which the co-sharers may be responsible to him, or against a joint lambardár for compensation for revenue or rent paid by such lambardár on account of such joint lambardár;

(17.)—Suits by co-sharers against lambardárs, or by proprietors or lessees against muafidárs or assignees of revenue, for compensation on account of exaction in excess of revenue or rent, or on account of the refusal of receipts or acknowledgments for revenue or rent paid or tendered;

(18.)—Suits by muafidárs or assignees of revenue for arrears of revenue.

84. For the purposes of this Act, the Courts of Revenue shall consist of six grades of Courts, namely—

- (1.)—The Court of the Assistant Collector of the second class;
- (2.)—The Court of the Assistant Collector of the first class;
- (3.)—The Court of the Deputy Collector;
- (4.)—The Court of the Collector;
- (5.)—The Court of the Commissioner;
- (6.)—The Court of the Judicial Commissioner.

85. The Chief Commissioner of Oudh shall have power to declare to which of the first three grades any Assistant Commissioner shall belong, and to invest any Tahsildar with the powers of any of the same grades.

86. The Deputy Commissioner shall exercise the powers of a Collector under this Act.

87. The Chief Commissioner of Oudh may invest any officer employed in making or revising settlements of revenue with all or any of the powers of a Collector, or Deputy Collector, or Assistant Collector, under this Act.

88. The Court of the Assistant Collector of the second class shall have power to try and determine suits of the descriptions mentioned in clauses (1), (2), (7), (12), (15), (16), (17) and (18) of section 83, of which the subject-matter does not exceed one hundred rupees in value or amount.

89. The Court of the Assistant Collector of the first class shall have power to try and determine suits of the descriptions referred to in the last preceding section, of which the subject-matter does not exceed five hundred rupees in value or amount.

90. The Court of the Deputy Collector shall have power to try and determine suits of every description of which the subject-matter does not exceed five thousand rupees in value or amount.

91. The Court of the Collector shall have power to try and determine suits of every description and of any amount, and to hear appeals from the decisions in suits, and (where an appeal is allowed by the Code of Civil Procedure as applied by this Act) from the orders of the Assistant Collectors, and, in suits under clauses (2), (5), (9), (11), (14), (15), (16), (17) and (18) of section 83, from such decisions and orders of the Deputy Collectors.

Whenever the state of the public business requires it, the Chief Commissioner may invest any Deputy Collector with the powers of a Collector for the trial and determination of suits and appeals under this Act, other than appeals from the decisions of such Deputy Collector, and with the powers of a Deputy Commissioner to hear applications under sections 24 and 43, and may invest any Collector with all or any of the powers of a Commissioner under this Act.

92. The Court of the Commissioner shall have Jurisdiction of Commissioner. power to hear and determine appeals from decisions in suits, and (where an appeal is allowed by the Code of Civil Procedure) XIV of 1882. from the orders of the Collectors and Deputy Collectors, except as otherwise provided in sections 91 and 95 [].

[and 102]

93. The Court of the Judicial Commissioner shall have Jurisdiction of Judicial Commissioner. power to hear and determine appeals from the decisions in suits, and (where an appeal is allowed by the Code of Civil Procedure) XIV of 1882. from the orders of the Commissioners, and also second appeals, as provided in the said Code, from the decisions passed in first appeal by the Collectors and by the Commissioners.

Appeals.

94. The memorandum of appeal, prepared in the form and containing the particulars mentioned in the Code of Civil Procedure, XIV of 1882. shall be presented to the Court empowered to hear the appeal within the period hereinafter specified, unless the appellant shall show sufficient cause, to the satisfaction of such Court, for not having presented the memorandum within such period; that is to say, thirty days if the appeal lie to the Collector, six weeks if the appeal lie to the Commissioner, and ninety days if the appeal lie to the Judicial Commissioner.

The period shall be reckoned from and exclusive of the day on which the decision or order appealed against was passed, and also exclusive of such time as may be requisite for obtaining a copy of the decree or order from which the appeal is made.

Second appeals shall be presented in the Court of the Judicial Commissioner within the period hereinbefore fixed for the presentation of first appeals.

95. In suits under clauses (2), (5), (9), (11), (14), (15), (16), (17) and (18) of section 83, and in appeals from decisions in such suits tried and decided by a Commissioner or Collector, if the amount sued for does not exceed one hundred rupees, the judgment shall be final, except as hereinafter provided, unless in any such suit a question of right to enhance or otherwise vary the rent of a tenant, or any question relating to a title to land or to some interest in land, as between parties having conflicting claims thereto, has been determined by the judgment.

In such case the judgment shall be open to appeal in the manner provided in this Act.

Distribution of Business.

96. The Deputy Commissioner may direct the Deputy Commissioner business in the Courts subordinate to him, whether or not they hold their sittings in the same place, to be distributed among such Courts in such way as he shall think fit.

Transfer of Suits and Appeals.

97. The Commissioner or the Deputy Commissioner may withdraw any suit instituted in any Court subordinate to him, and try such suit himself, or refer it for trial to any other such Court competent to try the same.

The Commissioner may also withdraw any appeal instituted in the Court of any Collector subordinate to him, and try the appeal himself, or refer it for trial to the Court of any other Collector in his Division.

98. The Judicial Commissioner may order that any suit or appeal which shall be instituted in or presented to any Court subordinate to him shall be transferred to any other such Court competent to try or hear the subject-matter of the same.

Miscellaneous.

99. In the performance of their duties under this Act, the Collectors shall be subject to the direction and control of the Commissioners and of the Chief Commissioner; and the Deputy Collectors and Assistant Collectors shall be subject to the direction and control of the Deputy Commissioners to whom they are respectively subordinate:

Provided that nothing in this section shall empower the Chief Commissioner or any Commissioner or Deputy Commissioner to interfere in any way not authorized by this Act with any decision or order in a suit.

100. All suits which, under the provisions of this Act, may be brought by or against landlords, may be brought by or against managing agents or talsildárs of khám estates, whether such estates are the property of Government or not.

101. No sharer in a joint estate, under-proprietary or other tenure, in which a division of land has not been made among the sharers, shall exercise any of the powers conferred by this Act in regard to the recovery of arrears of rent, enhancement of rent, ejectment of tenants, or distress, otherwise than through a manager authorized to collect the rents on behalf of all the sharers.

In pattidári estates or tenures such powers shall be exercised only through a lambardár, or through the pattidár who is entitled to collect the rents of the patti.

102. Any person in possession of land occupied without consent of the landlord shall be liable for the rent of such land at the rate payable in the previous year, or, if no rent was payable in the previous year, at such rate as the Court may determine to be fair and equitable, and he shall not in respect of such land have any of the statutory privileges conferred by this Act.

103. The Courts may sit for the hearing and determining suits and appeals, and for disposing of other business under this Act, in any place within the local limits of their respective jurisdictions :

Provided that every hearing and decision shall be in open Court, and that the parties to the suit, or their authorized agents, shall have had due notice to attend at such place.

CHAPTER VIII.

LIMITATION OF SUITS.

104. Except as herein otherwise provided, and subject to the provisions as to legal disability contained in any law for the limitation of suits for the time being in force in Oudh, all suits under this Act shall be instituted within one year from the date of the accruing of the cause of action.

105. Suits for the delivery of pottas or the counterparts of pottas may be instituted at any time during the tenancy.

106. Suits for the recovery of arrears of rent of revenue or of a share of profits shall, except in the case mentioned in section 16, be instituted within three years from the date on which the arrear or share of profit claimed shall have become due.

107. Suits for the recovery of money in the hands of an agent, or for the settlement of accounts or delivery of papers by an agent, may be brought at any time during the continuance of the agency or within one year after its determination, or, in the case of claims legally cognizable at the date of the passing of this Act, within one year after such date.

108. Suits regarding distress under section 74, 75, 79 or 80, and suits regarding the division, estimate or appraisement of the produce of land, shall be commenced within three months from the date of the accruing of the cause of action.

CHAPTER IX.

PROCEDURE.

IV of 1882. 109. The provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure as in force in Oudh shall, so far as they are not inconsistent with the provisions herein contained, apply to all suits, appeals and proceedings under this Act.

110. In addition to the particulars required by section 50 of the said Code to be specified in the plaint, the plaint shall contain the following particulars:—

1st.—The name of the village or estate, and of the parganā in which the land to which the suit relates is situate;

2nd.—If the suit be for recovery of an arrear of rent, or for the enhancement or abatement of rent, or for the ejectment of a tenant, or for contesting a notice of enhancement of rent, or for contesting a notice for the ejectment of a tenant or for the recovery of the occupancy or possession of any land, the plaint shall specify the extent, situation and designation of the land to which the suit relates and, where fields have been marked in a Government survey, the number (if it be possible to give it) of each field;

3rd.—If the suit be for recovery of an arrear of rent or revenue, the plaint shall specify the yearly rent or revenue of the land, the amount (if any) received on account of the year or years for which the claim is made, the amount in arrear and the time in respect of which it is alleged to be due;

4th.—If the suit be for the delivery of a patta or the counterpart of a patta, the plaint shall specify all the particulars mentioned in section 7.

The Oudh Rent Bill.(Chapter IX.—Procedure.—Sections 111-117.)

111. When in any suit between a landlord and an under-proprietor or tenant the right to receive the rent of the land is claimed by a third person, on the ground that he, or a person through whom he claims, has actually and in good faith received and enjoyed such rent up to the time of the commencement of the suit, such third person shall be made a party to the suit, and the question of the actual receipt and enjoyment of the rent by him or the person through whom he claims shall be inquired into, and the suit shall be decided according to the result of such inquiry :

Provided always that the decision of the Court shall not affect the right of any party having a legal right to the rent of such land to establish his title thereto in a Court of competent jurisdiction.

112. In all suits under clauses (1), (2), (7), (10) and (11) of section 83 of this Act, the summons to the defendant shall be for the final disposal of the suit.

113. In a suit to recover an arrear of rent, no set-off shall be allowed against the claim, except such amount as may be due to the defendant on an unexecuted decree under this Act against the plaintiff.

114. In any suit under this Act involving a claim to money, the defendant may, at any stage of the suit, deposit in Court such sum of money as he considers a satisfaction in full of the plaintiff's claim, together with the costs incurred by the plaintiff up to the time of such deposit.

Notice of the deposit shall be given to the plaintiff, and the amount deposited shall be paid to him on his application.

No interest shall be allowed to a plaintiff on any sum paid by the defendant into Court from the date of such payment, whether such sum be in full of the plaintiff's claim or fall short thereof.

115. In any case in which the defendant deposits less than the amount claimed by the plaintiff, nothing in section 114 shall bar the plaintiff from proceeding in the suit for the recovery of the balance.

[116. If a tenant not having a right of occupancy institute a suit against a landlord for the delivery of a lease, or a landlord institute a suit against a tenant not having a right of occupancy for the delivery of the counterpart of a lease, and the parties do not agree in respect of the particulars which such lease or counterpart is to contain, the Court shall dismiss the suit, unless evidence in writing is produced which shall satisfy the Court that an agreement has been entered into between the parties in accordance with which such lease or counterpart ought to be delivered.]

117. The local inquiry described in section 392 of the Code of Civil Procedure may also, if he think fit, be made by the Collector in person or other officer presiding in the Court, and the provisions of the said Code regarding local inquiries shall apply to such inquiries made by such Collector or other officer.

In such cases the Collector or other officer as aforesaid, after completing the inquiry, shall

The Oudh Rent Bill.(Chapter X.—General.—Sections 124-129.)

124. If the decree be for money, no process in execution shall issue against the immovable property of the judgment-debtor, other than attachment of such property, unless satisfaction of the decree cannot be obtained against his moveable property.

125. If the decree be for an arrear of rent due in respect of an under-proprietary right, the interest of the judgment-debtor in such right may, subject to the provisions of this Act, be sold in execution of the decree.

[Provided that no such sale shall be allowed unless it appear to the Deputy Commissioner that satisfaction of the decree cannot be made in the manner referred to in sections 243 and 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure.

If it appear to the Court that such satisfaction can be made, the Court may exercise the powers given to it by the said section 243, although no application has been made by the judgment-debtor.

The Deputy Commissioner may be appointed manager of the property under the same section. When he has been so appointed, he may exercise, for the satisfaction of the decree against the judgment-debtor, all the powers which, under any law in force in Oudh, he might have exercised for the recovery of an arrear of revenue due by such judgment-debtor to the Government.]

126. No beneficial lease or other incumbrance hereafter created on his estate by any under-proprietor shall be valid, in the event of the sale of his rights and interests in execution of a decree for arrears of rent, unless such incumbrance has been registered, under any rule or law for the time being in force in Oudh, within four months after the creation thereof, and not less than thirty days before the date of attachment of such rights and interests.

127. When an under-proprietor creates any such incumbrance and fails to pay to the proprietor all or any part of the rent subsequently accruing in respect of the land subject to the incumbrance, the incumbrancer shall be liable to pay to the proprietor the whole or such part as aforesaid of the said rent, unless the proprietor has agreed in writing to waive any claim which he might otherwise have made on the incumbrancer under this section.

128. When land is sold in execution of a decree under this Act, and the land or any lot thereof has been knocked down to a stranger, any co-sharer, other than the judgment-debtor, may, before sunset on the day of sale, claim to take the land or lot, as the case may be, at the sum at which it was so knocked down.

If the land be an under-proprietary tenure, a like claim may also be made by the proprietor.

Any claim made under this section shall be allowed: Provided that, if a claim to the same land or lot be made by a proprietor as well as by a co-sharer, the claim of the co-sharer shall be preferred: Provided also that no claim shall be allowed unless the claimant fulfil all the conditions of the sale binding on a purchaser.

CHAPTER X.

GENERAL.

129. The Local Government, on being satisfied that any estate is suffering from grave mismanagement, may exercise the powers reserved to the Local Government to an extent which has,

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

THE object of this Bill, which has been prepared by the Government of the North-Western Provinces and Oudh, is to secure to tenants in Oudh some protection against arbitrary eviction from their holdings and enhancement of their rents, and to place on a clear footing their right to make improvements on their holdings and to receive compensation for improvements so made. Under the law as it stands they are absolutely unprotected against enhancement and eviction, provided that the landlord observes certain easy formalities in raising rents or in issuing his notices of ejection. Every field in a tenant's holding can be shifted on the close of each agricultural year at the will of his landlord, and there is no limit to the rise of rents.

The Census Statistics show that the pressure of the population on the land in Oudh is very great, being 170 to the square mile, and the large number of notices of ejection annually issued and their steady increase from 23,600 in 1876 to 90,200 in 1882 afford reason for believing that they are used as instruments for the undue enhancement of rent. Enquiry has shown that this belief is not unfounded, and that the effect of the existing law on a population dependent mainly on agriculture for its subsistence must lead at no distant date to the deterioration of agricultural industry and the impoverishment and degradation of the bulk of the people.

It is not proposed to introduce a system of heritable occupancy-right acquired by prescription, such as prevails in the North-Western Provinces, but to accept contract as the basis on which transactions between landlord and tenant are to be regulated. The tenant, however, who has no other means of subsistence open to him, is no match for the landlord in a thickly populated agricultural province, and with a view to place the parties on more equal terms the Bill imposes the following restrictions on free contract between them.

Sitting tenants may hold the land they at present occupy at the rent now paid from the date of the last change in their rent or in the area of the holdings.

The enhancement of rent permissible at the expiry of each statutory period is to be limited to $6\frac{1}{2}$ per cent, or one anna in the rupee, on the current rental; the sitting tenant to have the equity of renewal at rent within that limit.

At the end of that period it is proposed to allow the landlord to enhance the rent of the sitting tenant to such sum as he and the tenant may agree upon within a limit of one anna in the rupee, or $6\frac{1}{2}$ per cent, on the rent previously paid.

At any time after the expiration of the statutory period a landlord who has not made terms with the sitting tenant may proceed either by notice of enhancement or by notice of ejection at his discretion. If he proceeds by notice of enhancement the enhancement must be within the limit above given. If the tenant accepts, a new period begins. If the tenant refuses the proposed enhancement, the holding will become vacant, but no higher rent can be recovered from the next tenant than $6\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. above the old rent on the same holding. If the landlord proceeds by ejection, leaving the tenant no option of re-entry, compensation for disturbance will be given up to one year's rent at the rate last paid, and the limitation of $6\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. will apply to the rent recoverable from the next tenant. In both cases tenants will be entitled to receive before dispossession any compensation due to them for improvements. The right of renewal is to be personal to the tenant in occupancy. On the death of a tenant in occupancy his heir will be entitled to hold on, on the same terms, to the expiration of the statutory period enjoyable by his predecessor, but must then surrender the holding to vacate the holding on payment of the compensation for improvements found to be due to him.

The provisions are experimental, and power is therefore given to the Local Government from time to time, within periods of not less than seven years in any district or part of a district, to vary the limit of enhancement. Although there has been a considerable rise of prices in the past fifteen years, the rise may not continue at the same rate, and in that case the limit of $6\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. might be unfair to the tenant. In other cases the limitation might conceivably operate to the prejudice of the landlord.

The sanction in the taluqdar's sanad—that he will promote the agricultural prosperity of his estate—is so vaguely worded as to leave the Government and the taluqdar alike uncertain as to the grounds on which Government should interfere between him and his tenantry. To put the matter beyond doubt power is given to Government to step in when it is satisfied that an estate is suffering from grave mis-management, which has since the present year materially deteriorated the condition of the tenantry or diminished the area of the cultivation. The exercise of this power is subject to the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, and the consequences of it are not the forfeiture of the estate, but an authoritative settlement of rents for ten years.

A similar power of settling rents was conferred in the Bengal Tenancy Act of 1885, the Local Government being authorized to interfere in the interests of public order or of the local welfare.

The detailed reasons for the alterations in the present Act necessary to carry out these proposals will be found in the annexed letter from the Local Government.

No. ¹⁷⁷₂₁₀₄₁ R. of 1886.

From

J. WOODBURN, Esq., SECRETARY to GOVT, N.-W. P. AND OUDH,

IN THE OUDH REVENUE DEPARTMENT,

To

THE SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA,

REVENUE AND AGRICULTURAL DEPARTMENT.

Dated Allahabad, the 15th January, 1886.

In compliance with the request conveyed in your letter No. ⁸²²₁₄₇₅ (Revenue), dated the 9th ultimo, I am directed to submit a draft Bill to amend the Oudh Rent Law.

2. The general principles on which the Lieutenant-Governor and Chief Commissioner proposes to amend the Rent Law in Oudh are fully detailed and explained in the letters of this Government, No. 3939 of the 21st December, 1883, and No. 723 of the 12th May, 1884. In this letter submitting the draft Bill it seems sufficient to explain the reasons which have led to the various minor alterations of the present Rent Act.

3. The Bill takes the form of a revised edition of the existing Act. It is very probable that in phraseology and arrangement Act XIX of 1868 might be greatly improved; but it is only in Chapters IV and V that any material change is needed to give effect to the several proposals which have been made by the Lieutenant-Governor. And since the Act is well understood by and familiar to the Rent Courts and the people, it appears advisable to make no more alterations of it than are necessary to a clear and correct statement of the principles which are hereafter to govern the relations of landlord and tenant. But the opportunity has been taken to remove any difficulties that have been found by the Courts in interpreting certain other parts of the existing law. Additions to existing sections of the Act and all new sections are printed in italics; and any portions of existing sections which it is proposed to omit have been printed marginally in brackets.

4. I am now to proceed to a specific statement of the alterations made in the Act.

5. Section 2 repeals Act XIX of 1868, but maintains such notifications and rules made under it as are consistent with the new Act.

6. In section 3 a clause has been added to the definition of "rent," to make it quite clear that the word covers the rent of an under-proprietor who may not be personally in the use or occupation of the land in his tenure. A clause has been added to the definition of "tenant," to show what portions of the Act are applicable to a thikadār. A collector of rents should acquire none of the statutory privileges of a cultivating tenant, but is a tenant of the lessor for many purposes. A definition of "prescribed" has been inserted, which is taken from the Bengal Tenancy Act, 1885.

7. Section 4 is substituted for the corresponding section of the present Act. It is necessary to provide that no contract before or after the passing of the Act shall deprive a tenant of that protection against enhancement and ejectment which it is the special object of the new law to give. The Lieutenant-Governor has decided, after careful consideration of the point, not to recommend that the new law shall be so framed as to prohibit the execution of any special agreement which shall give a tenant a longer occupancy than the statutory period of seven years; but it is essential that agreements for any shorter term shall be barred, and I am to ask that this point may receive particular attention when the draft is examined. The proposal that the occupation of a holding may be settled between landlord and tenant for a longer period than seven years by agreement, but that no contract shall defeat the statutory limit of enhancement. He is unwilling to interfere more than is absolutely necessary with any existing contracts; and where the terms of any pottas at present in force exclude the tenant from making improvements or claiming compensation for such as he may have already made, he would set the contract aside. So far as the Lieutenant-Governor's information goes, the number of such contracts is not great, while in many such cases it may be presumed that the improvements will have been made upon special terms and conditions.

8. As regards clearing leases the Lieutenant-Governor is of opinion that they must be left to be arranged by landlord and tenant without interference by the State. The conditions under which they are taken vary considerably in different parts of the country, and are in fact effectively controlled by local circumstances and local custom. A proviso has accordingly been added to this section, the terms of which have been taken from the first proviso to section 178 of the Bengal Tenancy Act.

9. Section 5 (A), empowering a landlord to confer occupancy-rights, has been inserted in accordance with the wish of His Excellency the Governor General in Council, as conveyed in paragraph 15 of your letter No. 252R., dated 12th April, 1884.

10. In section 7 of the present Act the word "lease" is used for the written memorandum of the terms of a tenant's holding. It is scarcely applicable to the record of the terms of a holding conferred by Statute, and the Lieutenant-Governor would prefer to use the word "patta." It is again inconsistent with a statutory tenure that the record of it should contain any conditions except those imposed by the Statute, and the clause of the present section 7, authorising the entry in the patta of any special conditions of the lease, should be omitted.

11. Section 11 of the present Act authorises the cancelment of a lease by decree. It seems desirable that the whole of the provisions in regard to the determination of tenancies should be placed together, and this section, with the material alterations which will be subsequently explained, has been transferred to the chapter on ejectments as 43(A).

12. Section 20 of the Rent Act contains the provincial rule regarding the remission of rent, where it is proved to the Rent Court that from unforeseen calamity the tenant is unable to pay the entire demand. A proviso is attached to the section, which prevents a tenant with a five years' lease from claiming the benefits of this section. If this proviso were retained under the amended Act, which is to give all tenants a statutory occupancy for seven years, the effect would be to nullify the section altogether. The question is, therefore, whether the entire section should be struck out, whereby the Courts would lose their power of making allowances in rent-decrees for inevitable calamities, or whether the section shall stand without its proviso, whereby remissions of rent would cease to be in any case dependent on remissions of revenue. The latter course appears to the Lieutenant-Governor to be on the whole likely to be better for the interests of both landlord and tenant. If, as the Lieutenant-Governor believes, it is not expedient to withdraw from the Courts all power to take account of serious calamities in decreeing arrears of rent, in that case to provide that this power shall only be used when revenue has been remitted is to shackle it with an awkward and hardly logical condition. The corresponding provisions of the rent law in the North-Western Provinces are contained in section 23 of Act XII of 1881 and the rules which have been prepared under it. When the crops have been injured by hail or drought in a village of the North-Western Provinces, the Collector has to apply for a remission of revenue before he can move in the matter of rents; and when that is obtained he enforces a remission of rents, equivalent to double the remission of revenue, by a process which is not always very well adjusted or duly proportioned. There is by law no similar rule in Oudh. Neither in the Revenue nor in the Rent Acts is any authority given to the Deputy Commissioner to carry on, distribute and enforce among the rents of the tenantry the remission which has been made in the landlord's revenue. It is true that under circular orders, issued administratively (of which an extract is given in the footnote), Deputy Commissioners have insisted on remissions of rent as a consequence of remissions of revenue; and the Lieutenant-Governor is not prepared at once to cancel those instructions. Nevertheless, when it comes to framing legal provisions, he would prefer to leave, at any rate experimentally, the adjustment of rent abatements between landlord and tenant as much as possible to the parties concerned, subject only to a Judge's discretion in extraordinary cases. The fact of the revenue remission is perfectly well known, and any tenant who is pressed to pay upon crops that have been seriously damaged has only to demur to the demand and let his claim to relaxation of the rent be considered by the Rent Court. So long as a tenant was liable to summary and arbitrary ejectment, undue pressure for the payment of rent could no doubt be made; but now that all tenants will be protected in the occupation of their holdings, the Lieutenant-Governor considers that with an appeal to the Rent Court, such as is given by section 20, they may be left to make their own arrangements with their landlords on such occasions as those contemplated by the section.

13. The proviso in section 20 is to some extent based on a distrust of the Courts, since they might exercise the power without sufficient cause, and hamper the landlord by remissions of rent for which he has received no compensating remission of revenue. The landlord, however, has always the remedy of appeal from a decree which he considers unfair, and if the case can be supposed possible of calamity so considerable as to justify large remissions of rent by the Court, although no previous remission of revenue had been given, no Deputy Commissioner would refuse to recommend a corresponding remission of revenue. There is again the risk that the Courts might force remissions of revenue by giving remissions of rent; but it must be assumed that the Courts will proceed with due care and upon sufficient evidence in remitting rents, while in Oudh they are likely always to keep in view the effect of their decrees upon the revenue. Moreover, a landlord is certain to contest any unfair reduction of his rent-demand; for a remission of revenue is never sufficient to compensate him, and his appeal is to the Commissioner or Deputy Commissioner, who is directly concerned with the collection of revenue. The Lieutenant-Governor recommends,

Any landlord who receives a remission of Government revenue will be bound, in proportion to the extent of the remission, not to take, either through himself or through a lessee, and to restore if he has so taken, rent for the crop on account of which the remission is granted.—(From Circular Orders of 7th January, 1873.)

therefore, that the section be maintained with the omission of the proviso. The draft proposes to insert "materially" before "diminished", to indicate to the Courts that rendition is not to be given for any but considerable loss.

14. Sections 35 and 36 of the present Act will be entirely superseded, and the reference to them in section 20 may be excised.

15. In section 21 (relinquishment of the holding) the last clause of the first sentence may be omitted. The Lieutenant-Governor wishes to make a distinction between relinquishment and abandonment. If tenants are to have considerable security of tenure, it is right that the landlord should have fair notice of relinquishment of holding, that he may make suitable arrangements for a new tenant. The date for notice of relinquishment has not only been antedated to the 1st of March, and at this time let to another tenant can hardly have been given. It has been prescribed that the notice shall be in writing.

16. A section has been drafted in regard to abandonment [21 (B)], adopted from section 87 of the Bengal Tenancy Act.

17. In the section on compensation for tenants' improvements considerable changes have been made. Section 22 of the present Act directs that the tenant shall be entitled to compensation for improvements whenever his rent is enhanced. This provision has, so far as the Lieutenant-Governor can ascertain, remained dead letter. Under a system by which the adjustment of rent between landlord and tenant was left entirely to private contract, any enhancement of rent, so long as the tenant chose to stay, probably took into consideration the tenant's expenditure on the improvements of his holding. For the future at least no such provision can be made. The enhancement of the rate of a tenant's period of tenure, or a statutory enhancement of his tenure, will be or not the tenant has in the course of his existing period of tenure effected an improvement which has added to its value. The clause in section 22, providing for compensation on enhancement, may therefore be retained.

18. The principle on which compensation is calculated under the present Act is solely that of the outlay of the tenant. The last sentence of the section bears right to compensation for improvements which were made more than thirty years before the date of claim, and in practice the procedure of the Courts is to make an estimate of the probable outlay, assume that the improvement will last for thirty years, and award to the tenant the sum which in that proportion represents its unexpired value. Thus, if a well is believed to have cost Rs. 200 ten years ago, the Court will award to the tenant Rs. 200. The principle, by no means a just one, for the landlord is exposed to great exaggerations by the tenant of his cost and outlay, and where the improvements are of old standing these statements are difficult to check. The Lieutenant-Governor considers that the principles laid down in section 83 of the Bengal Tenancy Act are not only in themselves more fair but more simply and readily applied by the Courts, for it is seldom difficult in any village to ascertain the difference in letting value due to irrigation, and it well is the most common of all improvements in Oudh. A section has been accordingly introduced from the Bengal Act, section 20 (A), and the references to outlay and the period of construction omitted from section 22.

19. It is the recognized custom of the province that a tenant cannot make an improvement of a permanent character without the consent of his landlord. So long as the tenant held on a yearly tenure at the will of his landlord, this consent was obtained on terms which were, in a sense, very harsh. The Government, for example, to paragraph 147 of Colonel Havelock's report of the 1st July, 1874, see 277 of the second volume of papers on the operation of the Tenancy in Oudh, show that the consent to any improvement seven years, or more, before the expiration of the term of the holding, then the landlord's consent to improvements should not be more readily withheld. It has been ordered to be proposed in the Bill that the tenant shall have the right of applying to the Deputy Commissioner, should the landlord refuse his consent, and that the Deputy Commissioner, after hearing the landlord's objections, shall pass such order as may be fair and equitable.

20. On the other hand, it is right, when enhancement is otherwise lawfully resented, that arrangements should be made for the resumption of a tenant's enhancement on holdings the produce of which has been increased by a landlord's improvement, and sections 23 and 26 (K) of the Bill have been drafted for the assistance of landlords in this matter.

21. Section 25 of the present Act is believed to have been of very little, if any, value. It has, however, been retained in section 20 (A) of the Bill in a shorter form, taken from the second clause of section 83 of the Bengal Tenancy Act.

22. Chapter III of the Oudh Act refers to commutation and payment of rents in kind. The Lieutenant-Governor proposes to omit the last two clauses of section 28 and the whole of section 29. The commutation of grain-rent is an exceedingly delicate and difficult business, while the prevailing opinion as to the advantages and disadvantages of commutation is apt to vary greatly, the authorities leaning sometimes on one side, sometimes on the other. It can hardly ever be expedient that the Government should interpose, during the currency of a settlement, to determine officially a question of this nature, which is essentially connected with local circumstances and conditions of agriculture that are best adjusted by mutual consent; and, since, in fact, the authoritative commutation of rents is hardly known in Oudh, the Lieutenant-Governor would prefer to leave it, by law, to private arrangement between landlord and tenant, except when a settlement of revenue is in progress. The transition from rents in kind to cash-rent is gradually spreading with the improvement of agriculture, and the process should be left to its natural and spontaneous course.

23. Chapter IV of the Act deals with the enhancement and settlement of rent. So far as it concerns the right of tenants with a right of occupancy, they are left untouched. In the two sections, 35 and 36, of the Act are contained the whole of the provisions of the present law in regard to the rent of other tenants. To introduce the scheme sketched in paragraph 69 of my letter of 21st December, 1883, the sections numbered 35 to 36 (K) have been substituted for them in the Bill. They give every tenant a statutory right to occupy his holding for seven years, with a new period beginning from every change in rent or area by the landlord, and at the end of every period of tenancy they give him the preferential claim to continue in his holding at a rent that cannot be more than 6½ per cent. in excess of the previous rent, or, if he be ejected, to be paid compensation for disturbance. In short, the landlord cannot disturb the tenant for seven years, and if after that period he desires to eject he must pay compensation. In no case can enhancement of rent, whether upon the sitting tenant or his successor, exceed 6½ per cent. of the old rent; but if the sitting tenant will not agree to an enhancement thus limited he must quit without compensation. The new sections also provide that enhancement shall be by notice; they prescribe a procedure for contesting the notice; and detail the liabilities of the tenant, when he retains or vacates the holding, with or without objection to the notice (clauses 1, 2, and 4, paragraph 69, above quoted). The rights of a tenant are, however, to be personal, and provision has been made in sections 36 (I) and 36 (II) that the heir of a tenant who dies shall retain the holding only till the expiry of the statutory term current at the time of his death; and, subject to any claim by the heir to compensation for improvements, the landlord is left free to let the holding to any person at any rent which may be arranged (clause 6, paragraph 69). The new tenant under section 35 (A) then acquires statutory rights similar to those enjoyed by his predecessor.

24. In section 36 (J) power has been taken by the Local Government to vary the limit of enhancement at stated intervals (clause 3, paragraph 69).

25. In Chapter V of the Act are the provisions for ejectment and the determination of tenancies. In this there has again been much addition and, for the sake of clearness, some re-arrangement of the sections.

26. Section 37 of the Bill reproduces section 41 of the Act unchanged, and states that a tenant with a right of occupancy, and in certain other cases, may be evicted only by a decree for ejectment. Among these tenants is included, by the present Act, a tenant under a special agreement. A tenant evicted by decree is not entitled to the compensation for disturbance given to the statutory tenant of the Bill. The Lieutenant-Governor is of opinion that the section should continue to cover the case of a tenant under special agreement.

27. Section 38 of the Bill is with some alteration section 42 of the Act. It covers the case of all other tenants, and permits their eviction either by a decree for ejectment under section 43 (A) of the Bill, or by an application where decreed arrears of rent remain unpaid, or by the notice of ejectment prescribed by the present Act. The application for ejectment for arrears has been taken from section 35 of the North-Western Provinces Rent Act (XII of 1881), and is a simpler procedure, which the improved position of the tenant justifies, than the application in execution of decree allowed by the present Act.

28. If the landlord proceeds by notice he is required by section 38 (A) of the Bill to deposit the compensation for disturbance, which was part of the scheme of the letter of December, 1883 (paragraph 69, clause 4).

29. In section 39 of the Bill (43 of the Act), which describes the details to be given in the notice, the only important change is that the time of service is put much earlier in the year (15th of November instead of 15th April). Tenancies will now be of seven years' duration, and it is very desirable that notice should be given in sufficient time to admit of all claims on the ground of improvement or other objections being fully sifted and decided before the expiry of the year.

30. Section 40 of the Bill (section 37 of the Act) then details the grounds on which the notice of ejectment may be contested. To the grounds given in the Act have to be added those which the new provisions in the Bill require. The notice may have been issued before the seven years of the statutory tenancy have expired, or the compensation for disturbance may have been deposited only in part or not at all. In sections 40 (A) and 40 (B) of the Bill the tenant is required, if he has any claim to compensation for improvements, to give a specific statement of his claim, and the Court is to determine it before it allows eviction. From the ambiguous language of the Act there have been contradictory rulings in the Rent Courts of Oudh as to the liability of the tenant to eviction before receipt of compensation due to him for improvements. It was clearly the intention of section 22 that he should be compensated before he was removed, and this is definitely expressed in the Bill.

31. Sections 41 and 42 of the Bill represent sections 44 and 45 of the Act with such alterations as the provisions of the preceding sections or experience in the working of the present Act require. In section 42 of the Bill a clause has been inserted, which was much wanted, enabling the Court to give assistance to the landlord, when needed, to evict a tenant who has contested a notice unsuccessfully. These sections contain the only provisions by which a landlord can remove a tenant of bad character, and no tenant is so likely to resist any action by the landlord himself. If assistance may be properly asked when the tenant has not contested the notice at all, it is more needed when the notice has been contested without valid ground of objection. The section in its present form follows the provision of section 40 of the North-Western Provinces Rent Act.

32. Section 43 of the Bill has been taken, as already explained, from the Rent Act of the North-Western Provinces.

33. Section 13(A) is the provision which the Lieutenant-Governor would substitute for section 11 of the Act, in regard to the terms on which a tenancy may be determined by a decree for ejectment. Section 11 bases it on a failure to perform or observe any of the stipulations of the lease or patta; but the patta of a statutory tenant will not contain any special stipulations, and when such a tenant defaults in his rent the landlord's process will be under section 43 of the Bill.

Even a statutory tenant, however, should be liable to ejectment if he uses his holding in a manner which renders it unfit for the purposes of his tenancy, and provision to that effect, taken from section 41 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, has been introduced in section 13(A) of the Bill. Moreover, many statutory tenants will hold on grain-rents; and as the amount of the landlord's receipts depends on the area the tenant cultivates, the landlord should be ensured against serious damage by the tenant's deliberate neglect to cultivate. In paragraph 77 of my letter of December, 1883, it was recommended that local custom should be left to decide what extent of failure in cultivation should be followed by forfeiture of the holding. This is the object of the second clause in section 13(A) of the Bill.

Tenants, however, "having a right of occupancy, or holding under an unexpired lease, or special agreement or decree of Court," are protected by section 41 of the Act (37 of the Bill) from eviction, except in execution of a decree for ejectment. The section specifies that a decree for ejectment against a tenant with a right of occupancy shall not be made unless at the date of the decree a decree against him for an arrear of rent has remained for fifteen days unsatisfied; but no definite explanation is given of the conditions under which ejectment may be made of the other classes of tenants specified in the section whether for failure in stipulations in the unexpired lease or special agreement, cessation of the effect of the decree of Court, or other ground for eviction. The Lieutenant-Governor presumes that it has been hitherto left to be decided under the general law whether the grounds for eviction in any such case are or are not sufficient, and that it is unnecessary to give any precise specification. This is, however, a matter on which the Legislative Department will advise.

34. In sections 44 and 45 of the Bill, corresponding to sections 38 and 39 of the Act, the period of the year it stated at which ejectment may take place. A sub-lessee is subjected to a special penalty in section 38(A) of the Bill, and there seems no reason for excepting him from the general rule that ejectment shall take place at the close of the agricultural year. As a statutory tenant he could only then be ejected, and for the same reason the last clause of section 38 of the Act should be omitted.

35. In section 39 of the Act the word thikadār has been substituted for sub-lessee.

36. Section 40 of the Act has been practically absorbed in section 13 of the Bill.

37. To this chapter of the Act two sections have been added in regard to sir-lands. The Lieutenant-Governor accepts the opinion that in the home-farms of the landlords no statutory rights should be recognised in the tenants who may from time to time be admitted to cultivate in them. The principle is recognised in the Tenancy Acts of the North-Western Provinces and Bengal. Whenever, however, statutory rights are recognised outside the private lands of the zamindār, it becomes necessary to define what these private lands are. Hitherto there has been in Oudh no special reason for entering as sir in the rent-rolls land which is not sir; for the change of law now proposed, which is to restrict the arbitrary powers of landlords over all holdings that are outside sir, has not been anticipated, and the revision of assessment is still sufficiently distant to make it more convenient for the collection of rent that land let to tenants shall be so recorded. From all that has been reported the village rent-rolls are in this respect, as indeed in most others, very fairly correct; and the Lieutenant-Governor is disposed, therefore, to make a less exacting definition of sir than that in force in the North-Western Provinces. The definition of sir which is given in section 16 (A) of the Bill is for these reasons less stringent in several particulars than that which is laid down in section 3 of the North-Western Provinces Rent Act. It has been proposed on some authority to adjust this definition on the principle of allowing land to fall into sir and again to fall back into ordinary tenancy land by fixing certain periods after which continuous cultivation by the landlord or by a tenant should determine the character of the cultivating occupancy. The rule of the North-Western Provinces is to fix a long period of continuous cultivation by the landlord, and then to make the lands so cultivated a permanent addition to his original sir, whether he continues to cultivate or lets to a tenant. The Bengal Act prevents any accession to the present sir unless it is recognised by village custom.

The Lieutenant-Governor would have been glad, nevertheless, to admit a proposal which is quite in keeping with the fluctuation of all agricultural enterprises, and the developments and depressions which circumstances frequently induce in agricultural families. No adjustment, however, has been discovered to equal to the recognition of land as sir and their restoration to the normal conditions of tenancy which the landlord will not be able so to manipulate as to exclude from the status of provis an area of cultivated land considerably larger than that which he for the time being occupies. For the purposes of the landlord's enjoyment, nevertheless, there is no restriction on the development. When a tenant's holding falls in by his death, it is open to the landlord to occupy it himself instead of letting it to another tenant. Whether, therefore, a new-cultivated sir or not will merely operate in determining whether the landlord can subsequently let it without initiating the usual statutory privileges of his tenant. After mature consideration the Lieutenant-Governor is of opinion that sir to the extent of all present requirements is provided by the definition as it stands in the Bill, that this may, as in the North-Western Provinces and Oudh, be permanently excluded from the operation of the sections which regulate the ordinary holdings of tenants, but that for the temporary provision made by the law to enable small holders to cultivate land and to develop it, to remove permanently any lands from the general operation of this section.

38. The section 10 of the Bill has been added to in the case of lessees and mortgagees who demand that their mortgagees have to let land under their personal cultivation. There are lands which, on the expiry of the lease or the term of the mortgage, are paying no rent; and unless some express provision is made the lessee or mortgagee would apparently have not only the customary rights of a tenant, but be entitled to sit rent-free.

39. In Chapter VI (Distress for Arrears of Rent) the Lieutenant-Governor proposes no change.

40. In Chapter VII (Jurisdiction of the Courts) the change is few.

41. In the proposed section 118 a change has been made in the terms of section 9 of the North-Western Provinces and Oudh Act, excluding entirely the jurisdiction of all Courts other than Courts of Revenue in the class of cases specified.

In clause 3 it seems unnecessary to limit a suit for enhancement to the case of an occupying tenant. A lessee, in whose lands there may be large alienation may be liable to a suit for enhancement.

The last part of clause 4 is unnecessary for reasons stated in an earlier part of this letter.

In clause 9 an addition is necessary from the terms of section 23 of the Bill.

In clause 10 an addition is required by section 24 (A) of the Bill.

42. In section 91 an addition is proposed authorising the Local Government to invest any officer of the revenue a Deputy Collector with the powers of a Deputy Commissioner to hear applications by a tenant under section 24 to make improvements, or of a landlord under section 25 to eject a tenant for arrears of rent.

43. Section 102 of the Act gives summary power to Deputy Collectors to restore possession to persons who have been illegally dispossessed. From orders under this section there is no appeal. Against the section there has been much complaint, and now that the position of the tenant will be comparatively secure it is preferable that the restoration should be by ordinary summary proceedings to the usual appeal. For this section of the Act has been substantially a failure, since the landlord to recover a land rent for land which has been occupied and improved by the tenant, the force of any such possession has been for many years a dependent on the will of the Government. The only course open to the landlord hitherto, when a tenant has wrongfully taken possession, has been to eject him, or to attack him by the ordinary process of a suit in the Civil Court for damages. If the land is to be held in the present year, the provision of sections 25 and 26 of the Act prevents the landlord from recovering any rent in the Rent Court.

44. Section 103 of the Act provides that in all suits under the Act the summons to the defendant shall be for the trial of the whole suit. The suit is in many cases intricate, and will hereafter involve and concern a series of a longer and more valuable character. It is proposed to limit this provision to specified classes of suits.

45. Section 116 of the Act is no longer consistent with the general provisions of the Bill, and shall be omitted.

46. Section 125 of the Act provides that sale of an under-proprietary tenure shall not be made if satisfaction of the decree can be made by management of the tenure under sections 213 and 214 of the Civil Procedure Code of 1859 (or the corresponding sections of the Code of 1882). Management of under-proprietary tenures by the Deputy Commissioner has for some time, however, been recognized as practically impossible. They are generally small; as they come under the Deputy Commissioner's charge, they are usually settled, and official management can be neither efficient nor economical. If the under-proprietor can give the Deputy Commissioner any anticipation that a private adjustment of the judgment-debt can be effected by mortgage or otherwise, time can always be given under section 305 of the Code of 1852, and the Lieutenant-Governor's opinion on the whole is that all of the section, except the first sentence, may be without disadvantage omitted.

47. In a concluding chapter (X) of the Bill are entered four new sections.

48. Section 120 reserves to the Local Government authority, under the sanction of the Governor General in Council, to appoint an officer for the revision of rents in an estate in which from grave mismanagement the condition of the tenantry has been materially deteriorated or the area of the cultivation diminished. This formed the seventh clause of the scheme in paragraph 69 of the Letter of 21st December, 1883, and the reasons for the provision have been there sufficiently explained.

49. Under the present registration law all pottas for seven years, for however small a sum, must be registered. The inconvenience of an enforced registration throughout the country would be very serious, and all the pottas of all tenants will be checked by the supervisor-lanangos, registration being to be unnecessary. The object of registration is practically effected by his verification, and registration will be difficult when the verification is made in the course of his circuit rounds. It is proposed, therefore, in section 130, to exempt pottas for the statutory period of seven years from the Registration Act.

50. In section 131 reference is made to a schedule in which will be entered certain tracts which the Lieutenant-Governor proposes to exclude from the general rule of a statutory right to a seven years' holding. It has been explained in paragraph 75 of the Letter of December, 1883, that in part of the Muzaffargarh and submontane districts the area is so exceptional, the population so very small, the season, and the other circumstances, that each harvest. With the exception of these general proposals in the Bill, no more is to be said in these tracts the population is sparse, and the tenants can command the Government. A list of the areas to be included will be forwarded subsequently.

51. In the last section (132) of the Bill power is taken to the Local Government to make any rule necessary under the Act and consistent with it. The terms of the sections have been taken from the last clause of section 211 of the North-Western Provinces Rent Act.

Second publication.

The following Bill was introduced in the Council of the Governor-General of India for the purpose of amending Laws and Regulations on the 9th June, 1886, and was referred to a Select Committee—

NO. 8 OF 1886.

A Bill to alter the constitution of the Indian Museum, and to confer certain additional powers on the Trustees.

WHEREAS it is expedient that the constitution of the body corporate known as the Trustees of the Indian Museum, and to amend the Law relating to the powers of the said Trustees, it is hereby enacted as follows:—

1. (1) The Act may be called the Indian Museum Act, 1886; and

(2) It shall come into force at once.

2. Sections 3, 4 and 5 of the Indian Museum Act, 1876, are repealed.

3. For those sections the following shall be substituted, namely:—

3. The Trustees of the Indian Museum shall consist of the following:—

- (a) the person for the time being holding the office of Accountant-General of Bengal;
- (b) five other persons to be appointed by the Governor-General in Council;
- (c) five other persons to be appointed by the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal;
- (d) five other persons to be appointed by the Council of the Asiatic Society of Bengal; and
- (e) five other persons to be appointed by the Trustees;

and the said Trustees shall be a body corporate by the name of the Trustees of the Indian Museum, and shall have perpetual succession and a common seal.

4. All the powers of the said body corporate may be exercised so long and so often as there are nine members thereof.

5. If a trustee appointed under section 3 dies, or is absent from India for more than twelve consecutive months, or desires to be discharged, or refuses or becomes incapable to act, or becomes Accountant-General of Bengal, then the authority which appointed the trustee may appoint a new trustee in his place.

4. (1) For the purposes of the Indian Museum Act, 1876, it is enacted that XXII of the Act—

(a) the persons nominated by the Governor-General in Council under the Indian Museum Act, 1876, and now holding office as Trustees, shall be deemed to be persons appointed by the Governor-General in Council in section 5 of that Act as amended by this Act;

(b) the President of the Asiatic Society of Bengal and the other members of the Council of that Society nominated by that Council under the Indian Museum Act, 1876, and now holding office as Trustees, shall be deemed to be persons appointed by the Council of the Asiatic Society of Bengal under the said section; and

(c) the persons elected and appointed by the Trustees under the said Act, and now holding office as Trustees, shall be deemed to have been appointed by the Trustees under the said section.

5. The Secretary to the Government of India and the Superintendent of the Geological Survey of India shall be ex-officio members of the said body corporate.

5. Notwithstanding anything to the contrary contained in the Indian Museum Act, 1876— XXII of

(a) the Trustees of the Indian Museum, if they think fit, may, with the previous sanction of the Governor-General in Council, and subject in each case to such conditions as he may approve and to such rules as he may from time to time prescribe, assume the custody and administration of collections which are not the property of the Trustees for the purposes of their trusts in that Act mentioned, and keep and preserve the collections either in the Indian Museum or elsewhere; and

(b) in the event of the trust constituted by that Act being determined, the collections of which the Trustees have assumed the custody and administration under the foregoing part of this section shall not, by reason of their then being in the Indian Museum, become the property of the Government of India.

6. And whereas it is provided in the Indian Museum Act, 1876, that the Trustees of the Indian Museum shall have the exclusive possession, occupation and control, for the purposes of their trusts in that

Act mentioned, of the whole of the building called the Indian Museum, except certain portions thereof set apart for other purposes; and whereas the Trustees are by virtue of that provision in possession of the property described in the schedule to this Act: It is hereby enacted as follows:—

6. The Trustees may, with the previous sanction of the Governor-General in Council, and subject to such conditions as he may approve, deliver possession of that property to such person as the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal may appoint in that behalf.

THE SCHEDULE.

Land bounded on the north by a straight line drawn between the east and the west boundaries parallel to the main south wall of the Museum at a distance of twenty-five feet from the said wall, on the west and south-west by the Chowringhee Road and the walls of the premises known as No. 29 Chowringhee Road, on the south by Kyd Street, and on the east by the walls of the premises known as No. 15 Kyd Street and No. 1 Chowringhee Lane, measuring in all four acres, three rods and sixteen perches, together with all buildings, roads and tanks existing or erected thereon, and all easements appertaining thereto.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

The object of this Bill is to give effect to an arrangement, made with the approval of the Government of India, whereby—

- (a) The Bengal Government is to be represented among the Trustees of the Indian Museum;
- (b) The Bengal Government is to be the Trustees of the property already in possession of the Government of India, India Office, and the Art Collection, and to transfer to that Government the land which
- (c) The Bengal Government is to be the Trustees of the property already in possession of the Government of India, India Office, and the Art Collection, and to transfer to that Government the land which

Sections 3 and 4 provide for the representation of the Bengal Government among the Trustees, and section 5 and 6 empower the Trustees to assign the custody of the collections belonging to the Bengal Government, and to transfer to that Government the land on which the School of Art and Art Gallery are to be built.

The following Bill was introduced into the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 9th June, 1886.—

No. 9 OF 1886.

THE DEBTORS BILL, 1886.

CONTENTS.

SECTIONS.

1. Short title and commencement.
2. Extent.
3. Definition.
4. Enforcement of decree or order for money by imprisonment permissible in excepted cases only.
5. Discretionary powers of Courts in some excepted cases.
6. Power to make rules for guidance of Courts in other excepted cases.
7. Provisions as to imprisonment under Act.
8. Commitment of fraudulent debtors to Magistrate.
9. Special provisions with respect to arrest before judgment.
10. Saving of proceedings antecedent to commencement of Act.
11. Act to bind the Crown.
12. Powers exercisable from time to time.

A Bill to amend the law relating to Imprisonment for Debt.

WHEREAS it is expedient to amend the law relating to imprisonment for debt; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

1. This Act may be called the Debtors Act, 1886; and it shall come into force on the first day of January, 1888.

2. (1) This Act shall extend, in the first instance, only to the territories administered by the Lieutenant-Governor of the North-Western Provinces and Chief Commissioner of Oudh.

(2) But any other Local Government, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, may, by notification in the official Gazette, extend this Act, with effect on and from a day not less remote than one year from the date of the notification, to the whole or any specified part of the territories under its administration or to any class of debtors within the whole or any specified part of those territories.

3. In this Act the expression "Revenue Court"

Definition. means a Court having jurisdiction in suits for the rent, revenue or profits of land.

4. Notwithstanding anything in the Code of Civil Procedure or any other enactment, a person shall not be liable to arrest or imprisonment for default in compliance with a decree or order of a Civil or Revenue Court for payment of money except in the following cases:—

(a) where the order is for payment of a fine; [Act X, 1882, s. 180; Act XIV, 1882, ss. 170, 171 & 412.]

(b) where the defaulter is a trustee or person acting in a fiduciary capacity, and the decree or order requires him, as such, to pay any money which is in his possession or under his control, or any money for which he is accountable and of which he has not discharged himself; [32 & 33 Vic., c. 62, s. 4; Guardians and Wards Bill, 1886, s. 38.]

(c) where the Court is satisfied that, since incurring the liability in respect of which the decree or order was made, the defaulter has fraudulently transferred, concealed or removed any part of his property, or committed any other act of bad faith in relation thereto, with the object or effect of impeding the enforcement of the decree or order by the attachment and sale of his property; [Act XIV, 1882, s. 359.]

(d) where the Court is satisfied that the defaulter either has, or has had since the date of the decree or order, the means to pay the money, and has refused or without reasonable cause neglected, or refuses or neglects, to pay the same. [32 & 33 Vic., c. 62, s. 5.]

[Act XIV,
1882, s. 287;
32 & 33 Vic.,
c. 62, s. 5.]

6. (1) The High Court, with respect to Courts subordinate to it, and the Chief Controlling Revenue authority, with respect to Courts subordinate to it, may, with the approval of the Local Government and the sanction of the Governor General in Council, make rules for regulating the procedure to be observed in inquiries for determining whether the case of a defaulter for whose arrest or imprisonment application has been made is a case coming within the exceptions specified in clauses (c) and (d) of section 4, or within either of these exceptions.

(2) Rules may be made under this section—

(a) for the territories administered by the Lieutenant-Governor of the North-Western Provinces and Chief Commissioner of Oudh, at any time after the passing of this Act, and

(b) for territories under the administration of any other Local Government, at any time after the publication of the notification extending this Act to those territories or to any class of defaulter therein;

but rules so made shall not take effect until the Act comes into force in the territories for which they have been made.

(3) An authority making rules under this section shall, before making the rules, prepare a draft of the proposed rules in such manner as the Governor General in Council, by notification in the Gazette of India, prescribes.

(4) There shall be published with the draft a notice specifying a date at or after which the draft will be taken into consideration.

(5) The authority making the rules shall receive and consider any objection or suggestion which may be made by any person with respect to the draft before the date so specified.

(6) A rule made under this section shall not take effect until it has been published in the local official Gazette.

(7) The publication in that Gazette of a rule purporting to be made under this section shall be conclusive proof that it has been duly made.

7. The operation of the enactment under which the defaulter is liable to

Provisions as to imprisonment under Act—any case coming within the exceptions specified in clauses

(b), (c) and (d) of section 4, or within any of those exceptions, or is entitled to release from the arrest or discharge from the imprisonment, shall be subject to the following provision, namely:—

(a) the defaulter may be imprisoned for such term, not exceeding six months, as the Court directs;

(b) no allowance for the subsistence of the defaulter, or for supplying him with clothing or bedding, shall be payable by the person on whose application the order for the imprisonment of the defaulter is made;

(c) during the term of his imprisonment the defaulter shall be maintained at the expense of the Government, and be subject, as nearly as circumstances admit, to the discipline prescribed in the case of a criminal prisoner undergoing simple imprisonment;

(d) notwithstanding the payment of the money in respect of which the decree or order was made, or any arrangement for the payment thereof or proof of present inability to pay it, or any expression of intention to apply for a declaration of insolvency, or any request by the person on whose application the order for the arrest or imprisonment was made, the defaulter shall not be released from arrest, or, if he is in prison and the term of his imprisonment is not fulfilled, be discharged from prison, without the order of the Court;

(e) an appeal from the order for the imprisonment of the defaulter, and from an order refusing his release or discharge under clause (d) of this section, shall lie—

(i) if the Court making the order is a Civil Court subordinate for the purposes of the Code of Civil Procedure to the District Court, then to the District Court,

(ii) if the Court making the order is any other Civil Court, then to the High Court, and

(iii) if the Court making the order is a Revenue Court, then to the authority to which appeals lie from orders of the Court relating to the execution of decrees, or, where those orders of the Court are final, to such authority as the Local Government may, by notification in the official Gazette, appoint in this behalf;

and the order passed on the appeal shall be final.

8. Where the Court is of opinion that the Commitment of fraudulent defaulter has been guilty of any offence under the Indian Penal Code or under any enactment for the time being in force for the punishment of fraudulent debtors, it may, if it thinks fit, instead of ordering his imprisonment under this Act, send him to a Magistrate to be dealt with according to law.

9. Notwithstanding anything in Chapter XXXIV of the Code of Civil Procedure, or any other enactment, a defendant in a suit for money only who has been arrested before judgment shall not, as such, either be required to give security for his appearance at any time after the day on which judgment is given, or, if he has been committed to prison, be detained in prison after that day:

Provided that, if judgment is given against the defendant, and the decree-holder applies, on the day on which judgment is given, for the enforcement of the decree by the imprisonment of the judgment-debtor, the Court may require the judgment-debtor to give such security as it thinks

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

Imprisonment for Debt in India.

A decree or order for the payment of money may be enforced in India by the imprisonment of the judgment-debtor (Act XIV of 1882, s. 251). The Court has a discretionary power to refuse execution at the same time against the person and property of the judgment-debtor (s. 230), but has no discretionary power to refuse execution either against person or against property at the option of the creditor. When an application for execution of a decree is presented, it must, if it is not barred by efflux of time and is otherwise in order, be admitted, and then the Court must order execution of the decree according to the nature of the application (s. 245). The Court cannot refuse to issue its warrant for the execution of the decree unless it sees cause to the contrary (s. 250), and "cause to the contrary," as interpreted by the Courts, means some cause which deprives the decree-holder of the right to execute, or to execute against the party against whom execution is sought, or to execute in the mode prayed for.

2. A judgment-debtor may, when arrested, obtain immediate release by payment of the debt; but if he does not, he must be brought at once before the Court (ss. 336-337).

3. The Local Government may by notification* direct that whenever a judgment-debtor is arrested in execution of a decree for money, and brought before the Court, the Court shall inform him that he may apply, under Chapter XX of the Code, to be declared an insolvent, and that he will be discharged if he has not committed any act of bad faith regarding the subject of his application, and if he places all his property in possession of a receiver appointed by the Court (s. 336).

4. If the judgment-debtor expresses his intention so to apply, and furnishes sufficient security that he will appear when called on, and that he will, within one month, apply to be declared an insolvent, the Court is to release him from arrest. But if he fails so to apply, the Court may either direct the security to be realised, or commit him to prison in execution of the decree (s. 336).

5. A person is not to be imprisoned in execution of a decree for more than six months, or, if the debt does not exceed fifty rupees, for more than six weeks (s. 312).

6. Whilst he is in prison, a monthly allowance must be paid for his subsistence according to scales fixed by the Local Government. The allowance is to be supplied by the decree-holder, and is to be deemed costs in the suit (ss. 338 to 340).

7. He is to be discharged from prison—

- (a) on the amount mentioned in the warrant of committal being paid to the officer in charge of the prison, or
- (b) on the decree being otherwise fully satisfied, or
- (c) at the request of the person on whose application he has been imprisoned, or
- (d) on default in the payment of the allowance for his subsistence, or
- (e) on his being declared an insolvent, or
- (f) on the expiration of the term of his imprisonment (s. 341).

His discharge from prison does not discharge him from his debt, but he cannot be re-arrested under the same decree (s. 341).

8. By the Presidency Small Cause Courts Act, XV of 1882, the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure are applied, with modifications and exceptions, to the procedure in the Small Cause Courts at Calcutta, Madras and Bombay. Among the provisions not so applied are those which relate to the release of an arrested judgment-debtor on his expressing an intention to apply for a declaration of insolvency. Chapter XX of the Code, relating to insolvent judgment-debtors, is also not applied to these Courts. (See s. 23 and sched. II.)

9. The Act, however, contains certain special provisions with respect to an arrested judgment-debtor. Under section 29 the Court may release him from arrest on his giving security for payment. And under section 30, if it appears to the Court that a judgment-debtor under its decree is unable, from sickness, poverty or other sufficient cause, to pay the amount of the decree, or of any instalment under the decree, the Court may, from time to time, for such time and on such terms as it thinks fit, suspend the execution of the decree, and release the debtor, or make such order as it thinks fit.

10. In the four districts of the Dekkhan to which the Dekkhan Agriculturists' Relief

* "No agriculturist shall be arrested or imprisoned in execution of a decree for money passed whether before or after this Act comes into force."—(Act XVII of 1879, s. 21, as amended by Act XXII of 1882, s. 8.)

Acts apply arrest and imprisonment for debt have been abolished in the case of agriculturists.* And certain special Acts for the relief of embarrassed landholders contain provisions protecting the debtor from arrest or imprisonment in respect of the debts to which the Acts apply.

Imprisonment for Debt in England.

11. Imprisonment for debt was abolished in England by the Debtors Act of 1869 (32 & 33 Vic., c. 62), except in the following cases:—

- (1) default in payment of a penalty, or sum in the nature of a penalty, other than a penalty in respect of a contract;
- (2) default in payment of a sum recoverable summarily before a Justice or Justices of the Peace;
- (3) default by a trustee or person acting in a fiduciary capacity and ordered to pay by a Court of Equity any sum in his possession or under his control;
- (4) default by a solicitor in payment of costs, when ordered to pay costs for misconduct as such, or in payment of a sum of money, when ordered to pay the same in his character of an officer of the Court;
- (5) default in payment for the benefit of creditors of any portion of a salary or other income, in respect of the payment of which any Court having jurisdiction in bankruptcy is authorized to make an order;
- (6) default in payment of sums in respect of the payment of which orders may be made under the Act (that is, cases of contumacious refusal under section 5 of the Act, see para 14).

12. The term of imprisonment in these excepted cases must not exceed one year (s. 4).

13. In cases (3) and (4) the Court has power to enquire into the case, and at discretion to grant or refuse an order for arrest or imprisonment (41 & 42 Vic., c. 51, s. 1).

14. Under section 5 of the Act of 1869, a Court may commit to prison for a term not exceeding six weeks, or until payment of the sum due, any person who makes default in payment of any debt, or instalment of any debt, due from him in pursuance of any order or judgment of that or any other competent Court. But the power is not to be exercised unless it is proved to the satisfaction of the Court that the person making default has, or has had, since the date of the order or judgment, the means to pay the sum in respect of which he has made default, and has refused or neglected to pay it. "Proof of the means of the person making default may be given in such manner as the Court thinks just, and for the purposes of such proof the debtor and witnesses may be summoned and examined on oath, according to the prescribed rules." A summons under this section is usually called a judgment summons.

15. It will be observed that all the cases in which a debtor is liable to imprisonment under the Act of 1869 involve some degree of delinquency.† And it has been held by high authority‡ that the Act was distinctly intended for the purpose of punishing fraudulent or dishonest debtors.

16. Sums recoverable summarily before Justices, or, as they are called in modern statutory language, Courts of summary jurisdiction, are usually fines. But as ordinary civil debts are in some cases so recoverable, it has been provided by the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879 (42 & 43 Vic., c. 49, section 35) that an order of a Court of summary jurisdiction for the payment of a civil debt is not to be enforced by imprisonment, unless the case is such as would make the debtor liable to imprisonment under section 5 of the Debtors Act, 1869.

Imprisonment for Debt in Scotland.

17. In Scotland imprisonment for debt for sums under £5-6-8 was abolished in 1835 by 5 & 6 Wm. IV, c. 70, but alimentary debts (that is, debts for the support of the debtor's wife or children) were excepted from the operation of that Statute. In 1880 was passed the Debtors (Scotland) Act, 1880 (43 & 44 Vic., c. 34), which enacts, by section 4, that,

"with the exceptions hereinafter mentioned, no person shall, after the commencement of this Act, be apprehended or imprisoned on account of any civil debt.

"There shall be excepted from the operation of the above enactment—

- (1) taxes, fines or penalties due to Her Majesty, and rates and assessments lawfully imposed or to be imposed ;
- (2) sums decreed for aliment :

"Provided that no person shall be imprisoned in any case excepted from the operation of this section for a longer period than twelve months."

The same Act contains provisions for the relief of insolvent debtors and for the punishment of fraudulent debtors.

18. By the Civil Imprisonment (Scotland) Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vic., c. 42), imprisonment for alimentary debts was abolished, except in cases where there is a wilful failure to obey the decree for the debt (ss. 3 and 4), and the maximum term of imprisonment for failure to pay rates or assessments was reduced to six weeks (s. 5).

Imprisonment for Debt in Ireland.

19. In Ireland the law as to imprisonment for debt is regulated by the Debtors Act (Ireland), 1872 (35 & 36 Vic., c. 57), as amended by 41 & 42 Vic., c. 54, and is practically identical with the English law.

Proposals for amendment of Indian Law.

20. On the 17th November, 1881, a circular was addressed by the Government of India to all Local Governments and Administrations, stating that the Government of India had under consideration the question of amending the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure bearing upon the question of the arrest of pardānashin women in execution of the decrees of Civil Courts, but that before coming to any final conclusion on the subject the Governor General in Council thought it desirable to deal with the larger question of abolishing imprisonment for debt, and for this purpose to enquire whether sufficient reasons exist for the continued maintenance in India of the present system. Local Governments and Administrations were accordingly requested to favour the Government of India with a full expression of their opinion on the matter.

21. The replies to the circular disclosed much difference of opinion as regards the advisability of maintaining in India the present system of imprisonment for debt.

22. In favour of the maintenance under existing circumstances of the present system of imprisonment for debt were the Madras Government, the Madras High Court, the Bombay Government, the Bombay High Court, the Calcutta High Court, the Calcutta Chamber of Commerce and the Trades Association, Calcutta (unless a change were accompanied by the enactment of a stringent bankruptcy law), the British Indian Association, Calcutta, the Board of Revenue, North-Western Provinces, the Punjab Chief Court, the Chief Commissioner of the Central Provinces, the Chief Commissioner of Assam (provided the law were so altered as to permit the issue of process against the person only after all means of realising the decree by process against property have been exhausted), and the Chief Commissioner and the Judicial Commissioner of Coorg. The arguments which they advanced appear to be in the main the following :—

- (a) that the total abolition of imprisonment for debt in India would be premature, and would remove from the Statute Book the only check upon the fraudulent alienation of property by solvent but dishonest debtors ;

- (b) that legislation has proceeded quite far enough in relief of the judgment-debtor,

* Sir C. Sargent, of the Bombay High Court, wrote :—

"The legal incidents of the undivided Hindu family, the minute distribution of property caused by the Muhammadan law of descent, and, though last not least, the practice of creating benami titles so common in this country, afford the dishonest debtor endless opportunities of baffling the efforts of the judgment-creditor to attach his property."

while there are in India special difficulties in executing a decree by attachment of property when the judgment-creditor is a member of an undivided* family. Creditors are not, it is said, in the habit of proceeding to extremities unless the debtor has the means of liquidating a portion at least of the debt. The men who go to prison are for the most part those who obstinately refuse to pay their debts, and cases of imprisonment for debt are not numerous ;

- (c) that the abolition of imprisonment for debt would deprive lenders of personal security, would thereby depreciate credit, and would involve an increase in the rate of interest, already very high. In the case of agriculturists this might seriously impair their ability to pay the land-revenue ;

- (d) that abolition of imprisonment for debt should only be attempted when the habits of secrecy, engendered by centuries of oppression, have partly worn away, and when transactions are open and the registration of deeds and bonds has become habitual. When the debtor's property can be easily traced and seized in execution of a decree, then it will be reasonable and right to withhold execution on the body of a pauper debtor except as a distinctly exceptional and penal measure in the case of fraud.

23. In support of the abolition of imprisonment for debt were the following authorities:—

- (a) the Advocate General of Bengal, who advocated the introduction of the English system, because there is no reason why the matter should not be regulated in India as in England, if proper exceptions and limitations, as contained in the English Debtors Act of 1869, are prescribed, and because the abolition of imprisonment for debt would not cause any public injury, while, on the other hand, the present system in most instances operates only as a means of oppression, to the total ruin of the party imprisoned and of his family;
- (b) the Bengal Government, which, while not prepared to resist the opinions of the local officers that abolition would at present be premature, thought that, if an alteration of the bankruptcy law were at any time undertaken, measures might then be adopted for the abolition of imprisonment for debt in cases where fraud is not established against the judgment-debtor;
- (c) the North-Western Provinces and Oudh Government, which regarded the existing practice of placing in the creditor's hands the power of selecting his own method of coercion as a relic of the old semi-barbarous debt laws which has now been eliminated from almost every civilized code of judicial procedure. The present system operates with severity against all debtors, honest and dishonest, indiscriminately. The power of subjecting a debtor to arrest and imprisonment should be entrusted not to the decree-holder, but to the Courts, and its exercise should be limited to cases where clear proof exists of fraudulent and contumacious attempts on the part of the judgment-debtor to defeat the operation of a decree. Imprisonment is especially hard on the cultivator and working-man, whom it deprives of their means of subsistence and of providing for their families;
- (d) the North-Western Provinces High Court, which advocated the abolition of imprisonment for debt, as it is doubtful whether "any useful purpose is served by the perpetuation in this country of that remnant of barbarism";
- (e) the Punjab Government, which believed that there is some reason to fear that, under the present system, creditors occasionally make use of the law to gratify vindictive feelings or personal spite, and to coerce debtors to sell their land and property at a price below its proper value or to relinquish their just rights. Discretionary power ought to be expressly allowed to the Civil Courts, imprisonment not being resorted to as an ordinary process of execution of a decree, unless the Court is satisfied that there has been fraud or wilful concealment of property;
- (f) the Chief Commissioner of British Burma, who pointed out that the imprisonment of debtors who are paupers, but who are not fraudulent, does no real good to any class, works directly and indirectly great harm to the poorer classes, and causes a distinct loss to the community at large. The practice of permitting such imprisonment has been gradually circumscribed among other civilized nations; among some nations it has absolutely ceased; and there is no reason why the way should not be paved for the disappearance of the system in India. Civil Courts should be allowed to grant execution against the body of judgment-debtors against whom there might be prima facie ground for presuming fraud or bad conduct, unless the presumption were rebutted by the judgment-debtor;
- (g) the Judicial Commissioner of British Burma and the Recorder of Rangoon, who were of opinion that imprisonment for debt should be abolished, except in case of fraud, which should be punished criminally. The Recorder recommended that the law as it now obtains in England should be applied to India;
- (h) the Resident at Hyderabad, who considered that the present system of imprisonment for debt is not wanted to compel payment, while it may be used to bring undue pressure to bear upon a debtor, especially in an agricultural country where interest in land is generally given as security for debts. He recommended that imprisonment for debt should be retained only to meet cases in which debtors abscond or endeavour to fraudulently evade meeting their obligations.

24. Thus, the preponderance of opinion was on the whole in favour of the maintenance of imprisonment for debt under the present condition of India, but a considerable and influential minority were in favour of its abolition.

25. The arguments on which the upholders of the present system rely fall into two classes: first, arguments which, if valid at all, are valid for England as well as for India; and, secondly, arguments based on the special circumstances and conditions of India.

26. To arguments of the first class belongs the assertion that "to remove from the Statute Book the penalty of arrest and imprisonment in execution of a decree for money would be to paralyze the commerce and trade of the country." The same objection was made in

* See Lord Cottenham's speech in 1814 on the Creditors and Debtors Bill; Hansard, 71, page 153.

England, first to the abolition of arrest on mesne process,* and afterwards to the abolition of arrest on final process. The power of arrest was removed, and neither commerce nor trade shewed any symptoms of paralysis.

27. Those who uphold imprisonment for debt, not as being generally expedient, but as being specially required for India, do so mainly on two grounds: first, the complexity and obscurity of Indian titles to property; and, secondly, the exceptional prevalence of fraud in India, and the exceptional difficulties of detecting it.

As to the first ground, it has been remarked that if it is wrong to allow a debtor to pledge his person as security for his debts, it is not the less wrong because, owing to the defect of Indian property law, he finds difficulty in giving a satisfactory security over his property.

In the argument based on the prevalence of, and difficulty of detecting fraud, there is undoubtedly much force, though it may be doubted whether the obstacles which can be placed in the way of a creditor realizing his debts are not as great in England as in India. But, however this may be, to make an honest, though needy, debtor liable to imprisonment, simply because fraudulent debtors are numerous and difficult to detect, appears to be as unjust as it would be to make homicide by misadventure punishable by death, simply because the crime of murder was rife and hard to prove.

28. There are in the opinion of the Government of India two principles which ought to be observed in every law of debtor and creditor. The Courts ought not to give effect to any pledge by a debtor either of his person or of the bare necessities of life. The debtor ought not to be allowed, by his own action, supplemented by the action of the Courts, either to deprive himself of his personal liberty, or to reduce himself to starvation. If he cannot obtain credit except on one or other of these securities, it is better that he should not obtain credit at all. Experience acquired in the Dekkhan goes to show that these principles are as applicable to India as to England. The Code of Civil Procedure recognises one of these principles by exempting from seizure for debt the debtor's bare means of subsistence. But this recognition is nullified by the refusal to adopt the principle of exempting the debtor's person from seizure. Of what use is it to reserve by law to the debtor the bare necessities of life, when he can be compelled to give them up by the threat of imprisonment? By those who advocate the retention of the present system, much reliance is placed on the very small proportion of actual imprisonments to warrants of arrest; and the inference drawn from this proportion is that the law, though harsh in theory, produces no hardships in practice. But there is reason to believe that, in the great majority of cases, exemption from arrest is purchased either by renewal of bonds on extortionate terms, or by surrender of property which the law has exempted from seizure, or by surrender of property which does not belong to the debtor at all, but to his relations or friends. In other words, the law enables a creditor to do indirectly what it forbids him to do directly.

29. It is said that the honest debtor has an easy way out of prison through the door of insolvency. But in the first place, the honest debtor ought not to be sent to prison at all; and in the next place, the door which is provided for his release is, for some reason or other, very rarely used. There is, or was until recently, a strong concurrence of opinion to the effect that the Insolvency Chapter of the Code of Civil Procedure is practically a dead letter. As to the causes of its failure,—whether it is to be accounted for by the preliminary proceedings being unnecessarily cumbrous or expensive, or by the difficulty of satisfying the Court under section 351 that the debtor has not been guilty of any kind of misconduct, or by ignorance of the law and of the modes of relief available to debtors,—opinions differ; but about the fact of failure there appears to be no difference.

30. Since 1883 the Government of India has received and published reports obtained from Her Majesty's representatives abroad on the systems of imprisonment for debt in force in the various countries to which they are accredited. Those reports showed that imprisonment for debt has been abolished in nearly all civilized countries.

31. Having regard to the state of the law in the United Kingdom, to those reports, to the success which has attended the abolition of imprisonment for debt in the case of agriculturists to whom the Dekkhan Agriculturists' Relief Acts apply, to some expressions to be found in the opinions of the authorities who considered the draft Bankruptcy Bill of 1885, and to the advocacy by the Lieutenant-Governor of the North-Western Provinces and Chief Commissioner of Oudh, and by the Chief Justice and Judges of the High Court of Judicature for the North-Western Provinces, of the entire abolition of the process of arrest for debt, so far as it is a process that can be set in motion at the discretion of the creditor, and of the enforcement of the process being restricted to cases in which the Courts are satisfied that there have been fraudulent and contumacious attempts to defeat the operation of decrees, the Government of India has decided to introduce a Bill giving effect tentatively and, in the first instance, within a limited area to the policy which dictated the English Act of 1869, and is believed by several authorities of weight to be applicable to India.

Provisions of Bill.

32. Sections 1 and 2.—It is proposed that the measure shall apply in the first instance to the North-Western Provinces and Oudh, and be extendible to other Provinces, or to particular classes of debtors in other Provinces, by Local Governments with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council.

From the opinions recorded by the Chief Commissioner and by Mr. MacEwen, the Officiating Recorder of Rangoon, on the draft Bankruptcy Bill of 1885, and by the Recorder, Judicial Commissioner and other authorities, European and Native, on the circular of 1881, there appears to be a strong feeling in Burma in favour of abolishing imprisonment for debt where the debtor has not been guilty of fraud. But it is considered desirable that the proposed Act should apply in the first instance to the territories under one Local Government, and that its effect there should be ascertained before the Act is extended to other parts of the country.

The date on which the Act is to come into force in the North-Western Provinces and Oudh is the 1st of January, 1888. If therefore the Bill is passed during the present year, decree-holders will have more than twelve months within which they may proceed against their judgment-debtors under the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure. In England the period which elapsed between the passing and the coming into force of the Debtors Act 1869, was less than five months.

33. Section 4.—This section is based on section 4 of the Debtors Act, 1869, but applies only to arrest and imprisonment for default in compliance with decrees and orders of Civil and Revenue Courts. Clause (c) is specially designed to check those fraudulent alienations of property by solvent but dishonest debtors which are relied on by the opponents of any mitigation of the existing law as the main justification of imprisonment for debt.

34. Section 5.—This section, following the 41 & 42 Vic., c. 54, permits the Court to refuse, either absolutely or on terms, an application for the arrest or imprisonment, or for the release or discharge from arrest or imprisonment, of a defaulter who is a trustee or person acting in a fiduciary capacity and is required, as such, to pay any money which is in his possession or under his control, or any money for which he is accountable and of which he has not discharged himself.

The origin and object of this clause are stated as follows by Jessel, M. R., in Marris v. Ingram (L. R. 13 Ch. D. 343):—

"Then we come to the Amendment Act of 1878 which was passed to meet a special class of cases, and the history of that Act was this. An application was made before me for the imprisonment of a trustee who had been ordered to pay a sum of money. It was a very hard case, one of an unintentional breach of trust; and though the man was actually dying, I had no alternative but to make an order. Then I had various other cases before me which led me to regret that the Court had no discretion, for it not unfrequently happened that a person who came in strictness under the first class of offences * was not guilty of any moral offence. Under those circumstances I thought it would be wise and prudent that a discretion should be given to the Courts to deal with exceptional cases, but not with the intention of repealing the existing Act. Mr. Marten, being a member of the Legislature, then adopted my suggestion, and procured this Amendment Act to be passed."

* That is to say, the defaults specified in 32 & 33 Vic., c. 62, s. 1.

35. Section 6.—This section empowers the High Court and the Chief Controlling Revenue-authority to make rules for regulating the procedure to be followed in the Courts subordinate to them respectively in inquiries as to the liability of persons to arrest and imprisonment on the ground of fraud or contumacy.

36. Section 7.—This section modifies the operation of enactments authorising arrest and imprisonment for default in compliance with decrees and orders of Civil and Revenue Courts for payment of money.

Clause (a), following the Code of Civil Procedure, limits the term of imprisonment to six months, notwithstanding that section 163 of the North-Western Provinces Rent Act, 1881, authorises imprisonment in certain cases for so long a period as two years.

Clause (b) relieves the decree-holder of the liability to maintain his judgment-debtor while in prison. If imprisonment is retained, not as a mode of enforcing payment but simply as a punishment, it will hardly be possible to continue the liability. This liability existed under the old Insolvency Law in England, and the Act which imposed it was once described as giving the creditor "the power of imprisoning and tormenting his debtor at the expense of 3s. 6d. per week."* If it is abolished, great care should be taken that imprisonment is not inflicted except in cases of misconduct which deserve punishment.

* Hansard, 71, page 451.

Clause (c) requires that the defaulter, though in the civil jail, shall nevertheless be subject, as nearly as circumstances admit, to the discipline prescribed in the case of a criminal prisoner undergoing simple imprisonment. Where a person is ordered to pay a fine, the nature and term of his imprisonment will be regulated by the general law. This clause relates to the other cases in which a debtor is liable to imprisonment. Those cases, as before observed, all involve some degree of delinquency (L. R. 6 Ch. 157), and the imprisonment contemplated by the Bill, as by the English Act (L. R. 13 Ch. D. 343), is simple, that is, without hard labour. The effect of this clause will be to deprive the defaulter, as a civil prisoner, of the privilege of maintaining himself, and purchasing or receiving from private sources food, clothing, bedding, and other necessaries (Act XXVI of 1870, s. 34).

Clause (d) provides that, except where the arrest or imprisonment is for default in payment of a fine, the defaulter, when once arrested or imprisoned, shall not be released from arrest, or discharged from prison, without the order of the Court. The Court may grant the order or refuse it. If it refuses the order, the defaulter may appeal.

Clause (c) so far modifies clause (29) of section 588 of the Code of Civil Procedure as to admit of an appeal being preferred from an order for imprisonment in execution of a decree.

37. Section 8.—This section follows section 359 of the Code of Civil Procedure in providing that where the Court is of opinion that the defaulter has been guilty of an offence against the Indian Penal Code or any special enactment for the punishment of fraudulent debtors, it may, instead of ordering his imprisonment in the civil jail, send him to a Magistrate to be dealt with according to law.

38. Sections 9 and 10.—These sections contain special provisions with respect to arrest before judgment, and save proceedings taken before the Act comes into force.

39. Section 11.—It has been decided In re Hearens Smith (L. R. 2 Ex. D. 17) that the English Debtors Act of 1869 does not apply to a case in which the defaulter is a debtor to the Crown. It is proposed that the Indian Act shall have the like effect as against the Crown where a decree or order for payment of money is made in its favour by a Civil or Revenue Court, as it will have against a subject.

40. The question of giving the Courts a discretionary power to refuse an order for the arrest and imprisonment of a judgment-debtor, or at least of a female judgment-debtor, will be considered when next the Code of Civil Procedure comes under revision.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

[Second publication.]

The following Bill was introduced into the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 9th June, 1886.—

NO. 10 OF 1886.

A Bill to declare certain allowances collectively known as Oudh Wasikas to be pensions within the meaning of the Pensions Act, 1871.

WHEREAS, on the death of Her Highness the Bahu Begam, His Highness the Nawab Vazir of Oudh delivered to the British Government a sum of money with intent that the interest accruing thereon should, in compliance with the wishes of Her Highness the Bahu Begam as expressed in a Deed of Deposit executed by her in the year 1813, be applied by the British Government to the payment of certain pensions, which pensions are known as the Amanat Wasikas;

And whereas in the year 1813 the said Government guaranteed the payment of certain pensions to persons connected with the Khas Mahal of Her Highness the Bahu Begam, which pensions are known as the Zamanat Wasikas;

And whereas in the years 1814, 1825, 1829 and 1838 loans, known respectively as the 1st, 3rd, 5th and 6th Oudh loans, were made by the Rulers of Oudh to the Hon'ble the East India Company with intent that the interest accruing thereon should be applied by the said Government to the payment of certain pensions, which pensions are known as the Loan Wasikas;

And whereas the said Government reserved to itself the right of commuting the pensions to the payment of which the Oudh loan was to be

And whereas the Amanat, Zamanat and Loan Wasikas have been regarded as pensions to which the Pensions Act, 1871, applies, and rules respecting them have been made and published under section 14 of that Act;

And whereas, since the making and publication of the rules, doubt has been expressed whether the said Wasikas are pensions within the meaning of the Pensions Act, 1871;

And whereas it is expedient to declare them to be pensions within the meaning of that Act;

It is hereby enacted as follows:—

1. This Act may be called the Oudh Wasikas Act, 1886.
2. The allowances respectively known as the Amanat Wasikas, the Zamanat Wasikas and the Loan Wasikas are, within the meaning of the Pensions Act, 1871, pensions conferred by a former Government and continued by the British Government on political considerations.
3. Notwithstanding anything in section 10 of the said Act the Local Government may, without the consent of the holder of a pension payable out of the interest accruing on the 5th Oudh loan, order the whole or any part of the pension to be commuted on the terms referred to in the fourth article of the treaty executed with respect to that loan on the first day of March, 1829, and ratified by the Governor General in Council on the eighth day of May in the same year.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

CERTAIN allowances, locally known as Amanat Wasikas, Zamanat Wasikas and Loan Wasikas, are paid by the British Government to the descendants of certain relatives and dependants of the Fa'iu Begam and the Vazirs and Kings of Oudh. Till the year 1880 no doubt was entertained that these allowances were pensions within the meaning of the Pensions Act, 1871. In that year it became desirable on financial grounds to commute one of the largest of them, and, a dispute having arisen as to the person entitled to receive the capital value of the allowance, the Government had to consider whether it could safely pay the amount under cover of the Pensions Act to the person who appeared to be best entitled. The Hon'ble the Advocate General inclined to the opinion that a Wasika was a pension within the meaning of the Act, but thought there was a good deal to be said in favour of the opposite view. As the sum involved was so very large that the Government would not have been justified in incurring any risk in disposing of it, a special Bill was introduced into the Legislative Council and passed as the Taj Mahal's Pension Act, 1881.

This step, which the Government was compelled to take for its own protection, necessarily suggested a doubt as to the applicability of the Pensions Act to Wasikas.

As it is expedient on political considerations that there should be no room for question as to the applicability of the Act to Wasikas, the Government has decided to introduce this Bill to remove the doubts created by the legislation of 1881.

Extract from the Proceedings of the Government of India, in the Revenue and Agricultural Department (Meteorology),—dated Simla, 10th June, 1886.

Read the following:—

Summary of the Weather Reports for May, 1886.

Pressure was more or less above the average during the first week, after which a period of depression set in, lasting for a few days, when the barometer again rose and remained slightly above the average till the 24th. In the last week, however, the pressure again fell below the normal.

On the mean of the whole month, the pressure was slightly above the average in the North-Western Provinces, Assam, Bengal, and Orissa, and below it elsewhere. The rainfall returns show that rain fell in one part or another of Ceylon, Madras, and Burma throughout the month. In Bombay there was no rain till the 16th, and then only a few drops at Sholapore; but on the 20th there was a rather heavy fall at Karwar, and a few showers at two or three stations on the coast to the north, which were repeated till the close of the month. The winds on the Malabar Coast were generally westerly, but light.

In Northern India such rain as occurred was sporadic, and fell at intervals of several days, generally in local storms. The total rainfall of the month was below the average in the Eastern Punjab, Assam, Cachar, Burma, Khandesh, and Berar, and there was little or no rain in Sind and Guzerat. Everywhere else there was either an average quantity or an excess.

This excess was greatest in Ceylon and the Karnatic, more, especially in the last province, where the total fall was about three times the average amount. This was to a great extent due to the heavy rain, accompanying the cyclonic storm, which crossed the Madras Coast from the Bay of Bengal on the morning of the 24th, and passed across the peninsula during that and the following day.

The temperature of Northern India was changeable; but, on the whole, the mean temperature of the month differed little from the average, being slightly below it in the North-Western Provinces, Bengal, Pegu, and Madras, and above it elsewhere. The greatest excess was about 1° in Sind. South-east winds were more frequent than usual in the Upper Provinces. On the Central Indian plateau and in the western half of the peninsula, the winds were, on the whole, westerly, and on the coasts of the Bay of Bengal southerly. The humidity of the air was generally below the average in the Punjab and above in Southern India.

The following table shows the amount of rain and the difference from the average in the month of May 1886, according to districts, as far as is indicated by the telegraphic reports:—

Districts.				Average rainfall in May.	Difference from the average in May 1886	Remarks.
Punjab, West	1.30	+0.03
Ditto East	1.82	—0.43
North-Western Provinces, Trans-Gangetic	1.57	+1.10

RUCHI RAM SAHNI,
2nd Asst. Meteorological Reporter to the Govt. of India.

RESOLUTION.—Resolved, that the papers be published in the Supplement to the Gazette of India.

No. ¹⁰³ Met.
9-6*Extract from the Proceedings of the Government of India in the Revenue and Agricultural Department (Meteorology), dated Simla, 18th June, 1886.*

Read the following :—

Preliminary Report on the Meteorology of the year 1885, prepared in the Meteorological Office, Government of India.

January.—The cool weather which characterized the closing months of 1884 continued during January over the greater part of North-Western India (comprising the Punjab, the Meerut and Bareilly divisions of the North-Western Provinces, Rajputana, Sind, and Guzerat), in Cachar and North Bengal, the south of the peninsula, British Burma, and Ceylon. Within these regions temperature was generally from 1° to 2° below the average. All across the central parts of the country, in a broad band extending from the Bombay coast to Lower Bengal and the western part of the North-Western Provinces, temperature exceeded the normal, the excess in parts of the Central Provinces and Orissa being from 2° to 2½°. Apparently the highest day temperature (93°) was registered in Bellary; the lowest night temperature (35°) on the plains at Mooltan.

Pressure was above the average throughout the whole of the Indian area; less so on the hills than on the plains, and less in Northern India than in the south of the peninsula.

North-westerly winds prevailed with their usual persistence down the Gangetic plain; but in Bengal they were less steady than usual, and at Saugor Island there were frequent southerly winds. On the Arakan coast the normal northerly winds prevailed, but further inland they were strong easterly components. In the central part of the country and on the Circar coast there was an abnormal excess of south-easterly and southerly winds. In Western India the usual northerly winds prevailed, and in the Southern Carnatic north-easterly winds.

This was a damp month over the greater part of India. In the Eastern peninsula, and at some stations in Assam and Bengal, as well as in Ceylon and a few places in the south of the peninsula, there was a deficiency in the relative humidity of the atmosphere, but in all other regions there was an excess. This excess was most marked over the central parts of the country.

On the whole, the skies were more clouded than usual. The excess was greatest in North-Western India, and decreased eastwards and southwards, so that in parts of Eastern India and the peninsula there was greater serenity than usual.

Generally over North-Western India this was a wet month. In the Punjab the rainfall was everywhere in excess. In Rajputana the variations were irregular, while in Central India, except at Bhopal and in Bundelkhand, the total rainfall of the month was below the average. In the Central Provinces and the North-Western Provinces, the anomalies in the month's rainfall were also irregular; in general they were small, but at the hill and sub-montane stations of the North-Western Provinces there was a large excess. The heavy rain of North-Western India did not extend into Bengal, so that, with a few local exceptions, there was a general deficiency. In Assam the variations were small and irregular. Sind shared the heavy precipitation of the Punjab; but the main part of the Bombay Presidency, together with the Berars, Hyderabad, and the peninsula generally, was either rainless or nearly so. In Ceylon and the Bay islands the rainfall was also deficient, as was also the case at all stations in the Eastern peninsula, except Tavoy and Mergui.

February.—This was a cool month throughout almost the whole of India, the only exceptions to the general deficiency of temperature being a few stations in the peninsula and Ceylon. The excess of temperature noticed in the central parts of the country during January had disappeared, and the relative depression was as great there as elsewhere. At Loh the mean temperature was 9° below the average, on the hills of the North-Western Himalaya from $3\frac{1}{2}^{\circ}$ to $4\frac{1}{2}^{\circ}$ below it, and at several stations on the plateau of North-Western and Central India the depression below the normal was equally great. With few exceptions, the absolute maxima at the different stations were only a few degrees higher than in January, while the absolute minima were in many cases lower in this than in the preceding month.

The excess of pressure, noticed in the previous month, continued during February in parts of the Punjab and Sind, and at a few places in the North-Western Provinces; but elsewhere there was a deficiency greatest in the Central Provinces and the Deccan. It was also greater on the hills than on the plains.

In February the wind circulation was less abnormal than in January. North-westerly winds blew steadily down the Gangetic plain and into Bengal. In Arakan the wind was north-westerly, while, at the inland stations, easterly winds were very frequent. On the west coast of the Bay, the wind was more southerly than usual, and south-easterly to easterly winds extending inland to the Deccan prevailed generally. In Sind and Guzerat the wind was north-north-east, and down the west coast north to west-north-west.

The relative humidity of the atmosphere remained excessive in the Punjab and neighbouring parts of the North-Western Provinces, Lower Bengal, several places in the Central Provinces, and the peninsula; but the regions within which the relative humidity was deficient had extended since the previous month, and now included the whole of Eastern India, Behar, and the western divisions of the North-Western Provinces, Rajputana, Sind, the Konkan coasts, the south of the peninsula, and Ceylon. The variations from the normal were generally smaller than in January.

In Bengal, parts of Central India, and over both peninsulas the sky was abnormally cloudy; elsewhere the amount of cloud was less than usual.

In the Punjab and Rajputana, and indeed throughout almost the whole of Northern India, there was a decided deficiency in the rainfall. In the maritime half of the Gangetic delta, however, there was an excess; and this excess extended into Chutia Nagpur, Orissa, the Central Provinces, and the Berars, as well as southward into Ganjam. Assam, like most other parts of Northern India, had a deficiency. In the whole of the Bombay Presidency, Hyderabad, the Madras Presidency (south of Ganjam), and Mysore and Coorg the month's rainfall was either nil or deficient. In Ceylon the variations were irregular, but, on the whole, the month's supply was short; while in Burma the anomalies were equally irregular, but the general results showed a slight excess. In the Bay islands the rainfall was again short of the average.

March.—In March temperature rose above the average over almost the whole of Northern India, but the excess in the majority of cases was less than 1° ; while in the central parts of the country, the peninsula, Ceylon, and a large part of British Burma, the abnormal coolness noticed in the preceding months continued. The extreme day temperatures were in almost all cases considerably higher than those of the preceding month; but the night temperatures showed a much slighter increment, and at the hill stations in the North-West Himalaya the lowest readings were only slightly above freezing point.

Notwithstanding the excess of temperature in Northern India, the pressure was almost everywhere above the normal, both there and in the rest of the Indian area. The excess was less than in January, and hardly so general, one or two stations showing a local deficiency.

North-westerly winds prevailed over North-Western and Central India but especially in the latter region, with rather less steadiness than usual. In Bengal southerly components were unduly developed, and steady south-south-westerly winds prevailed. In Burma the wind was about the normal. On the Northern Circars and Orissa coasts the wind was more southerly than usual. In Madras, the normal east-south-east winds prevailed, and on the west coast north-north-westerly to westerly winds.

The mean relative humidity of this month showed generally but little departure from the average. At a few places in the Punjab and in Lower Bengal there was a trifling excess, but in all other parts of Northern India there was a deficiency. In the central part of the country and in the peninsula the anomalies were small and irregular, while in Ceylon and the Eastern peninsula the relative humidity was below the average.

This was a somewhat cloudy month, except in the lower portion of the North-Western Provinces, Northern Bengal, and parts of the Assam Valley; also on the west coast, and in the south of the peninsula, where the serenity exceeded the average.

It was nevertheless a dry month, though less generally so than February. At the trans-Indus stations, and at Kilba in Baschur, there was a slight excess of precipitation, but at all the other stations in the Punjab there was a deficiency of rain.* In Rajputana, Central India, the North-Western Provinces and Oudh, and in Lower Bengal, the rainfall was almost universally much below the average. But in Behar and Northern Bengal, though some individual stations showed a deficiency, there was generally a slight excess. In Orissa and Chutia Nagpur most stations showed a deficiency. In Assam and Cachar, the anomalies were irregular. In the Central Provinces there was an excess in the southern divisions, and a deficiency in most other places. In the Berars the rainfall was slightly short. In Hyderabad the anomalies were small and irregular. In the Bombay Deccan there was a slight excess, but in nearly all other parts of that presidency the rainfall was short, and in many parts of the Konkan and Guzerat there was no rain. In Malras the variations in the rainfall were irregular, but in the Carnatic the fall was, on the whole, deficient. Mysore and Ceylon and the Bay islands exhibited conditions similar to those of Madras, while in British Burma the small amount of rain which is usually registered in this month was not received.

April.—This was a cool month in almost all parts of India. Only in Bengal, at a few stations in the western half of the North-Western Provinces, in the extreme south of the peninsula, in the Bay islands, and in British Burma was the mean temperature of the month above the average, and there only by small amounts. Elsewhere the temperature was more or less below the average, depression ranging from 1° to 5° on the plains of North-Western India and Sind, from 1° to 3° over the central parts of the country, and from 1° to 2° in the peninsula and Ceylon. The extreme day temperatures were apparently about the normal, but the extreme minimum readings seen in many cases to have been below the average, considerably so at the hill stations.

On the whole the excess of pressure noticed in March was maintained, and in some cases was indeed intensified; but on the hills of the North-West Himalaya, in Assam and Cachar, and over the whole of Bengal, where the temperature was above the mean, pressure was in defect. The most pronounced excess was shown over the Indus Valley, Sind, and Rajputana, while the greatest depression was in Assam.

In April the north-westerly or westerly winds of the Gangetic plain were more steady than usual, and even in Western Bengal westerly winds prevailed. In Lower Bengal also there was more veering in the winds than usual, but in Burma the directions were about the normal. On the west coast of the Bay steady south-easterly and southerly winds prevailed, while, on the west coast of India, the westerly winds had stronger northerly components than is usually the case.

This was a damp month in the Punjab, the North-West Himalaya, and in most parts of Central India, Rajputana, and Guzerat; but elsewhere the relative humidity was generally below the average. This deficiency was most strongly marked in Bengal and Orissa, while the region of greatest excess was the Punjab.

In both peninsulas, in Northern and Eastern Bengal, and in parts of Ceylon the cloud proportion was below the average, but elsewhere the skies were more than usually clouded.

* In the Punjab all the rain fell at the close of the month, and was accompanied by snow on the hills.

Most of the rain fell over Northern India either at the beginning or at the close of the month. Snow fell on the hills on both occasions. In the Punjab there was more or less excess, greatest on the hills and at the trans-Indus stations. In Rajputana the anomalies were very small and irregular. In Central India there was generally a slight excess; but in the North-Western Provinces and Oudh April was, on the whole, a dry month. In Bengal too, except at Darjeeling and at one or two stations in Eastern Bengal, the amount of rain was below the average. In Assam the variations were irregular, but in Sibschar there was a decided excess. In the Central Provinces and the Berars the average fall of the month was considerably exceeded. In Hyderabad the variations from the normal, as in March, were very irregular, while throughout almost the whole of the Bombay Presidency there was again a deficiency. This was equally the case throughout Madras, Mysore, Ceylon, the Bay islands, and Burma.

Temp.—The distribution of temperature, with respect to the average, was similar to that prevailing in April, but the area within which it was above the average was more restricted. It comprised only Lower Bengal, British Burma, and a few stations in the south of Madras. Elsewhere there was a marked depression of temperature, varying from 2° to 16° on the hills and plains of North-Western India, from 1° to 6° in the central parts of the country, and from 1° to 2° in the peninsula. At some stations the temperature was absolutely lower than in April.

Accompanying the extremely low temperatures noticed above, there was a large excess of pressure throughout the whole of the Indian area. This excess exceeded one-tenth of an inch in the Punjab and parts of Sind. It was much less on the hills than on the plains, and less in the peninsula than in Upper India.

As in the previous month north-west and west winds prevailed with abnormal frequency down the Ganges plain, while, in Bengal, the prevailing wind, instead of being south-south-east, was either from south or some point to the west of south. In the neighbourhood of Cape Negrais the wind was more northerly than usual. On the west coast of the Bay the prevailing directions differed but little from the average, but in the south of the peninsula the wind was more southerly and less south-westerly than usual. On the west coast there was rather more northing in the winds than usual.

In North-Western India, and particularly in the Punjab and adjacent parts of Rajputana, the relative humidity of the atmosphere was again above the average. In the Central Provinces and Central India, and at a few stations in the peninsula this was also the case, only in a modified degree; and in all other parts of the country there was a deficiency. The deficiency was owing to a failure of rain.

Very few rain clouds only clearly in April, except in Assam, Bengal, Burma, and the peninsula, where there was a deficiency of cloud.

The last few days of the month were dry over Northern India, but about the 26th in Bengal and Assam, and about the 28th in the upper provinces, local storms occurred, and cloudy disturbed weather lasted for some time. In the Punjab and northern parts of Rajputana the rainfall of the month showed a general and considerable excess. In other parts of Rajputana the variations from the normal were irregular, and in Central India the fall was generally above the average. In the North-Western Provinces the rain was, on the whole, about the average; but in Oudh, as also over the greater part of Bengal and Assam, it was generally deficient. In the Central Provinces, the Berars, and Hyderabad the average was generally more or less exceeded; but in the Bombay Presidency, excepting the Deccan, the fall was generally short. This was also the case in Madras and Ceylon. In Burma, and also in the Bay islands, the fall was far short of the average.

June.—Though much less marked than in May, there was yet a very decided depression of temperature during this month in North-Western and Central India, the Madras Presidency, and Ceylon. Elsewhere there had been a recovery from the depression hitherto prevailing; and in Bengal, the eastern divisions of the North-Western Provinces, the Bombay Presidency, the Bay Islands, and British Burma the temperature was above the average. The deficiency in the Punjab was from $\frac{1}{2}^{\circ}$ to $4\frac{1}{2}^{\circ}$, in the more central parts of the country from 1° to 6° , in Madras from $\frac{1}{2}^{\circ}$ to 2° , and in Ceylon from $\frac{1}{2}^{\circ}$ to 3° ; while the excess in Bengal was from 1° to 2° , in Bombay from 1° to $2\frac{1}{2}^{\circ}$, and in the Bay Islands and Eastern peninsula about $\frac{1}{2}^{\circ}$.

The excess of pressure noticed in the preceding month was maintained, though in a diminished degree, over the greater part of Northern and Central India; but in Lower Bengal, the Berars, Sind, and nearly the whole of the peninsula pressure was in defect. In the Eastern peninsula the variations were irregular, but, on the whole, downward.

In the Punjab the winds were about the normal, but in the North-Western Provinces and Oudh north-westerly winds continued more prevalent than usual. In Bengal, the Northern Circars, Orissa, and Burma the wind directions were about the normal. In the central part of the country the westerly winds were slightly more southerly than usual, but over the peninsula the average direction was generally maintained.

In this month there was a decided rise in the relative humidity of the peninsula and Ceylon, and both there and at several stations in the central parts of the country and in the Punjab the mean humidity of the month was in excess of the average. Elsewhere there was a deficiency, which was again greatest in Bengal.

Except in the North-Western Provinces, Assam, and Bengal, where the variations in the cloud proportion were irregular, but on the whole, below the average, the skies were very cloudy.

The monsoon rains apparently began in Ceylon and on the south-west coast of India about the 1st of June; but the rainfall did not extend steadily up the west coast, and the burst of heavy rain which usually ushers in the rainy season on the Konkan coast did not take place throughout the whole month. The Bengal branch of the monsoon brought rain to Burma, Assam, and Lower Bengal about the 10th, but the rains did not reach the Punjab until after the 26th. In the Punjab, except at the stations in the east and south-east, where there was an excess, the rainfall of the month was considerably short of the average. In Ruperiana there was a considerable, but not quite universal excess, and such was the case also over the greater part of Central India, the North-Western Provinces, and Oudh. In Bengal the variations were irregular, there being an excess in the 24-Pergunnas, and at several stations in North-East and East Bengal, Chittagong, Nagpur, and Western Bengal, and a deficiency elsewhere. In Assam and Ceylon the anomalies were irregular, but in places considerable. In the Central Provinces there was a rather general excess. In the Berars and also in Hyderabad, though some stations showed an excess, the fall was, as a rule, considerably short. Throughout the whole of the Bombay Presidency there was great deficiency, but in Madras, except in Ganjam, where the fall was short of the average, and in south and west Malabar, where it was in excess, the anomalies were variable. In Mysore the rain was deficient, but in Ceylon it was above the average. The Bay Islands had less than the usual amount, while in Burma the variations, both above and below the normal, were large.

July.—In July a considerable change took place in the temperature distribution relatively to the normal average. In the Punjab, for the first time since the month of March, the mean temperature was above it. At most of the stations in the Central Provinces and Berar, in Sind, Guzerat, and the northern Konkan, there was also a slight excess. In the North-Western Provinces, Behar, and Northern and Eastern Bengal, in British Burma and Ceylon, on the other hand, the weather was cooler than usual, while, at the peninsula stations, the anomalies were small.

Pressure fell below the average throughout the whole of Northern and Central India, except in Orissa, the neighbouring portions of the Central Provinces, parts of Rajputana and Guzerat. In the peninsula there was a deficiency at most stations on the west coast and in the Deccan, and an excess in Madras and Ceylon. In the Eastern peninsula and at the Bay islands the anomalies were small and irregular.

In the Punjab the general direction of the wind was about the average, but in Eastern Rajputana the wind, instead of being south-westerly, blew from west north-west, the dry quarter. In the North-Western Provinces, and indeed eastward over Bengal, Assam, and Arakan, the general direction of the wind was about the average and this was also the case in the peninsula and on the west coast.

The anomalies in the distribution of relative humidity during the month of July were everywhere small, comprising a slight excess in the North-Western Provinces, parts of Behar, the Central Provinces, the south of the peninsula and Arakan; and a slight deficiency elsewhere.

The only province showing a decided excess of cloud in this month was Burma. In all other parts of the country, though there were numerous local variations, the general serenity was in excess of the average.

The rains, on the whole, were better than during June. In Western India there were several heavy falls in the first half of the month, while in Northern India, excepting the Punjab and generally the western provinces, there was general and heavy rain. In the Punjab only about half the usual amount of rain fell, and in Northern and Western Rajputana there was also a deficiency; but in the east of that province the average was somewhat exceeded. In Central India, save at Bhopal and in some parts of Rewah, the rainfall was short, and this was likewise the case in the Meerut Division of the North-Western Provinces; but in most other parts of the North-Western Provinces, and generally throughout Oudh, the fall was in excess. Bengal exhibited large variations. In the North, and particularly at Julpigorie, there was a large excess, while in South-Western and Western Bengal there was a decided, and in places a large, deficiency. In Assam and Cachar the rainfall was generally heavy. The registers of the Central Provinces exhibited considerable variations, but in the upper part of the Nerbudda Valley there was a certain excess. In the Berars and Hyderabad the anomalies varied considerably; but in Bombay, except in Khandesh and at some of the hill stations, the deficiency noticed in the preceding month continued. Madras showed an excess at the stations on or near the east coast and on the Travancore coast, but a deficit elsewhere. In Mysore there was a general, and in Ceylon a partial, deficiency of rain, while in the Bay islands and Burma there was an excess.

Anomalous. In the Punjab, Sind and Assam, temperature ranged above the average and at most stations in the peninsula there was a slight excess; but elsewhere it was lower than the average. In the North-Western Provinces and Bengal the relative depression was greater than in July, amounting to between $1\frac{1}{2}$ and $2\frac{1}{2}$. In Burma the depression was about equal to that of July.

The deficiency of pressure noticed in July continued and extended during August. Only in the south of the peninsula and in Ceylon and the Bay islands was the mean pressure above the average, and then only by small amounts. The greatest deficiency was in Western Rajputana and Sind, where it exceeded 0.05 inch.

South-easterly and easterly winds prevailed generally up the Gangetic plain, but with rather less than their normal steadiness. In Bengal and Burma the wind varied between south-south-west and south-south-east, and was about normal in direction. On the west coast of the Bay, and at several stations in the central parts of India and the peninsula, the winds blew from a point slightly more southerly than usual. On the west coasts of India the direction was about the normal.

At several stations in Ceylon, and at most stations in the peninsula and Assam, the humidity was below the average; but elsewhere it was in excess.

This excess was greatest in the south-east of the Punjab and in the Agra and Meerut divisions of the North-Western Provinces. August was generally unusually cloudy, except in Assam, Madras, and Ceylon, where the weather was clearer than usual.

In some respects the rains of this month were similar in character to those of the two preceding months. In Northern India they were generally excessive, much more so than in July; while in the peninsula, with the exception of the coast stations, the fall was short. The Punjab showed an excess, except over a region extending between the Jhelum and Sutlej. Rajputana, Central India, the North-Western Provinces and Oudh all had a very heavy rainfall. In Bengal the excess was restricted to the western and central districts. The northern districts and Assam exhibited a considerable deficiency. The Central Provinces were also short of rain, and in the Berars and Hyderabad, as in the preceding month, the total fall was below the average. In Bombay, parts of the Deccan, and some places on the west coast showed a small deficiency, but in general, throughout that presidency, the average was exceeded. At the Madras stations, excepting those on the west coast, in Mysore, and Ceylon, the rainfall was short. This was also the case in the Bay islands, but in Burma there was an almost general excess.

September.--Over the greater part of the Punjab and in Sind the excess of temperature which had characterized the two preceding months had disappeared on the hills, and was succeeded by a considerable depression. In the North-Western Provinces the anomalies were variable, while in Assam and Bengal there was a decided depression of temperature. In Orissa, and to the west, in the Central Provinces, Central India, and Guzerat, and to the south over the peninsula and Ceylon, temperature was almost everywhere above the average, the excess varying between $\frac{1}{2}^{\circ}$ and $2\frac{1}{2}^{\circ}$. Northern Rajputana, like the Punjab, showed a depression of temperature, and in British Burma the anomalies were irregular.

The distribution of the pressure anomalies had undergone a considerable change. Except at a few stations in the south of the peninsula and in Ceylon, pressure was in excess, considerably so in the North-Western Provinces, the Central Provinces, and Rajputana.

Abnormal north-westerly winds prevailed generally down the Gangetic plain and over Rajputana, and extended to a considerable degree into Central India, the Central Provinces, and the Deccan. In Bengal the wind, instead of being from south-south-east, the average direction in this month, was from south-south-west. In Burma the normal winds prevailed, and in Madras there was very little departure from the average; but along the west coast the wind was slightly more northerly than usual.

Except in Madras, Assam, and one or two stations in Bengal, this was a dry month, the relative humidity being very deficient. The deficiency was greatest in the Central Provinces, but almost equally great in parts of Rajputana.

In the Indus Valley there was more than the usual amount of cloud, and this was also the case in Bengal; but elsewhere, owing to the early cessation of the rains, the general serenity far exceeded the average.

Over North-Western India the rains ceased early in the month. In Bengal rain continued to fall until near its close, and was very heavy between the 21st and 24th. In the peninsula showers occurred throughout. In the Punjab, Rajputana, Central India, the North-Western Provinces, except the most easterly divisions, and Oudh, except at one or two stations, the fall was much below the average. In Bengal, on the contrary, except in the 24-Pergunnahs, in some parts of Eastern Bengal, Orissa, and South-West Bengal, the total fall of the month was considerably above the average. Assam and Cachar had also more than the normal amount of rain, but in the Central Provinces and the Berars the rainfall was largely deficient. In Hyderabad, for the first time since the setting in of the rains, there was an excess. The Bombay returns show heavy rains in the Deccan and at a few places on the Konkan coast, but a deficiency in all other parts of the presidency. In Madras the rainfall variations were very irregular. There was a deficiency in Ganjam, in Travancore, and at many of the inland and southern stations. In Mysore the anomalies were also irregular, while in Ceylon there was a slight excess. Burma had less and the Bay islands more than the average.

October.—Over nearly the whole of Northern India (with the exception of the Assam valley), the Central Provinces, the peninsula as far south as Bangalore, and also in the Bay islands temperature ranged above the average. The excess was rather greater in Rajputana and the Central Provinces than elsewhere; otherwise it was fairly uniform between 1° and 2° . In the extreme south of the peninsula, from Madras round to Cochin, as well as in Ceylon, there was a depression of temperature, averaging in the former case about $\frac{1}{2}^{\circ}$, and in the latter varying between $\frac{1}{2}^{\circ}$ and $1\frac{1}{2}^{\circ}$.

Notwithstanding the generally high temperature, the mean pressure of October was above the normal. Only at one or two stations in the Punjab and in Sind and Guzerat were the means of the month below the average, and there only by small amounts. The greatest excess was in the south, but in parts of Burma and at the Bay islands it was almost as great.

On the whole, the winds in Northern India did not differ greatly from the average, though in some places, and particularly in the Lower Gangetic Valley, the north-westerly winds were abnormally steady. In Lower Bengal and Orissa the winds were very variable. In the Central Provinces, the Deccan, and down the Nerbudda Valley to the coast, the normal north-easterly winds prevailed. In the peninsula the wind directions were very variable.

This was a dry month, but less generally so than the preceding. In Assam there was again a slight excess of humidity, and this was also the case at the majority of the stations in the peninsula. In Ceylon and the Eastern peninsula the anomalies were small and irregular, though generally downward.

The skies generally were more clouded than usual. In the western districts of the North-Western Provinces however, in Behar, and Chutia Nagpur there was locally greater serenity.

In North-Western India the fine weather which set in in September continued uninterruptedly; but elsewhere it became showery and unsettled. In the Punjab, Rajputana, the greater part of Central India, the North-Western Provinces and Oudh, and nearly the whole of Bengal there was either no rain, or the total fall of the month was deficient. At a few stations in Northern and Eastern Bengal there was, however, a slight excess. Assam, like Bengal, had a generally deficient rainfall; but the Central Provinces, the Berars, and Hyderabad had more than the usual amount. Bombay exhibited a deficiency in Sind and Guzerat, and an excess in almost all other parts of the presidency. In Madras there was a very general, and in places, a considerable excess, at the southern and western stations, but a deficiency elsewhere. In Mysore and Ceylon the rainfall was excessive, while both in the Bay islands and in Burma the monthly amount was below the average.

November.—The abnormal excess of temperature which characterized October prevailed even more generally in November. In India only at one or two stations in Bengal and in the peninsula was the mean temperature below the average, though in Ceylon and the Eastern peninsula the variations were more irregular. The relative excess was decidedly greater than during October, especially in the Punjab, Southern Rajputana, and Sind, where it averaged between 3° and 4° .

The excess of pressure was both more general and more marked than in October, and the excess was as pronounced on the plains as on the hills.

The general wind directions in November were about such as are usual. North-westerly winds prevailed at most stations in the Punjab, the North-Western Provinces, and Behar; northerly and north-north-easterly over Bengal and the Central Provinces; and north-easterly winds in Central India, the Deccan, and the greater part of the peninsula. On the Travancore coast the wind was north-north-westerly.

The relative humidity anomalies of November were generally very similar to those of October. At a few stations in the North-Western Provinces, in Assam, Lower Bengal, Guzerat, and Madras there was a slight excess, while in nearly all other places there was a deficiency. In Ceylon and the Eastern peninsula the variations remained very small.

November was a very serene month in Northern India (excepting Assam and Lower Bengal), in the Madras Presidency, and Ceylon; but in Bombay, the Central Provinces and Berar, the Eastern peninsula, and the two provinces noticed above, the amount of cloud was in excess of the normal average.

All over Northern and Central India the weather was even more than usually fine. The Punjab, Rajputana, Central India, the North-Western Provinces and Oudh, and nearly the whole of Bengal and Assam had little or no rain. About the middle of the month the weather of the Bay and the surrounding coasts became very unsettled, owing to a cyclonic storm which was developed in the south of the Bay about the 17th, and traversed nearly the whole length of the Bay on a north-east course, finally crossing the Arakan coast north of Akyab. In Hyderabad the rainfall was rather greater than usual, but in Bombay, with the exception of some stations in Kharolch and the Deccan, the total was below the average of the month. In the south of Madras the rainfall was somewhat deficient, but in nearly all other parts of the presidency there was a large excess, due in great part to the cyclone noticed above. Mysore, like the southern districts of Madras, had less than its normal amount of rain; and in Ceylon the variations were irregular. In Burma there was an excess, due to heavy falls on the Arakan coast.

December.—This, like November, was a warm month over the greater part of the country, but the excess was much less than in November; and on the hills of the Punjab, at most stations in the North-Western Provinces, in Western Bengal, in the Central Provinces, Berar, Rajputana, the Konkan, and British Burma there was a slight depression of temperature. The greatest excess was in the Punjab and Sind; the greatest depression (excepting at the hill stations) in the Central Provinces.

The abnormally high pressures prevailing in the previous month had disappeared, except from Assam, Bengal, and parts of the North-Western Provinces and Burma; in all other places there was a distinct, though generally moderate, depression.

The winds showed comparatively little deviation from the normal. North-westerly winds prevailed over the upper provinces, drawing into north and north-north-east over Bengal and the Central Provinces. In Central India, the Deccan, and Carnatic, the wind was generally north-easterly to easterly, while down the west coast it was almost due north.

The air was generally damper than usual. The only important exceptions to the general high humidity were Sind and Western Rajputana and parts of Ceylon. In the Eastern peninsula the anomalies remained very small. The greatest excess was in Berar and Central India.

It was very cloudy, except in Sind and Guzerat. The excess of cloud was greatest in Northern India and least in the peninsula.

The fairly fine weather which had prevailed during November broke up early in December, and conditions became generally unsettled. In the Indus Valley, the rainfall of the month was below the average, but in all other parts of the Punjab it was in excess; and this was also the case in Rajputana, Central India, the North-Western Provinces and Oudh, and throughout the greater part of Bengal. In Eastern Bengal and Chittagong there was a slight deficiency. In Assam and Cachar a slight excess. In the Central Provinces, Berar, and Hyderabad the monthly average was very considerably exceeded; but in the Bombay Presidency, except at a few places in the Deccan and Khandesh, the total fall was below the normal. In Madras and Mysore there was a general, and in places a considerable excess. In Ceylon, except on the south-west coast, the rainfall was also abnormally heavy. This was also the case in the Bay islands; but in Burma the rain was lighter than usual.

Year.—With one or two exceptions, chiefly in Western and Lower Bengal, the mean temperature of the year was below the average throughout Northern and Central India. In the peninsula the anomalies were small and more variable.

On the mean of all the months, pressure was above the normal almost everywhere. The greatest and most general excess occurred in May, and the most general deficiency in August.

On the mean of the whole year the air was generally drier than usual, except in the central parts of the country and in the Carnatic, where it was somewhat damper.

The amount of cloud was above the average over almost the whole of Northern and Central India. Only in Sind and parts of Rajputana was the normal serenity exceeded. In the peninsula and Ceylon the skies were clearer than usual. In the Eastern peninsula the variations were irregular, but in the valley of the Irrawaddy there was an excess of cloud. At the Bay islands the year was slightly less cloudy than usual.

On the whole the year was dry in the central divisions of the Punjab, but abnormally wet in the remainder of the province, in a great part of Rajputana, in Central India (except the more western states), in the North-Western Provinces and Oudh, and over a large part of Bengal. In Assam, on the other hand, the rainfall of the year was deficient at the majority of stations. In the Central Provinces south of the Satpuras it was abnormally heavy; in other parts of those provinces somewhat deficient. In the Berars the northern stations had more and the southern stations less than the average, and in Hyderabad also the anomalies were very irregular. In Bombay the rainfall was short. Madras, like Hyderabad, exhibited very irregular variations; but, on the whole, there was a decided deficiency in the southern districts. In Mysore there was an excess, except in the neighbourhood of Bangalore. Both in Ceylon and Burma the variations were irregular, but in the case of Burma, the total was considerably in excess. At the Bay islands there was a large deficiency.

RESOLUTION.—Resolved, that the Report be published in the Supplement to the Gazette of India.

No. 2091 I.

Simla, the 21st June 1886.

The Governor-General in Council has received with profound regret the intelligence of the death, on the 20th instant, of His Highness Mukhtar-ul-Mulk Azim-ul-Iktidar Rafi-ush-Shan Wala Shikoh Mohtasham-i-Dauran Umdat-ul-Umara Maharaj-Adhiraj Alijah Hisam-us-Saltanat MAHARAJA JAYAJI RAO SINDHIA Bahadur Srinath Mansur-i-Zaman Fidwi-i-Ilaqrat-i-Malika i-Muazzama-i-Rafi-ud-Darja-i-Inglistan, OF GWALIOR, Councillor of the Empress, Honorary General in Her Majesty's Army, Knight Grand Cross of the Most Honorable Order of the Bath, Knight Grand Commander of the Most Exalted Order of the Star of India, and Companion of the Order of the Indian Empire.

During the forty-three years which have elapsed since His Highness succeeded to the rule of the Gwalior State he has maintained a foremost place among the loyal feudatories of the Crown. His Highness received only a few months ago a crowning proof of the trust reposed in him by Her Majesty's Government; and the Governor-General in Council grieves to think that he has lived so short a time to enjoy the fulfilment of his long-cherished desire.

MERCHANT SHIPPING.

The 25th June, 1886.

No. 1572.—Under the provisions of Section 61 of Act VII of 1880, the Governor-General in Council is pleased to fix the following rates of payment for the subsistence and passage of distressed seamen and apprentices who are sent on board a British ship under Section 57 of the said Act, and are in excess of the number wanted to make up the complement of the crew:—

- (a) In the case of lascars—for each man, six annas daily if the ship is a sailing vessel, and twelve annas daily if she is a steam-ship.
- (b) In the case of Europeans and other seamen who live as Europeans—for each man, not being a master, one shilling and six pence daily, and for a master two shillings daily, if the ship is a sailing vessel; and for each man, including a master, three shillings daily if the ship is a steam-ship.

No. 1574.—In exercise of the powers conferred by Sections 58 and 67 of the Indian Merchant Shipping Act, 1880, the Governor-General in Council is pleased to make the following rules regarding the relief of distressed seamen or apprentices in Bengal:—

Relief of distressed seamen

In these rules the term "distressed seamen" includes—

- (a) all seamen and apprentices being native Indian subjects of Her Majesty who have been shipwrecked, discharged, or left behind at any place in British India, whether from any British ship employed in the merchant service, or from any of Her Majesty's ships, or who have been engaged by any person acting either as principal or agent to serve in any ship belonging to any foreign power, or to the subject of any foreign State, and who are in distress in any such place;

- (b) all seamen and apprentices not being native Indian subjects who have been shipwrecked, discharged, or left behind at any place in British India from any British ship registered in British India, and who are in distress in any such place.

2. In taking charge of distressed seamen, the local authority will provide them with subsistence and clothing, as their necessities may require, but upon the most reasonable terms possible, and no more expensive clothing should be supplied to an officer than to a common seaman. Beds and bedding should not be supplied except under special circumstances, and the value of clothing should not exceed Rs. 10 for each person. In any case of unusual expense, when the local authority considers it absolutely necessary to deviate from the foregoing rules, or to provide relief for a longer period than one month, a statement of the exceptional circumstances which necessitated the further outlay is to accompany his accounts when transmitted for audit. Money payments to the seamen themselves for purposes of relief must be avoided as far as practicable.

3. In all cases to which Section 62 of the Act applies, a report should be submitted by the local authority to the Government, in order to admit of the seaman's wages (if any are due) and the expenses incurred in his behalf being recovered from the master or owner or other person liable under Section 63 of the Act.

Conveyance home of distressed seamen.

4. Distressed seamen who are in receipt of relief are to be sent home by the earliest available opportunity, and British vessels requiring men to make up their complement should be preferred in order to admit of the seamen earning wages while being so sent; but if no such vessel can be found, and if there is no immediate prospect of any such vessel requiring men, they should be sent as supernumeraries on board the British vessels (whether registered in British India or not) that may be in the port at the time, and bound to their homes, or to ports near their homes, as the case may be; provided, however, that no ship be required to convey more than one supernumerary to every fifty tons of her registered tonnage. Distressed seamen who refuse to work, if able, for their passage home, cease to be entitled to further relief under these rules.

5. The local authority will enforce upon the agreement of the British ship, on board which distressed seamen are sent under Section 54 or Section 57 of the Act, the name of each man sent on board, and the day on which he was sent on board. He will also, in the case of a distressed seaman sent on board under Section 57, fill up, sign, and deliver to the master an order with certificate in Form A for the seaman's conveyance.

6. Whenever there are no British merchant vessels to which distressed seamen can be allotted, and the local authority thinks it desirable, in order to avoid expense, to engage a passage for them in foreign merchant vessels, he may do so on the best terms he can obtain. He should avoid, if practicable, making any payment beforehand for such passage, but should report the terms to the Government, and direct the master to apply for payment to the shipping master at the port to which the vessel is bound.

TELEGRAPH.

The 24th June, 1886.

No. 164—In directing the publication of the following extract from a Report by the Director-General of Telegraphs on the operations of the Telegraph Department in connection with the recent advance into, and occupation of, Upper Burma, the Governor-General in Council desires to place on record his appreciation of the excellent services rendered by the Department under circumstances of much difficulty and danger.

The Telegraph Department is organised as a Civil Department; and the ready devotion to duty which was displayed by all the staff employed in cheerfully accepting the hardships and risks involved in operating with an army in the field in an enemy's country, reflects no less credit on the Department than the foresight and ability displayed by the Director-General in organising the arrangements to secure effective results.

The Governor-General in Council expresses his cordial thanks to the Director-General, Mr. A. J. Leppoe Cappel, for the admirable manner in which the operations of the Department were organised, and also to the following officers, who are specially brought to the notice of Government for the services rendered by them—

- Mr. W. R. Brooke, Director of the Construction Branch.
- „ T. C. Hill, Chief Superintendent, Burma Division.
- „ H. M. S. Mathews, Assistant Superintendent in charge of Telegraph operations with the Expedition.
- „ A. L. Palmer, Assistant Superintendent.
- „ R. Elrington, „ „
- „ R. O. Lees, „ „
- „ A. J. L. Grimes, „ „
- „ P. W. Kingsley, Sub-Assistant Superintendent.
- „ E. D. Shave, „ „

Extract of Report from the Director-General of Telegraphs in India to the Secretary to the Government of India, Public Works Department, No. 125 E, dated Simla, the 31st May, 1886.

On the 31st October last I received official instructions, in connection with the contemplated despatch of an expeditionary force to Upper Burma, “to be prepared, on requisition from the local authorities or the General Commanding, to repair or erect the telegraph line beyond the frontier as the troops advance, so as to keep up communication between the Army and Rangoon.” I had received and acted upon an unofficial intimation to the same effect four days earlier. On the same date I received an urgent telegram from Rangoon, stating that the Chief Commissioner required the early construction of a line from Tongha to the frontier, about 45 miles, and preparations to be made for a possible extension thence to Ningyan in Upper Burma: these arrangements were approved in the Military Department on the 1st November.

On the 13th November a completely equipped telegraph party, in charge of Mr. Assistant Superintendent H. M. S. Mathews, was organised in readiness to start with the expedition from Prome. This party was accommodated on a float in tow of one of the steamers of the expedition, and, besides having material for flying lines and for renewing the Burman line, which was known to be very unreliable even if intact, had some miles of river cables, complete equipments for six separate telegraph stations, and twelve signallers.

It had been arranged by Mr. Hill, the Chief Superintendent of the Burma Division, in communication with the General Commanding, that Mr. Mathews should land at Minhla, and if, as was feared, communication thence to the frontier was interrupted, he should despatch a working party along the line. He was directed to do the same at the next Burman Office, and if there was reason to apprehend that the line had been seriously injured, he was to land his whole party and stores and commence the work of reparation. This programme was not, however, carried out. The General Commanding found himself unable to give permission to Mr. Mathews to land his party, and informed him that he wished him to accompany the expedition to Mandalay and then work back from that place repairing the line: at Minhla he, however, left a small line establishment. On arrival at Pagan on the 23rd November, Mr. Mathews again urged upon the General the advisability of his lan ling and commencing the line repairs towards Minhla, but the latter considered it inadvisable to commence operations at that time, and Mr. Mathews proceeded on to Mandalay. He arranged, however, to open an office close to Pagan where the detachment was encamped, and left there signallers, some workmen, and a small quantity of line material. At Myingyan he did the same.

In view of the importance attached to the early establishment of telegraphic communication with Minhla, a second party was organised, in charge of Mr. Sub-Assistant Superintendent P. Kingsley, with the object of advancing by land as soon as the river expedition had started. These arrangements were explained to General Prendergast before he left, and escorts were promised, but they were unfortunately not obtainable; and as the necessity for an escort was proved within two miles of the frontier by the party encountering a band of dacoits who had just shot and brutally treated a Burman and his wife, they were compelled to wait until Mr. Hill could induce the military authorities to supply one. The escort, when available, was without carriage, and, after further delay in procuring carts for them, a start was made on the 20th November, but owing to the continuous rain, which had set in on the 18th, the road was found impassable by carts, and the detachment returned to Laingha.

On the following day another start was made, the baggage and food of the party being sent by river, and 10 miles of line were repaired. On the 22nd they accomplished another 8 or 10 miles, and opened an office for the night at Sinboungweh to report progress and to communicate, if possible, with Minhla. Hearing nothing from the party which was supposed to be on its way downwards from Minhla, they continued to work towards that place, which they reached on the 25th, the march having been made under heavy and continuous rain, through mud knee-deep in many places, and for two days they were without food, the steamer which carried supplies (a capture from the Burmese) having broken down.

A telegraph station was at once established at Minhla, where it was ascertained that Mr. Mathews' party had proceeded to Mandalay, as already explained. To meet the altered conditions, the party which had repaired the line from the frontier to Minhla was then divided into two,—one remaining under the charge of Mr. Sub-Assistant Superintendent Kingsley, the other being in charge of Mr. Sub-Assistant Superintendent E. D. Shave, an officer specially sent to Burma for the work,—and these two parties started at once northwards repairing the line, section by section, as far as Pagan, and had advanced beyond that place before Mr. Mathews' party from Mandalay was encountered. Communication as far as Pagan was established on the 30th, but the line was immediately cut, and was continually cut by the enemy as fast as it was repaired. Mr. Mathews started from Mandalay on the 30th November, having made his own arrangements for the carriage of the baggage and food of the party, and arrived at Myingyan on the 6th December, having effected temporary repairs to the line, which was found in very bad order; but, like the parties working from the south, Mr. Mathews found that the line had been cut behind him, and he was compelled to send back a party to again repair it while he continued his work southwards to Pagan.

Through communication with Mandalay was opened on the 11th December, but it was of short duration, the line being constantly cut in numerous places, and the work of the telegraph staff was arduous in the extreme. To strengthen their hands, intermediate stations were opened at Sinboungweh and Yenangyoung, but the greatest difficulty was felt between Myingyan and Mandalay, where the attacks of the dacoits were incessant. To facilitate the work of the troops on this section, intermediate offices were opened at Ava and Myotha, and a third has recently been established at Myinthen.

The extension to Myohla (Gobin) on the Tonghoo frontier, which was sanctioned on the 1st November, was completed by Mr. Assistant Superintendent A. L. Palmer, the officer in charge of the Rangoon Subdivision, on the 26th idem. The country was extremely difficult, and the weather as bad as that which was experienced on the Laingha frontier. Mr. Assistant Superintendent A. Elington took charge of the work on this frontier on the 28th November, and continued the line to Nungyan. The progress was at first slow, owing to physical difficulties and to the reluctance of coolies to cross the frontier, while all the transport of the district had been secured for the troops. The line was completed, however, on the 24th, and the office opened on the 25th December.

The above is a brief record of the operations which may be considered properly to belong to the initial expedition. The subsequent work of the Department in Upper Burma, and the larger operations which have followed my own special visit to Mandalay in March last, will be reported hereafter; but I may mention that, notwithstanding frequent attacks upon the line and upon our working parties, a substantial insulated line to Mandalay has now been erected, and that, when not maliciously cut, communication is maintained as regularly and rapidly with that city as with any part of India. For a long time the want of troops, as escorts, stopped all progress in the erection of new lines asked for by the military authorities, but these are being pushed on rapidly wherever the military are strong enough to protect the working parties; and the energetic Superintendent, Mr. Landon, who is now in charge of the Upper Burma Telegraphs, assisted as he is by an excellent staff of officers, may be relied upon to do all that is humanly possible.

This brief notice of the primary operations of the telegraph in connection with the advance into Upper Burma would not be complete without some mention of the serious outbreak of disturbances in the Shwegyin and Pegu districts, which added materially to the anxieties and responsibilities of the Superintendent, Mr. Hill. The dacoits destroyed the telegraph line in many places, cutting up both wire and posts, and for a time held the district; and, but for the rapid and vigorous action of Mr. Assistant Superintendent R. O. Lees, telegraphic communication between Rangoon and Moulmein would have been impossible for weeks.

* Mr. Grimes has since been working in Upper Burma, where he has proved himself to be a most valuable young officer.

This officer and another Assistant Superintendent, Mr. A. J. L. Grimes,* whom I had just sent to Burma to strengthen Mr. Hill's hands, behaved admirably on this occasion.

In connection with the events of 1885, I beg to bring specially to the notice of Government the services of Mr. T. C. Hill, Chief Superintendent of the Burma Division, upon whom devolved the labour of organizing the working parties and directing their movements. Mr. H. M. S. Mathews, Assistant Superintendent, also deserves special mention. He was in charge of the main party, and, later on, of the whole line. He carried out the duties entrusted to him with great energy and judgment, and amply justified his special selection. Assistant Superintendents Messrs. A. L. Palmer and R. Elrington also did excellent work on the Tonghoo frontier, and Messrs. R. O. Lees and A. J. L. Grimes in the disturbed districts of Lower Burma; while the energy, intelligence, and zeal shown by Messrs. Kingsley and Shave, Sub-Assistant Superintendents, are in the highest degree creditable to them.

To my principal Construction officer, Mr. W. R. Brooke, I am greatly indebted for the ability and energy with which he seconded all my efforts. As on every previous occasion of emergency, his assistance was most valuable; and I have great pleasure in bringing his services prominently to the notice of Government.

Acts of the Governor General's Council assented to by the Governor General.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

[Third publication.]

ACT NO. XIV OF 1886.

An Act to amend the North-Western Provinces Rent Act, 1881.

WHEREAS it is expedient to amend the North-Western Provinces Rent Act, 1881; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

1. This Act may be called the North-Western Provinces Rent Act, 1886; and it shall come into force at once.

2. For the last paragraph of section 95 of the North-Western Provinces Rent Act, 1881, the following shall be substituted, namely:—

“For the purposes of the Court-fees Act, 1870, the amount of fee payable in the cases next hereinafter mentioned shall be computed as follows:—

“(i) in applications under clause (c), and in appeals from orders passed on applications under that clause, as in a suit for possession of the land to which the application or appeal relates;

“(ii) in applications under clauses (l), (n), (o) and (p), and in appeals from orders passed on applications under clauses (d), (e), (f), (l), (n), (o), (p), (q) and (s), according to the rent of the land to which the application or appeal relates payable for the year next before the date of presenting the application, or, if in any case the fee cannot be so computed, then according to the annual letting value of the land as estimated by the applicant or appellant, as the case may be;

“(iii) in applications under clause (m), and in appeals from orders passed on applications under clauses (l), (m) and (t) according to the amount claimed in the application or in the petition of appeal, as the case may be.”

New sections inserted after section 100 of same Act.

3 After section 100 of the same Act the following sections shall be inserted, namely:—

“100A. The Board may, on cause shown to its satisfaction, transfer any suit, application or appeal, or class of suits, applications or appeals, from any Court of Revenue to any other Court of Revenue competent as regards the nature of the case or class of cases to deal therewith under the provisions of this Act.

“100B. (1) The Commissioner of a Division may, with the sanction of the Local Government, transfer any appeal or class of appeals pending before himself to any Collector of a district within his Division.

“(2) The order passed by a Collector on an appeal transferred to him by the Commissioner under sub-section (1) shall be subject to appeal and revision in the same manner as if it had been passed by the Commissioner, and not otherwise.

“(3) The Local Government may by order recall any appeal transferred to a Collector under sub-section (1), and refer it for disposal to the Commissioner of the Division by whom it was transferred."

4. For the last paragraph of section 169 of the same Act the following shall be substituted, namely:—

"The provisions of sections 74 to 78 (both inclusive) and section 80 shall, so far as they can be made applicable, apply to the sale of the property as if the terms 'distress,' 'distrained property' and 'distrainer' included respectively the execution of a writ against moveable property, moveable property taken in execution of a writ and a judgment-creditor."

5. In section 189 of the same Act, after the Addition to section words "one hundred rupees, or" the following shall be inserted, namely:—

"in which the rent payable by the tenant has been a matter in issue and has been determined, or"

6. In the same Act the last twelve words of Sections 193, 196 and section 196, the last twelve words of clause (a) of both sections 193 and 196, and the last six words of section 197, are repealed.

7. In section 194 of the same Act the word "other" is repealed; and in clause (b) of the same section, for the word and figures "section 99" the words and figures "sections 99 and 100" shall be substituted.

Substitution of new section for section 195 of same Act.

8. For section 195 of the same Act the following shall be substituted, namely:—

"195. The orders of an Assistant Collector of the first class on applications mentioned in section 98 shall be final."

9. In section 198 of the same Act, for the word and figures "section 100" the words and figures "sections 99 and 100" shall be substituted.

10. In section 199 of the same Act, after the words "The Board may" the words "notwithstanding anything hereinbefore contained" shall be inserted.

11. In section 211, after clause (d) the following shall be inserted, namely:—

"(e) as to the transfer of appeals to Collectors under section 100B."

12. Nothing in this Act shall confer a right to appeal from any decision or order passed before the coming into force of this Act from which an appeal would not have lain if this Act had not been passed.

PART V.

Bills introduced into the Council of the Governor General for making Laws and Regulations, or published under Rule 22.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

[Third publication.]

The following Bill was referred to a Select Committee of the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 9th June, 1886.—

NO. 7 OF 1886.

A Bill to consolidate and amend the law relating to rent in Oudh.

NOTE.—The 'marginal' quotations' refer to portions of sections of the Oudh Rent Act omitted from the Bill.

WHEREAS it is expedient to consolidate and amend the law relating to rent in Oudh and to other matters connected therewith; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

CHAPTER I.

PRELIMINARY

1. This Act may be cited as the Oudh Rent Act, and shall extend only to Oudh.

2. Act XIV of 1868 is hereby repealed, but Repeal of Act XIV of all notifications published and rules made under the repealed Act shall, so far as they are consistent with the present Act, be deemed to have been published and made hereunder.

3. In this Act, unless there be something repugnant in the subject or context,—

"Oudh" means the territories under the administration of the Chief Commissioner of Oudh at the time of the passing of this Act:

"Court" means any judicial officer presiding in a Court of Revenue for the disposal of matters under this Act:

“Lambardár.”

“prescribed” means prescribed from time to time by the Local Government by rules made under this Act.

“Prescribed.”

The Oudh Rent Bill.(Chapter II.—Of certain Rights and Liabilities of Landlords, Under-proprietors and Tenants.—Sections 4-7.)

[Act VIII, 1885, section 178.]

4. Nothing in any contract made between a landlord and a tenant before or after the passing of this Act shall entitle a landlord to eject a tenant or enhance his rent otherwise than in accordance with the provisions of this Act.

Nothing in any contract made between a landlord and a tenant after the passing of this Act shall take away or limit the right of a tenant, as provided by this Act, to make improvements and claim compensation for them:

Provided that nothing in this section shall affect the terms or conditions of a lease granted bonâ fide for the reclamation of waste land.

OF CERTAIN RIGHTS AND LIABILITIES OF LANDLORDS, UNDER-PROPRIETORS AND TENANTS.

Right of Occupancy.

5. Tenants who have lost all proprietary right, whether superior or subordinate, in the lands which they hold or cultivate, shall, so long as they pay the rent payable for the same according to the provisions of this Act, have a right of occupancy under the following rule:—

Every such tenant who, within thirty years next before the thirtieth day of February, 1856, has been, either by himself, or by himself and some other person from whom he has inherited, in possession as proprietor in a village or estate, shall be deemed to possess a heritable but not a transferable right of occupancy in the land which he cultivated or held in such village or estate on the twenty-fourth day of August, 1866: provided that such land has not come into his occupation, or the occupation of the person from whom he has inherited, for the first time since the said thirtieth day of February, 1856: provided also that no such tenant shall have a right of occupancy in any village or estate in which he or any co-sharer with him possesses any under-proprietary right.

Nothing contained in the former part of this section shall affect the terms of any agreement in writing hereafter entered into between a landlord and tenant.

5. (A). Nothing contained in section 5 shall be deemed to restrict the power of the landlord to confer on any persons other than those therein mentioned a right of occupancy in the lands which they hold or cultivate.

6. If a tenant having a right of occupancy be ejected, in accordance with the provisions of section 37, from the land in which he possesses such right, he shall thereupon lose his right of occupancy in such land.

Tenants' Right to Pattas.

7. Every tenant is entitled to receive from his landlord a patta or memorandum of the terms of the holding, signed by him.

The Oudh Rent Bill.

(Chapter II.—Of certain Rights and Liabilities of Landholders, Under-proprietors and Tenants.—Sections 8-13.)

or his authorized agent, and containing the following particulars:—

the quantity of land, and, where the fields comprised in the patta have been numbered in a Government survey, the number of each field:

the term for which the tenancy is to run:

the amount of rent payable:

the instalments in which and the times at which the same is to be paid:

and, if the rent is payable in kind, the proportion of produce to be delivered, and the time, manner and place of delivery.

[any special conditions of the lease:]

8. Tenants having a right of occupancy are entitled to receive pattas having right of occupancy is entitled. at rates of rent determined in accordance with the provisions contained in sections 32, 33 and 34.

9. Tenants not having a right of occupancy are entitled to pattas for the terms and at the rates prescribed in Chapter IV (B) of this Act.

Landlords' Right to Counterparts.

10. Every landlord who grants a patta is entitled to receive from the tenant a counterpart executed by him.

II. Vide section 43 (A).

Arrears of Revenue or Rent.

12. Any instalment of revenue or rent which is not paid on or before the day when the same becomes due, whether under a written agreement or according to law or local usage, shall be deemed to be, for the purposes of this Act, an arrear of revenue or rent, as the case may be:

Provided that, unless the proprietor and under-proprietor shall have otherwise agreed in writing, the rent payable to the former by the latter shall be held to become due one month before the date fixed for the payment of the revenue on account of the village in which the land in respect of which such rent is payable is situate, and to be payable in the same number of instalments as the said revenue; and the amount of each instalment of such rent shall bear the same proportion to the whole of such rent payable for the year as the amount of each instalment of such revenue bears to the whole of such revenue payable for the year.

Receipts.

13. Receipts for rent and acknowledgments of the tender of rent shall specify the year or years on account of which it has been paid or tendered; and any refusal to make such specification shall be held to be a withholding of a receipt or acknowledgment.

If such receipt or acknowledgment is withheld from any under-proprietor or tenant without sufficient cause, he may recover compensation from the landlord, not exceeding the amount so paid or tendered.

The Oudh Rent Bill.

(Chapter II.—Of certain Rights and Liabilities of Landlords, Under-proprietors and Tenants.—Sections 14-15.)

Deposit of Revenue or Rent in Court without Suit.

[having a right of occupancy, or holding under an unexpired lease or under an agreement or decree]

14. If any co-sharer, under-proprietor, or tenant, without suit, shall, at the Court, without suit, place where the revenue or amount of revenue or rent of the land held or cultivated by him is usually payable, tender to the person authorized to receive the same payment of the full amount of such revenue or rent due in respect of such land, and if such amount is not accepted and a receipt in full forthwith granted, it shall be lawful for the co-sharer, under-proprietor or tenant, without any suit having been instituted against him, to deposit such amount in Court to the credit of the person authorized to receive it.

Such deposit shall, so far as regards the co-sharer, under-proprietor or tenant, and all persons claiming through or under him, operate as a payment then made to the lambardar or landlord of the amount so deposited.

15. The Court shall receive such deposits on Procedure on making the written application of and withdrawing such the co-sharer, under-proprietor or tenant, or his recognized agent; the application shall bear a stamp of eight annas; and on such co-sharer, under-proprietor, tenant or agent making a declaration in the form set forth in Schedule A hereto annexed, or as near thereto as circumstances will admit, the Court shall give him a receipt for the deposit.

Such declaration shall be verified in the manner prescribed for the verification of plaints in the Code of Civil Procedure, and the provisions of sections 52 of the said Code shall apply to the person making the verification. XIV of 1884

Upon receiving the money so deposited, the Court shall issue to the person to whose credit it has been deposited a notice in the form set forth in Schedule B hereto annexed.

Such notice shall be served by the proper officer, without the payment of any fee, upon the person to whom it is addressed, or upon his recognized agent.

In the absence of any such agent, it may be served by putting up a copy of the same at the court-house, and another copy at the ordinary place of residence, within the jurisdiction of the Court, of such person, or, if there be no such place, at the place where the revenue or rent is usually paid to the lambardar or landlord, as the case may be, for the land in respect of which the money has been deposited.

If the person on whom such notice is served, or his recognized agent, appear and certify that the money in deposit be paid to him, it shall immediately be paid accordingly.

The Oudh Rent Bill.

(Chapter II.—Of certain Rights and Liabilities of Landlords, Under-proprietors and Tenants.—Sections 16-19.)

16. Whenever a deposit has been made under the provisions of this Act, the provisions of this Act, the suit shall be brought against the depositor or his representative on account of any revenue or rent which accrued due in respect of the land last hereinbefore mentioned prior to the date of the deposit, unless such suit is instituted within six months from the date of the service of the notice mentioned in section 15.

17. If, at the time of passing the decision in any such suit, the Court is satisfied that the full amount of revenue or rent due at the time of the deposit was tendered to, and was not accepted by, the landholder or landlord or his recognized agent, as the case may be, or that a receipt or acknowledgment was withheld for such amount without sufficient cause, the Court may award to such depositor compensation from the landholder or landlord, not exceeding the amount so paid or tendered.

If the Court be satisfied that the amount of the deposit was less than the amount of revenue or rent due, the Court shall pay the amount of the deposit to the landholder or landlord, and shall make a decree for the balance due by the depositor.

Illegal Enforcement of Payment of Rent.

18. If payment of rent or of any sum in excess of the rent legally claimable is illegally enforced, and any under-proprietor or tenant institutes a suit to recover compensation for such enforcement, the Court may award to him compensation, not exceeding the sum of rupees two hundred, in addition to any amount for which it makes a decree in respect of such payment.

An award of compensation under the former part of this section shall not bar any prosecution which the person enforcing such payment may be liable to for the time being.

Abatement of Rent.

19. No abatement of rent shall be allowed to any under-proprietor or tenant on the ground that the area of the land has been diminished by diluvion, or on some ground specified in any lease agreement or decree under which he holds.

Provided that, if the under-proprietor holds a sub-settlement on a revenue-paying estate, no such abatement shall be allowed to the under-proprietor, unless a remission of revenue has been allowed on the same ground and by competent authority to the landholder.

The Oudh Rent Bill.(Chapter II.—Of certain Rights and Liabilities of Landlords, Under-proprietors and Tenants.—Sections 20-21 (A).)

35 and 36]

[provided that if the under-proprietor hold a sub-settlement, or if the tenant hold a lease for a term of not less than five years, or have a right of occupancy in a revenue-paying estate, no such remission shall be allowed to him, unless a remission of revenue shall have been allowed on the same ground and by competent authority in the same estate]

[or unless it has been let to any other person by such landlord or agent]

Remission of Rent.

20. Notwithstanding anything contained in the Code of Civil Procedure, 1859, the Court may, on an application made by the tenant, allow such remission from the rent payable by any under-proprietor or tenant as appears equitable, if the area of the land in his occupation has been materially diminished by diluvion or otherwise, or if the produce of such land has been diminished by drought or hail, or other calamity beyond his control, to such an extent that the full amount of rent payable by him cannot, in the opinion of the Court, be equitably demanded.

Relinquishment of Land.

21. Every tenant shall continue liable for the rent of the land in his holding, unless on or before the fifteenth of March in any year he gives notice in writing to the landlord or his recognised agent of his desire to relinquish such land, and relinquishes it accordingly.

If the landlord or his recognised agent refuse to receive such notice, or if he does not deliver a receipt in the usual form, the tenant may, before the latest date prescribed for giving such notice, apply to the District or Magistrate, and a written notice of such desire shall thereafter be served on such landlord or agent, and the tenant shall pay the costs of service.

The notice shall, if practicable, be served personally on the landlord or agent; but if he cannot be found, service may be made by affixing the notice at his usual place of residence, or if he does not reside in the district wherein the land is situate, at the darwaza or other conspicuous place in the village wherein the land is situate.

21. (A). If a tenant, after abandoning his holding, or after having abandoned it, or after giving notice of his desire to relinquish it, and without arranging for the payment of the rent, shall be liable for the rent of the land for the period of the year ending on the 31st of March next following the year in which he gave notice of his desire to relinquish it. Before a landlord can exercise the power conferred by this section he shall file a statement in writing, signed by him, stating that he has received the notice, and that the tenant has abandoned the holding, and that he has taken all steps necessary for the recovery of the rent.

When a tenant, after abandoning his holding, shall be liable for the rent of the land for the period of the year ending on the 31st of March next following the year in which he gave notice of his desire to relinquish it, the Court shall, on the application of the landlord, order that the tenant shall be liable for the rent of the land for the period of the year ending on the 31st of March next following the year in which he gave notice of his desire to relinquish it.

to compensation to persons injured and payment of arrears of rent as to the Court may seem just.

Compensations for Tenants' Improvements.

22. If any tenant, or the person from whom he has inherited, make any improvements on the land in his occupation as are hereinafter mentioned, neither he nor his representative shall be ejected from the same land, unless and until he or his representative, as the case may be, has received compensation for the [] improvements made on the land by him, or the person from whom he has inherited, or whom he represents [].

[outlay, in money or labour, or both, expended in making such]

[within thirty years next before the date of such enhancement or ejection]

23. Except as provided in the next following section, no tenant shall be entitled to claim compensation for an improvement made subsequently to the passing of this Act without the written consent of the landlord.

24. If in any case the tenant apply to the landlord for his written consent to his making an improvement on his holding, and the landlord withhold or refuse to grant it, it shall be lawful for the tenant to apply to the Deputy Commissioner for sanction to make the improvement. The Deputy Commissioner, after taking into consideration any objections which the landlord may have to urge, either on the ground that—

(a) the improvement is too costly or is unsuitable to the nature of the tenant's holding, or that

(b) he is prepared to make such improvement himself,

shall grant sanction on such conditions as he may consider fair and equitable or refuse the application. No appeal shall lie against an order passed by the Deputy Commissioner under this section.

25. The word "improvements," as used in this Act, means works by which the annual letting value of the land has been, and at the time of demanding compensation continues to be, increased, and comprises—

1st.—The construction of works for the storage of water, for the supply of water for agricultural purposes, for drainage, and for protection against floods; the construction of wells; the reclaiming and clearing of waste lands and jungles, and other works of a like nature.

2nd.—The renewal or reconstruction of any of the foregoing works, or such alterations therein or additions thereto as are not required for maintaining the same, and which increase durably their value.

Principle on which compensation is to be estimated. 25 (A). In estimating the compensation to which a tenant is entitled regard shall be had—

- (a) to the amount by which the value, or the produce, of the holding, or the value of that produce, is increased by the improvement;
- (b) to the condition of the improvement and the probable duration of its effects;
- (c) to the labour and capital required for the making of such an improvement;
- (d) to any reduction or remission of rent or any other advantage given by the landlord to the tenant in consideration of the improvement; and
- (e) in the case of a reclamation, or of the conversion of unirrigated into irrigated land, to the length of time during which the tenant has had the benefit of the improvement.

Act VIII, 1885, section 83.

Ditto, clause 2.

25. (B) When a Court has assessed the amount of the compensation due to a tenant under the last preceding section, it may, if both landlord and tenant desire that the compensation assessed, instead of being paid wholly in money, shall be made wholly or partly in some other way, proceed to give judgment according to the terms agreed upon between them.

26. A landlord shall be entitled to make any improvement of the nature specified in section 25 on the holding of a tenant not having a right of occupancy with or without the consent of the tenant.

A landlord who proposes to make an improvement shall, if the work is to be constructed in the holding of any tenant, give notice to the tenant through the tahsildar.

Survey and Measurement.

27. Every landlord, his agents and surveyors, may at all reasonable times enter upon any land comprised in his estate for the purpose of surveying and measuring the same.

CHAPTER III.

COMMUTATION AND PAYMENT OF RENT IN KIND.

28. In any district in which a settlement of revenue is in progress, it shall be in the discretion of any officer employed in making or revising such settlement, in any case separate engagement. Such engagement may be express or implied.

36. If the landlord desires to enhance the rent of the tenant on the expiration of the term of seven years referred to in sections 35 and 35 (A), or at any time thereafter, he shall cause a notice to that effect to be served in the manner prescribed in section 36B. Until such notice is issued, the tenant shall be entitled to hold at the former rent :

Provided—(a) that the enhancement shall in no case exceed one anna in the rupee or six and a quarter per cent. on the annual rent payable when the notice is issued;

(b) that the terms of this section shall not apply to a tenant paying rent in kind.

36. (A). The notice shall be written in Hindi and Urdu ; it shall specify the land, the amount of the present rent and the amount of the enhancement, and shall require the tenant, if he refuses to pay the enhancement, to vacate the land by the fifteenth day of May next following, or to institute a suit in the proper Court to contest the notice of enhancement within a month from the date on which it was served.

36 (B). On the application of the landlord to the tahsildar or officer authorized to serve such notices, the notice shall be served by such officer on or before the fifteenth day of February, and the landlord shall pay the cost of service.

The notice shall, if practicable, be served personally on the tenant. But if he cannot be found, service may be made by affixing the notice at his usual place of residence, or, if he does not reside in the district wherein the land is situate, at the village chaupal or other conspicuous place in the village wherein the land is situate.

36 (C). A tenant may institute a suit to contest his liability to enhancement on any of the following grounds :—

1st—That he holds a lease or agreement or a decree of Court under the terms of which he is not liable to enhancement.

2nd—That he has a right of occupancy in the land.

3rd—That the enhancement claimed is in excess of the rate authorized by law.

4th—That seven years have not elapsed since the date of the last change in the rent or alteration of the area of the holding by the landlord.

The Oudh Rent Bill.(Chapter IV.—Enhancement and fixing Rules of Rent.—Sections 36D-36J.)

5th.—That the notice has not been served in the manner prescribed in section 36 B.

36 (D). If the objection of the tenant is found by the Court to be invalid, the tenant, for or, or, and has been intended to contest the notice within a period of thirty days from the date on which the objection was served, or the expiration of such period, the tenant shall, if he retain possession of the land after the fifteenth day of May next following the date of service of the notice, be held liable for the enhanced rent.

36 (E). If the tenant accepts the enhanced rent claimed by the notice, or remains in possession of the land under the terms of the preceding section, he shall be entitled to hold the land at such rent for a further period of seven years.

36 (F). If the tenant refuses to accept the enhancement claimed and vacates the holding, he shall be entitled to recover by separate suit from the landlord compensation for any improvements made by him on the holding.

36 (G). Except in the cases mentioned in the next following section, the rent of a tenant admitted to the occupation of any land the tenure of which has determined according to the provisions of this Act shall not exceed by more than one anna in the rupee, or six and a quarter per cent., the rent payable by the tenant immediately preceding.

36 (H).—The rent of a tenant admitted to the occupation of any land the tenure of which has determined in consequence of the death of a previous tenant, or of the extinction of a thikadār or raiyat from a lands of which he has taken a usufructary possession during the period of his thika or raiyat, shall be such amount as may be agreed upon between him and the landlord.

36 (I). The heir of a tenant who dies during the currency of the tenancy shall have the right to retain occupation of the land at the rent payable by the deceased for the unexpired portion of the period for which the deceased tenant would have held without liability to enhancement or expropriation, and to receive compensation under the provisions of this Act for improvements, if any, effected on the holding by himself or his predecessor in interest, but shall have no right to a renewal of the tenancy or to compensation for disturbance.

36 (J). Notwithstanding anything contained in the preceding sections, the Local Government shall have power to vary, from time to time, the limit of enhancement of rent.

to time, within periods of not less than seven years, the limits of the enhancement to which tenants, not having rights of occupancy, are liable.

36 (K). Nothing in the preceding sections
Enhancement of rent shall bar the right of a tenant to claim an enhancement of rent on the ground that the productive powers of the land held by the tenant have been increased by an improvement effected by, or at the expense of, the landlord during the currency of the tenancy.

Where an enhancement is claimed on the ground of such an improvement, the Court in determining the amount of such enhancement shall have regard to—

- firstly—the increase in the productive powers in the land caused, or likely to be caused, by the improvement;*
- secondly—to the cost of the improvement;*
- thirdly—to the cost of the cultivation required for the utilising of the improvement.*

CHAPTER V.

EJECTMENT.

Tenants with Right of Occupancy.

37. No tenant having a right of occupancy,
Ejectment of tenant or holding under an unexpired lease, or special occupancy.
 Court, shall be ejected otherwise than in execution of a decree for ejectment:

[Act XIX, 1868, section 41.]

Provided that, if the tenant have a right of occupancy in the land from which the landlord desires to eject him, the decree shall not be made, unless, at the date of the decree, a decree against such tenant for an arrear of rent in respect of such land has remained unsatisfied for fifteen days or upwards.

Other Tenants.

38. A tenant not having a right of occupancy,
Ejectment of tenant and not holding under an unexpired lease, or an agreement, or a decree of Court, may be ejected in accordance with the provisions of this Act: first, in execution of a decree for [] ejectment under section 43A or by application under section 43; or, second, by notice given by his landlord in the manner described in the next following sections.

[Act XIX, 1868, section 42.]

Deposit with the notice in the hands of the officer authorized to serve the notice a sum equal to the rent payable by the tenant for the year immediately preceding as compensation for disturbance.

In the case of a tenant paying rent in kind the amount of compensation to be deposited under section 39 shall be a sum equal to the average annual value of the produce paid as rent during the preceding three years.

Provided that no such compensation shall be paid to a tenant in respect of so much of his holding as he has sub-let without the consent of the landlord, or in the cases provided for by sections 36 (1), 43 and 43 (A).

[Act XIX, 1868, section 43.

39. The notice mentioned in section 38 A shall be written in Hindi and in Urdu; it shall specify the land from which the tenant is to be ejected; and it shall inform him that he must either (a), if he means to dispute the ejectment, institute a suit for that purpose within thirty days from the date of the service of the notice, or (b) vacate the land on or before the fifteenth of May next following.

On the application of the landlord to the talukdar or officer authorised to serve such notices, the notice shall be served by such officer on or before the fifteenth day of November, and the landlord shall pay the costs of service.

The notice shall, if practicable, be served personally on the tenant. But if he cannot be found, service may be made by affixing the notice at his usual place of residence, or, if he does not reside in the district wherein the land is situated, at the village chaupal or other conspicuous place in the village wherein the land is situated.

[Act XIX, 1868, section 37]

40. A tenant on whom a notice has been served under section 39 may contest his liability to be ejected from the land specified therein on any of the following grounds:—

1st—That he holds a lease or an agreement, or a decree of Court, under the terms of which he is not liable to such ejectment.

2nd—That he has a right of occupancy in the land.

3rd—If he be a tenant not having a right of occupancy, that notice of ejectment has not been served upon him in manner provided by section 39.

4th—That seven years have not elapsed since the date of the last change of rent or alteration of the area of the holding.

5th—That he is entitled to compensation for disturbance, and that the landlord has not deposited the sum required by this Act.

The Oudh Rent Bill.
(Chapter V.—Ejectment.—Sections 40A-43.)

Explanation.—A thikadār is not entitled to contest a notice of ejectment on any ground other than that he holds a lease under the terms of which he is not liable to ejectment.

40 (A). If the tenant has any claim for compensation for improvements effected by him on the holding, he shall file with his plaint a statement of the claim and of the grounds on which it is based.

40 (B). If the Court finds the objections of the tenant to be invalid, it shall determine the amount of the compensation, if any, due for improvements, and shall declare the ejectment to be conditional on payment of that amount into Court.

41. If the tenant on whom such notice of ejectment has been served fails, within thirty days from the date of the service, to institute a suit to contest his liability to be ejected, his tenancy of the land in respect of which the notice has been served shall be held to cease on the 1st of May following, unless, after the service, the landlord has expressly authorised him to continue to occupy the land.

[Act XIX, 1868, section 41.]

42. If no such suit be brought, or if a suit has been brought and determined adversely to the tenant, and the landlord require the assistance of the Court to eject any person whose tenancy is alleged to have ceased [], he may apply for such assistance, and, if the Court is satisfied that notice of ejectment was duly served on such person, and that any compensation for improvements and disturbance, which may be due to the tenant, has been paid into Court or to the proper officer, it shall give such assistance accordingly.

under the provisions of section 41]

Provided that nothing done by the Court under the previous part of this section shall affect the right of any tenant to institute a suit against his landlord on account of illegal ejectment and to recover compensation for the same.

43. If a landlord desires to eject a tenant, not being a tenant with a right of occupancy, against whom a decree for arrears has been passed and remains unsatisfied, he may, after the first of April of the year in which the arrears accrued, apply to the Deputy Commissioner to eject the tenant. The Deputy Commissioner shall, on receiving the application, cause a notice to be served on the tenant, stating the amount due under the decree and informing him that, if he does not pay that amount into Court within fifteen days from the receipt of the notice, he will be ejected from his holding.

[Act XIX, 1881, section 35.]

If the amount be not so paid, the Deputy Commissioner shall, unless good cause be shown to the contrary, eject the tenant.

[Act VIII, 1885, section 25.]

43 (A). A decree for ejectment may be passed against a tenant on the ground—

Decree for ejectment.

(a) that he has used the land comprised in his holding in a manner which renders it unfit for the purposes of his tenancy; or,

(b) where the rent is payable in kind, that his cultivation has diminished to a point which by the custom of the locality involves the forfeiture of the holding.

The tenant shall continue liable for the rent of the land until the decree is executed.

General.

[Act XIX, 1868, section 38.]

44. No tenant [] shall in any case, whether in execution of a decree or otherwise, be ejected from the land in his occupancy, except between the first day of April and the fifteenth day of June in any year after the passing of this Act [].

45. A thikadār liable to be ejected under the provisions of this Act may be ejected at any time during his tenancy.

Time of ejectment of thikadār.

46. Any tenant ejected in accordance with the provisions of this Act shall be entitled to receive from the landlord the value of any growing crops or other ungathered products of the earth belonging to such tenant, and being on the land at the time of his ejectment:

Compensation to ejected tenant for growing crops.

Provided that, if the land shall have been sown or planted by the tenant after the service on him of the notice mentioned in section 39, he shall not be so entitled, unless, after such service, the landlord has expressly authorised him to continue to occupy the land.

Sir Lands.

46 (A). The rights conferred upon tenants by sections 24, 35, 35(A), 36, 36(F), 36(I), 36(G), 36(I) and 38(A) shall not accrue to cultivators of any of the following lands:—

Sir lands.

(a) Land which for the seven years immediately preceding the passing of this Act has been continuously dealt with as sir in the distribution of proprietary profits and charges. This condition shall be presumed, until the contrary is proved, where land was recorded as sir at settlement and has been continuously so recorded since:

(b) Land which for the seven years immediately preceding the passing of this Act has been continuously cultivated by the proprietor himself or by his servants or by hired labour.

46 (B). A person holding land as a thikadár or mortgagee shall not, while so holding, acquire any of the rights enumerated in the preceding section in any of the land comprised in his thika or mortgage.

Explanation.—A person having such rights in land does not lose them by subsequently taking a thika or mortgage in which his holding is comprised.

CHAPTER VI.

DISTRESS FOR ARREARS OF RENT.

47. When an arrear of rent is due from any tenant, the landlord may recover of arrears of rent by distress. distrain the produce of the land in respect of which the arrear is due, subject to the rules contained in the following sections :

Provided that, when a tenant has given security for the payment of his rent, the produce of the land in respect of which such rent is payable shall not be liable to distress so long as the security is in force.

48. Distress shall not be made for any arrear which has been due for a longer period than one year ; nor for the recovery of any sum in excess of the rent payable in the last preceding year for the land in respect of which the arrear is due, unless the tenant has agreed in writing to pay such excess, or unless he has been declared to be liable for the same by a decree of Court.

49. The power of distress vested by section 47 in landlords may be exercised by managers under the Court of Wards, managing agents and tahsildárs of estates held under khám management, and other persons lawfully entrusted with the charge of land, and also by the agents employed by landlords or any such persons as aforesaid in the collection of rent, if expressly authorised by power-of-attorney to distrain :

Provided that, if any such agent, purporting to act in the exercise of the said power, commits an act which, under the provisions of this chapter, is illegal, the person employing such agent shall be liable, as well as the agent, to be sued for compensation for any injury caused by such act.

50. Any person empowered to distrain property under section 47 or section 49 may employ a servant or other person to make the distress ; but in every such case he shall give to such servant or person a written authority for the same, and the distress shall be made in the name and on the responsibility of the person giving such authority.

The Oudh Rent Bill.(Chapter VI.—Distress for Arrears of Rent.—Sections 51-54.)

51. Standing crops and other ungathered products of the earth, and crops or other products when reaped or gathered and deposited in any threshing-floor or place for treading out grain or the like, whether in the field or within a homestead, may be distrained by persons invested with powers of distress under this Act.

But no such crops or products, other than the produce of the land in respect of which an arrear of rent is due, or of land held under the same agreement as the land in respect of which the arrear is due, and no grain or other produce after it has been stored by the cultivator, and no other property whatsoever, shall be liable to distress under this Act.

52. Before or at the time when any distress is made under this Act, the distainer shall cause the defaulter to be served with a written demand for the amount of the arrear, together with an account exhibiting the grounds on which the demand is made.

The demand and account shall, if practicable, be served personally on the defaulter, but if he cannot be found, they shall be affixed at his usual place of residence, and shall thereupon be deemed to be duly served upon him.

53. Unless the amount of the demand is immediately paid or tendered, the distainer may distress property as aforesaid of value as nearly as may be equal to the amount of the arrear with the costs of the distress; and shall prepare a list or description of the soil property, and deliver a copy of the same to the owner, or if he be absent, affix it at his usual place of residence.

54. Standing crops and other ungathered products of the earth may, notwithstanding the distress, be reaped or gathered by the tenant, and may be stored in such granaries or other places as are commonly used by him for the purpose.

If the tenant neglect to do so, the distainer may cause the said crops or products to be reaped or gathered, and in such case shall store the same either in such granaries or other places as aforesaid, or in some other convenient place in the neighbourhood.

In either case the distrained property shall be placed in the charge of some proper person appointed by the distainer for the purpose.

If the crops or products do not, from their nature, admit of being stored, the distress shall be made (if at all) at least twenty days before the time when the crops or products or any part thereof would ordinarily be fit for cutting or gathering.

The Oudh Rent Bill.(Chapter VII.—Distress from Arrears of Rent.—Sections 55-59.)

55. If a distrainer is opposed or apprehends

Application by dis- resistance, and desires to making the distress, the distrainer shall apply for sale of the same to the proper officer authorized to sell property in satisfaction of decrees of the Court within whose jurisdiction the dis-trained property is situate.

58. The application shall be in writing ; it

Form of application. shall contain a list or description of the property distrained, and it shall state the name of the defaulter, his place of residence, the amount due and the place in which the distrained property is deposited.

Together with the application, the distrainer shall deliver to the proper officer the sum payable for the service of a notice upon the defaulter as hereinafter provided.

59. Immediately on receipt of the application,

Procedure on receipt the proper officer shall send of application. a copy of it to the Court, and shall serve a notice in the form contained in Schedule C hereto annexed, or to the like effect, on the person whose property has been distrained, requiring him either to pay the amount demanded, or within fifteen days from the receipt of the notice to institute a suit to contest the demand.

The officer shall at the same time send to the Court, for the purpose of being put up at the court-house, a proclamation fixing a day for the sale of the distrained property, not less than twenty days from the date of the proclamation ; and shall deliver a copy of the proclamation to the peon charged with the service of the notice, to be put up by him in the place where the dis-trained property is deposited.

The proclamation shall contain a description of the property, and shall specify the demand for which it is sold, and the place where the sale is to be held.

The Oudh Rent Bill.(Chapter VI.—Distress for Arrears of Rent.—Sections 60-61.)

60. If a suit is instituted in pursuance of the aforesaid notice, the Court shall send to the proper officer, or, if so requested by the owner of the distrained property, shall deliver to him, a certificate of the institution of the suit.

On such certificate being received by, or presented to, the proper officer, he shall suspend proceedings in regard to the sale:

Provided that, if in his opinion the property distrained is such that delay will cause damage thereto, he may direct its immediate sale.

61. Any person whose property has been distrained as aforesaid may institute a suit to contest the distrainer's demand at any time before the expiration of the fifteen days mentioned in section 59.

When such suit is instituted, the Court shall proceed in the manner prescribed in section 60.

If application for the sale of the property is afterwards made to the proper officer, he shall send a copy of the application to the Court, and suspend further proceedings pending the decision of the case.

62. The person whose property has been distrained may, at the time of instituting any such suit as aforesaid, or at any subsequent period, execute a bond with one or more surety or sureties, for an amount not less than double the value of the property so distrained, binding himself to pay whatever sum may be adjudged to be due from him, with costs of suit.

When such bond is executed, the Court shall give to the owner of the property a certificate to that effect, or, if he so requests, shall serve the distrainer with notice of the same.

Upon such certificate being presented to the distrainer by the owner of the property, or served on him by order of the Court, the property shall be released from distress.

63. On the expiration of the period fixed in the proclamation of sale, if the institution of a suit to contest the demand of the distrainer has not been certified to the proper officer in the manner hereinbefore provided, he shall, unless the said demand, with such costs of the distress as are allowed by him, be discharged in full, proceed, with the sanction of the Court, to sell the property, or such part thereof as may be necessary.

64. The sale shall be held at the place where the distrained property is deposited, or at the nearest ganj, bazar or other place of public resort, if the proper officer thinks that it is likely to sell there to better advantage.

The property shall be sold by public auction in one or more lots as the officer holding the sale thinks advisable; and if the demand, with the costs of distress and sale, be satisfied by the sale of a portion of the property, the distress shall be immediately withdrawn with respect to the remainder.

65. If, on the property being put up for sale, the price which the officer holding the sale shall think offered, fair be not offered, and if the owner of the property or his recognized agent apply to have the sale postponed until the next day, or (if a market be held at the place of sale) until the next market-day, the sale shall be postponed until such day, and shall be then completed at whatever price may be offered.

66. The price of every lot shall be paid in ready money at the time of sale, or as soon thereafter as the officer holding the sale thinks fit; and in default of such payment the property shall be put up again and resold.

When the purchase-money has been paid in full, the officer holding the sale shall give the purchaser a certificate stating the property purchased by him and the price paid therefor.

67. The officer holding the sale shall deduct from the proceeds one anna for every rupee and fraction of a rupee on account of the expenses attending the sale.

He shall then pay to the distrainer the expenses incurred by him on account of the distress and of the issue of the notice and proclamation of sale prescribed in section 59, to such amount as, after examination of the statement of expenses furnished by the distrainer, the officer thinks proper to allow.

The remainder shall be applied to the discharge of the arrear for which the distress was made, and the surplus (if any) shall be delivered to the person whose property has been sold.

68. Officers holding sales of property under this Act, and all persons employed by, or subordinate to, such officers, are forbidden to purchase, either directly or indirectly, property sold by such officers.

69. The officer mentioned in section 57 shall bring to the notice of the Court any illegal act which shall come to his knowledge as having been committed by any person in making a distress under this Act.

If in any case, on proceeding to hold a sale under this Act, such officer finds that the owner has not received due notice of the distress and intended sale, he shall postpone the sale and report the case to the Court, and the Court shall direct the issue of another notice and proclamation of sale under section 59, or make such other order as it thinks proper.

70. When such officer has gone to any place for the purpose of holding a sale, and no sale takes place, either for the reason stated in section 69, or because the distrainer's demand has been previously satisfied, the said charge on account of expenses attending the sale shall be leviable by the officer, and shall be calculated on the value of the distrained property, as estimated by him, unless the distrainer's demand has been satisfied before the day fixed for the sale and notice of such satisfaction has been given by him to the officer.

If the distrainer's demand be not satisfied until the day fixed for the sale, the charge shall be paid by the owner of the property, and may be recovered by sale of such portion thereof as may be necessary.

In every other case the charge shall be paid by the distrainer, and may be recovered under the warrant of the Court by attachment and sale of his property :

Provided that in no case shall an amount exceeding ten rupees be recoverable under this section.

71. When a suit has been instituted to contest a distrainer's demand, and the property has not been released on security, if the demand or any portion of it shall be adjudged to be due, the Court shall issue an order to the proper officer authorizing the sale of the property.

On the application of the distrainer (which shall be made within five days from the receipt of such order by such officer), such officer shall publish a second proclamation in the manner prescribed in section 59, fixing another day for the sale of the distrained property, not less than five nor more than ten days from the date of the proclamation ; and, unless the amount adjudged to be due with cost of distress be paid immediately, shall proceed to sell the property in the manner hereinafore provided.

72. In all suits instituted to contest a distrainer's demand the defendant must prove the arrear in the same manner as if he had himself brought a suit for the amount under the foregoing provisions of this Act.

If the demand or any part thereof is found to be due, the Court shall make a decree for the amount in favour of the distrainer.

Such amount may be recovered by sale of the distrained property as provided in section 71,

and if the distress has not been withdrawn, and if any balance remain due after such sale, by execution of the decree against the person and any other property of the defaulter, or, if the distrained property have been released on security, by execution of the decree against the person and property of the defaulter, and, if his surety has been made a party to the suit, against the person and property of such surety.

73. If the distress is adjudged to be vexatious or groundless, the Court, besides directing the release of the distrained property, may award such compensation to the plaintiff as it thinks fit, not exceeding twice the value of the property distrained.

74. If any person claims, as his own, property which has been distrained by third party claiming property distrained for arrears of rent alleged to be due from any other person, the claimant may institute a suit against the distrainer and such other person to try the right to the property, in the same manner, and under the same rules as to the time of instituting the suit and as to the consequent postponement of sale, as a person whose property has been distrained for an arrear of rent alleged to be due from him may institute a suit to contest the demand.

75. When any such suit is instituted, the property may be released upon security for its value being given to the satisfaction of the Court.

If the claim is dismissed, the Court shall make an order in favour of the distrainer for the sale of the property, or the recovery of its value, as the case may be.

If the claim is upheld, the Court shall order the release of the distrained property, and may award such compensation as it thinks fit, not exceeding twice the value of the property distrained.

76. No claim to any produce of land liable to distress under this Act, and found at the time of the distress in the possession of a defaulting tenant, whether such claim be in respect of a previous sale, mortgage or otherwise, shall bar the landlord's prior claim, nor shall any attachment in execution of a decree of any Civil Court prevail against such claim.

77. Whenever property has been distrained for an arrear of rent, and a suit has been instituted to contest the demand, and the right to distrain for such arrears is claimed by or on behalf of any person other than the distrainer, on the ground of such other person being actually and in good faith in the receipt and enjoyment of the rent of the land, such other person shall be made by a party to the suit, and the question of the actual receipt and enjoyment of the rent by him before and up to the commencement of the suit shall be inquired into, and the suit shall be decided according to the result of such inquiry :

Provided that the decision of the Court shall not affect the right of any person having a title to the rent of land to establish such title in a Court of competent jurisdiction, by suit instituted within one year from the date of the decision.

78. Any person whose property has been distrained for the recovery of a demand not justly due or of a demand due or alleged to be due from some other person, and who is prevented by any sufficient cause from bringing a suit to contest the demand or try the right to the property, as the case may be, within the period allowed by sections 59 and 74, and whose property is in consequence brought to sale, may institute a suit to recover compensation for any injury which he has sustained from the distress or sale.

79. If any person empowered to distrain property, or employed for the purpose under a written authority by a person so empowered, distrains or sells any property for the recovery of an arrear of rent alleged to be due, otherwise than according to the provisions of this Act, or if any distrained property is lost, damaged or destroyed, by reason of the distrainer not having taken proper precaution for the due keeping and preservation thereof, or if the distress is not immediately withdrawn when any provision of this Act requires such withdrawal,

the owner of the property may institute a suit to recover compensation for any injury which he has thereby sustained.

80. If any person not empowered by this Act to distrain or sell, nor duly authorized for that purpose to be under this Act, by a person so empowered, purports to distrain or sell any property under this Act, the owner of such property may institute a suit to recover compensation from the person so distraining or selling for any injury which the plaintiff has sustained from the distress or sale.

Such suit shall not affect the defendant's liability to be prosecuted under any law for the time being in force.

The Oudh Rent Bill.(Chapter VII.—Jurisdiction of the Courts.—Sections 81-83.)

81. If any person resists a distress of property duly made under this Act; or forcibly or clandestinely removes any distrained property, the Court, upon complaint being made within ten days from the date of such resistance or removal, shall cause the person accused to be arrested and brought before the Court with all convenient speed, and the Court shall proceed forthwith to try the case.

If the case cannot be at once heard and determined, the Court may, if it think fit, require the party arrested to give security for his person, whenever the same may be required, and, in default of such security, may commit him to the civil jail until the case is tried.

82. If such resistance or removal of property be proved, the Court may order the offender to pay a fine not exceeding one hundred rupees, together with all costs and expenses incurred in the case or in making the distress, and, in default of payment, may order him to be imprisoned in the civil jail until payment is made: Provided that no such imprisonment shall continue for more than six months.

CHAPTER VII.

JURISDICTION OF THE COURTS.

The Oudh Rent Bill.(Chapter VII.—Jurisdiction of the Courts.—Sections 84-91.)Grades of Courts.

Grades of Courts for the purposes of this Act. 84. For the purposes of this Act, the Courts of Revenue shall consist of six grades of Courts, namely—

- (1.)—The Court of the Assistant Collector of the second class;
- (2.)—The Court of the Assistant Collector of the first class;
- (3.)—The Court of the Deputy Collector;
- (4.)—The Court of the Collector;
- (5.)—The Court of the Commissioner;
- (6.)—The Court of the Judicial Commissioner.

85. The Chief Commissioner of Oudh shall have power to declare to which of the first three grades any Assistant Commissioner shall belong, and to invest any Tahsildar with the powers of any of the same grades.

Deputy Commissioner to have Collector's powers. 86. The Deputy Commissioner shall exercise the powers of a Collector under this Act.

87. The Chief Commissioner of Oudh may invest any officer employed in making or revising settlements of revenue with all or any of the powers of a Collector, or Deputy Collector, or Assistant Collector, under this Act.

88. The Court of the Assistant Collector of the second class shall have Jurisdiction of Assistant Collector of the second class. power to try and determine suits of the descriptions mentioned in clauses (1), (2), (7), (12), (15), (16), (17) and (18) of section 83, of which the subject-matter does not exceed one hundred rupees in value or amount.

89. The Court of the Assistant Collector of the first class shall have Jurisdiction of Assistant Collector of the first class. power to try and determine suits of the descriptions referred to in the last preceding section, of which the subject-matter does not exceed five hundred rupees in value or amount.

90. The Court of the Deputy Collector shall have power to try and determine suits of every description of which the subject-matter does not exceed five thousand rupees in value or amount.

91. The Court of the Collector shall have Jurisdiction of Collector. power to try and determine suits of every description and of any amount, and to hear appeals from the decisions in suits, and (where an appeal is allowed by the Code of Civil Procedure as applied by this Act) from the orders of the Assistant Collectors, and, in suits under clauses (2), (5), (9), (11), (14), (15), (16), (17) and (18) of section 83, from such decisions and orders of the Deputy Collectors.

Whenever the state of the public business requires it, the Chief Commissioner may invest any Deputy Collector with the powers of a Collector for the trial and determination of suits and appeals under this Act, other than appeals from the decisions of such Deputy Collector, and with the powers of a Deputy Commissioner to hear applications under sections 24 and 43, and may invest any Collector with all or any of the powers of a Commissioner under this Act.

92. The Court of the Commissioner shall have Jurisdiction of Commissioner. power to hear and determine appeals from decisions in suits, and (where an appeal is allowed by the Code of Civil Procedure) from the orders of the Collectors and Deputy Collectors, except as otherwise provided in sections 91 and 95 []. XIV of 1882.

[and 102]

93. The Court of the Judicial Commissioner shall have power to hear and determine appeals from the decisions in suits, and (where an appeal is allowed by the Code of Civil Procedure) from the orders of the Commissioners, and also second appeals, as provided in the said Code, from the decisions passed in first appeal by the Collectors and by the Commissioners. XIV of 1882.

Appeals.

94. The memorandum of appeal, prepared in the form and containing the particulars mentioned in the Code of Civil Procedure, shall be presented to the Court empowered to hear the appeal within the period hereinafter specified, unless the appellant shall show sufficient cause, to the satisfaction of such Court, for not having presented the memorandum within such period; that is to say, thirty days if the appeal lie to the Collector, six weeks if the appeal lie to the Commissioner, and ninety days if the appeal lie to the Judicial Commissioner. XIV of 1882

The period shall be reckoned from and exclusive of the day on which the decision or order appealed against was passed, and also exclusive of such time as may be requisite for obtaining a copy of the decree or order from which the appeal is made.

Second appeals shall be presented in the Court of the Judicial Commissioner within the period hereinbefore fixed for the presentation of first appeals.

95. In suits under clauses (2), (5), (9), (11), (14), (15), (16), (17) and (18) of section 83, and in appeals from decisions in such suits tried and decided by a Commissioner or Collector, if the amount sued for does not exceed one hundred rupees, the judgment shall be final, except as hereinafter provided, unless in any such suit a question of right to enhance or otherwise vary the rent of a tenant, or any question relating to a title to land or to some interest in land, as between parties having conflicting claims thereto, has been determined by the judgment.

In such case the judgment shall be open to appeal in the manner provided in this Act.

Distribution of Business.

96. The Deputy Commissioner may direct the Deputy Commissioner business in the Courts subordinate to him, whether or not they hold their sittings in the same place, to be distributed among such Courts in such way as he shall think fit.

Transfer of Suits and Appeals.

97. The Commissioner or the Deputy Commissioner may withdraw any suit instituted in any Court subordinate to him, and try such suit himself, or refer it for trial to any other such Court competent to try the same.

The Commissioner may also withdraw any appeal instituted in the Court of any Collector subordinate to him, and try the appeal himself, or refer it for trial to the Court of any other Collector in his Division.

98. The Judicial Commissioner may order that any suit or appeal which shall be instituted in or presented to any Court subordinate to him shall be transferred to any other such Court competent to try or hear the subject-matter of the same.

Miscellaneous.

99. In the performance of their duties under this Act, the Collectors shall be subject to the direction and control of the Commissioners and of the Chief Commissioner; and the Deputy Collectors and Assistant Collectors shall be subject to the direction and control of the Deputy Commissioners to whom they are respectively subordinate:

Provided that nothing in this section shall empower the Chief Commissioner or any Commissioner or Deputy Commissioner to interfere in any way not authorized by this Act with any decision or order in a suit.

100. All suits which, under the provisions of this Act, may be brought by or against landlords, may be brought by or against managing agents or talisildars of kham estates, managing agents or talisildars of estates held under kham management, whether such estates are the property of Government or not.

101. No sharer in a joint estate, under-proprietary or other tenure, in which a division of land has not been made among the sharers, shall exercise any of the powers conferred by this Act in regard to the recovery of arrears of rent, enhancement of rent, ejectment of tenants, or distress, otherwise than through a manager authorized to collect the rents on behalf of all the sharers.

In pattidari estates or tenures such powers shall be exercised only through a lambardar, or through the pattidar who is entitled to collect the rents of the patti.

102. Any person in possession of land occupied by a tenant, without consent of the landlord, shall be liable for the rent of such land at the rate payable in the previous year, or, if no rent was payable in the previous year, at such rate as the Court may determine to be fair and equitable, and he shall not in respect of such land have any of the statutory privileges conferred by this Act.

103. The Courts may sit for the hearing and determining suits and appeals, and for disposing of other business under this Act, in any place within the local limits of their respective jurisdictions:

Provided that every hearing and decision shall be in open Court, and that the parties to the suit, or their authorized agents, shall have had due notice to attend at such place.

CHAPTER VIII.

LIMITATION OF SUITS.

104. Except as herein otherwise provided, and subject to the provisions as to legal disability contained in any law for the limitation of suits for the time being in force in Oudh, all suits under this Act shall be instituted within one year from the date of the accruing of the cause of action.

105. Suits for the delivery of pattas or the counterparts of pattas may be instituted at any time during the tenancy.

106. Suits for the recovery of arrears of rent or of revenue or of a share of profits shall, except in the case mentioned in section 16, be instituted within three years from the date on which the arrear or share of profit claimed shall have become due.

107. Suits for the recovery of money in the hands of an agent, or for the settlement of accounts or delivery of papers by an agent, may be brought at any time during the continuance of the agency or within one year after its determination, or, in the case of claims legally cognizable at the date of the passing of this Act, within one year after such date.

108. Suits regarding distress under section 74, 78, 79 or 80, and suits regarding the division, estimate or appraisement of the produce of land, shall be commenced within three months from the date of the accruing of the cause of action.

CHAPTER IX.

PROCEDURE.

v of 1882. 109. The provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure as in force in Oudh shall, so far as they are not inconsistent with the provisions herein contained, apply to all suits, appeals and proceedings under this Act.

110. In addition to the particulars required by section 50 of the said Code to be specified in the plaint, the plaint shall contain the following particulars:—

1st.—The name of the village or estate, and of the parganá in which the land to which the suit relates is situate;

2nd.—If the suit be for recovery of an arrear of rent, or for the enhancement or abatement of rent, or for the ejectment of a tenant, or for contesting a notice of enhancement of rent, or for contesting a notice for the ejectment of a tenant or for the recovery of the occupancy or possession of any land, the plaint shall specify the extent, situation and designation of the land to which the suit relates and, where fields have been marked in a Government survey, the number (if it be possible to give it) of each field;

3rd.—If the suit be for recovery of an arrear of rent or revenue, the plaint shall specify the yearly rent or revenue of the land, the amount (if any) received on account of the year or years for which the claim is made, the amount in arrear and the time in respect of which it is alleged to be due;

4th.—If the suit be for the delivery of a patta or the counterpart of a patta, the plaint shall specify all the particulars mentioned in section 7.

The Oudh Rent Bill.(Chapter IX.—Procedure.—Sections 111-117.)

111. When in any suit between a landlord and an under-proprietor or tenant the right to receive the rent of the land is claimed by a third person, on the ground that he, or a person through whom he claims, has actually and in good faith received and enjoyed such rent up to the time of the commencement of the suit, such third person shall be made a party to the suit, and the question of the actual receipt and enjoyment of the rent by him or the person through whom he claims shall be inquired into, and the suit shall be decided according to the result of such inquiry :

Provided always that the decision of the Court shall not affect the right of any party having a legal right to the rent of such land to establish his title thereto in a Court of competent jurisdiction.

112. In all suits under clauses (1), (2), (7), (10) and (11) of section 83 of this Act, the summons to the defendant shall be for the final disposal of the suit.

113. In a suit to recover an arrear of rent, no set-off shall be allowed against the claim, except such amount as may be due to the defendant on an unexecuted decree under this Act against the plaintiff.

114. In any suit under this Act involving a claim to money, the defendant may, at any stage of the suit, deposit in Court such sum of money as he considers a satisfaction in full of the plaintiff's claim, together with the costs incurred by the plaintiff up to the time of such deposit.

Notice of the deposit shall be given to the plaintiff, and the amount deposited shall be paid to him on his application.

No interest shall be allowed to a plaintiff on any sum paid by the defendant into Court from the date of such payment, whether such sum be in full of the plaintiff's claim or fall short thereof.

115. In any case in which the defendant deposits less than the amount claimed by the plaintiff, nothing in section 114 shall bar the plaintiff from proceeding in the suit for the recovery of the balance.

[116. If a tenant not having a right of occupancy institute a suit against a landlord for the delivery of a lease, or a landlord institute a suit against a tenant not having a right of occupancy for the delivery of the counterpart of a lease, and the parties do not agree in respect of the particulars which such lease or counterpart is to contain, the Court shall dismiss the suit, unless evidence in writing is produced which shall satisfy the Court that an agreement has been entered into between the parties in accordance with which such lease or counterpart ought to be delivered.]

117. The local inquiry described in section 392 of the Code of Civil XIV of 1882. Procedure may also, if he think fit, be made by the Collector in person or other officer presiding in the Court, and the provisions of the said Code regarding local inquiries shall apply to such inquiries made by such Collector or other officer.

In such cases the Collector or other officer as aforesaid, after completing the inquiry, shall record on the proceedings such observations as he thinks fit, and the observations so recorded shall be received as evidence in the suit.

As to Decrees.

118. No process of execution shall be issued Time within which on a decree under this Act execution may be had. when the application for the issue of such process is made after the lapse of three years from the date of such decree, unless the decree be for a sum exceeding five hundred rupees, in which case the period within which execution may be had shall be regulated by the law in force as to the period allowed for the execution of decrees of the Civil Courts.

119. When a decree for money is made in any Immediate execution suit under this Act, the of decree. Court may, on the oral application of the party in whose favour the decree is passed, direct immediate execution thereof in the manner described in section 256 of the Code of Civil Procedure.

XIV of 1882.

120. When a decree in favour of the plaintiff Decree for enhance- is made in a suit for an en- ment to state date from hancement of rent, the which it is to take ef- Court shall declare the date fect. from which such enhance- ment shall take effect.

121. If the decree be for the delivery of Enforcement of de- papers or accounts, it may cree for delivery of be enforced by the impri- papers or accounts. sonment in the civil jail of the party against whom it is made or by the attachment of his property, or by both imprison- ment and attachment.

The imprisonment and attachment may be continued until he complies with the terms of the decree :

Provided that no person shall be imprisoned under this section for a longer period than six months.

122. A decree for the delivery of a patta or of Decrees for lease or the counterpart of a patta counterpart to specify shall specify all the parti- particulars. culars mentioned in section 7, and such other particulars in accordance with the provisions of this Act as to the Court seem fit.

123. If the decree be for the delivery of a Court after decree patta or the counterpart of may grant lease or a patta, and the party or- counterpart, in case of dered to deliver such patta defendant's refusal. or counterpart neglects or refuses so to do, the Court may grant a patta or counterpart in conformity with the terms of the decree, and such patta or counterpart shall have the same effect as if delivered by the party against whom the decree was passed.

The Oudh Rent Bill.(Chapter X.—General.—Sections 124-129.)

124. If the decree be for money, no process in execution shall issue against the immoveable property of the judgment-debtor, other than attachment of such property, unless satisfaction of the decree cannot be obtained against his moveable property.

125. If the decree be for an arrear of rent due in respect of an under-proprietary right, the interest of the judgment-debtor in such right may, subject to the provisions of this Act, be sold in execution of the decree.

[Provided that no such sale shall be allowed unless it appear to the Deputy Commissioner that satisfaction of the decree cannot be made in the manner referred to in sections 243 and 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure.]

If it appear to the Court that such satisfaction can be made, the Court may exercise the powers given to it by the said section 243, although no application has been made by the judgment-debtor.

The Deputy Commissioner may be appointed manager of the property under the same section. When he has been so appointed, he may exercise, for the satisfaction of the decree against the judgment-debtor, all the powers which, under any law in force in Oudh, he might have exercised for the recovery of an arrear of revenue due by such judgment-debtor to the Government.]

126. No beneficial lease or other incumbrance hereafter created on his tenure by any under-proprietor shall be valid, in the event of the sale of his rights and interests in execution of a decree for arrears of rent, unless such incumbrance has been registered, under any rules or law for the time being in force in Oudh, within four months after the creation thereof, and not less than thirty days before the date of attachment of such rights and interests.

127. When an under-proprietor creates any such incumbrance and fails to pay to the proprietor all or any part of the rent subsequently accruing in respect of the land subject to the incumbrance, the incumbrancer shall be liable to pay to the proprietor the whole or such part as aforesaid of the said rent, unless the proprietor has agreed in writing to waive any claim which he might otherwise have made on the incumbrancer under this section.

128. When land is sold in execution of a decree under this Act, and the land or any lot thereof has been knocked down to a stranger, any co-sharer, other than the judgment-debtor, may, before sunset on the day of sale, claim to take the land or lot, as the case may be, at the sum at which it was so knocked down.

If the land be an under-proprietary tenure, a like claim may also be made by the proprietor.

Any claim made under this section shall be allowed: Provided that, if a claim to the same land or lot be made by a proprietor as well as by a co-sharer, the claim of the co-sharer shall be preferred: Provided also that no claim shall be allowed unless the claimant fulfil all the conditions of the sale binding on a purchaser.

CHAPTER X.

GENERAL.

129. The Local Government, on being satisfied that any estate is suffering from grave mismanagement to an extent which has,

General powers reserved to the Local Government.

B.* has applied to have the distrained property specified below sold for the recovery of _____ alleged to be due to him as arrears of rent, you hereby are required either to pay the said sum to the said A. B. or to institute a suit before the Court to contest the demand within fifteen days from the receipt of this notice, failing which the property will be sold.

Dated this _____ day of _____ 18 ____ .

SCHEDULE D.

(See section 131.)

* This is to be by endorsement on a copy of the declaration under Schedule A made by the person paying the money into Court.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

The object of this Bill, which has been prepared by the Government of the North-Western Provinces and Oudh, is to secure to tenants in Oudh some protection against arbitrary eviction from their holdings and enhancement of their rents, and to place on a clear footing their rights to make improvements on their holdings and to receive compensation for improvements so made. Under the law as it stands they are absolutely unprotected against enhancement and eviction, provided that the landlord observes certain easy formalities in raising rents or in issuing his notices of ejectment. Every field in a tenant's holding can be shifted on the close of each agricultural year at the will of his landlord, and there is no limit to the rise of rents.

The Census Statistics show that the pressure of the population on the land in Oudh is very great, being 119 to the square mile, and the large number of notices of ejectment annually issued and the steadily increase from 23,400 in 1876 to 90,200 in 1882 afford reason for believing that they are used as instruments for the undue enhancement of rent. Enquiry has shown that this belief is not unfounded, and that the effect of the existing law on a population dependent mainly on agriculture for its subsistence must lead at no distant date to the deterioration of agricultural industry and the impoverishment and degradation of the bulk of the people.

It is not proposed to introduce a system of heritable occupancy-right acquired by prescription, such as prevails in the North-Western Provinces, but to accept contract as the basis on which transactions between landlord and tenant are to be regulated. The tenant, however, who has no other means of subsistence open to him, is no match for the landlord in a thickly populated agricultural province, and with a view to place the parties on more equal terms the Bill imposes the following restrictions on free contract between them.

Sitting tenants may hold the land they at present occupy at the rent now paid from the date of the last change in their rent or in the area of the holdings.

The enhancement of rent permissible at the expiry of each statutory period is to be limited to $6\frac{1}{2}$ per cent, or one anna in the rupee, on the current rental; the sitting tenant to have the equity of renewal at rent within that limit.

At the end of that period it is proposed to allow the landlord to enhance the rent of the sitting tenant to such sum as he and the tenant may agree upon within a limit of one anna in the rupee, or $6\frac{1}{2}$ per cent, on the rent previously paid.

At any time after the expiration of the statutory period a landlord who has not made terms with the sitting tenant may proceed either by notice of enhancement or by notice of ejectment at his discretion. If he proceeds by notice of enhancement the enhancement must be within the limit above given. If the tenant accepts a new period of terms, if the tenant refuses the proposed enhancement, the holding will become vacant, but no higher rent can be recovered from the next tenant than $6\frac{1}{2}$ per cent, above the old rent on the same holding. If the landlord proceeds by ejectment, leaving the tenant no option of renewal, compensation for loss of land will be given up to one year's rent at the rate last paid, and the landlord's $6\frac{1}{2}$ per cent, will apply to the rent recoverable from the next tenant. For tenants' interests will be entitled to receive compensation for loss of land, and compensation for loss of improvements. The right of renewal is to be preserved to the tenant in occupancy. On the date of a tenant's occupancy he will be entitled to hold on, on the same terms, to the expiration of the statutory period, or by his predecessor, but must then, should the landlord so wish, vacate the holding on payment of the compensation for improvements found to be due to him.

These provisions are experimental, and power is therefore given to the Local Government from time to time, within periods of not less than seven years in any district or part of a district, to vary the limit of enhancement. Although there has been a considerable rise of prices in the past fifteen years, the rise may not be uniform at the same rate, and in that case the limit of $6\frac{1}{2}$ per cent, might be unfair to the tenant. In other cases the limitation might conceivably operate to the prejudice of the landlord.

The condition in the taluqdār's sanad—that he will promote the agricultural prosperity of his estate—is so vaguely worded as to leave the Government and the taluqdār alike uncertain as to the grounds on which Government should interfere between him and his tenantry. To put the matter beyond doubt power is given to Government to step in when it is satisfied that an estate is suffering from grave mismanagement, which has since the present year materially deteriorated the cultivation of the tenantry or diminished the area of the cultivation. The exercise of this power is subject to the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, and the consequences of it are not the forfeiture of the estate, but an authoritative settlement of rents for ten years.

A similar power of settling rents was conferred in the Bengal Tenancy Act of 1885, the Local Government being authorized to interfere in the interests of public order or of the local welfare.

The detailed reasons for the alterations in the present Act necessary to carry out these proposals will be found in the annexed letter from the Local Government.

From

J. WOODBURN, Esq., SECRETARY TO GOVT., N.-W. P. AND OUDH,

IN THE OUDH REVENUE DEPARTMENT,

To

THE SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA,

REVENUE AND AGRICULTURAL DEPARTMENT.

Dated Allahabad, the 15th January, 1886.

In compliance with the request conveyed in your letter No. 121 (Revenue), dated the 9th ultimo, I am directed to submit a draft Bill to amend the Oudh Rent Law.

2. The general principles on which the Lieutenant-Governor and Chief Commissioner proposes to amend the Rent Law in Oudh are fully detailed and explained in the letters of this Government, No. 5939 of the 21st December, 1885, and No. 723 of the 19th May, 1884. In this letter submitting the draft Bill it seems sufficient to explain the reasons which have led to the various minor alterations of the present Rent Act.

3. The Bill takes the form of a revised edition of the existing Act. It is very probable that in phraseology and arrangement Act XIX of 1868 might be greatly improved; but it is only in Chapters IV and V that any material change is needed to give effect to the several proposals which have been made by the Lieutenant-Governor. And since the Act is well understood by and familiar to the Rent Courts and the people, it appears advisable to make no more alterations of it than are necessary to a clear and correct statement of the principles which are hereafter to govern the relations of landlord and tenant. But the opportunity has been taken to remove any difficulties that have been found by the Courts in interpreting certain other parts of the existing law. Additions to existing sections of the Act and all new sections are printed in italics; and any portions of existing sections which it is proposed to omit have been printed marginally in brackets.

4. I am now to proceed to a specific statement of the alterations made in the Act.

5. Section 2 repeals Act XIX of 1868, but maintains such notifications and rules made under it as are consistent with the new Act.

6. In section 3 a clause has been added to the definition of "rent," to make it quite clear that the word covers the rent of an under-proprietor who may not be personally in the use or occupation of the land in his tenure. A clause has been added to the definition of "tenant," to show what portions of the Act are applicable to a third party. A collector of rents should acquire none of the statutory privileges of a cultivating tenant, but is a tenant of the lessor for many purposes. A definition of "prescribed" has been inserted, which is taken from the Bengal Tenancy Act, 1855.

7. Section 4 is substituted for the corresponding section of the present Act. It is necessary to provide that no contract before or after the passing of the Act shall deprive a tenant of that protection against enhancement and ejectment which it is the special object of the new law to give. The Lieutenant-Governor has decided, after careful consideration of the point, not to recommend that there shall be so far as to prohibit the execution of any special agreement which shall give a tenant a longer occupancy than the statutory period of seven years; but it is essential that agreement for any shorter term shall be barred, and I am to ask that this point may receive particular attention when the draft is examined. The proposal is that the occupancy of a holding may be settled between landlord and tenant for a longer period than seven years by agreement, but that no contract shall defeat the statutory limit of enhancement. He is unwilling to interfere more than is absolutely necessary with any existing contracts, and where the terms of any patta at present in force exclude the tenant from making improvements or claiming compensation for such as he may have already made, he would not set the contract aside. So far as the Lieutenant-Governor's information goes, the number of such contracts is not great, while in many such cases it may be presumed that the improvements will have been made upon special terms and conditions.

8. As regards clearing leases the Lieutenant-Governor is of opinion that they must be left to be arranged by landlord and tenant without interference by the State. The conditions under which they are taken vary considerably in different parts of the country, and are in fact effectively controlled by local circumstances and local custom. A proviso has accordingly been added to this section, the terms of which have been taken from the first proviso to section 178 of the Bengal Tenancy Act.

9. Section 5 (A), empowering a landlord to confer occupancy-rights, has been inserted in accordance with the wish of His Excellency the Governor General in Council, as conveyed in paragraph 15 of your letter No. 252R., dated 12th April, 1884.

10. In section 7 of the present Act the word "lease" is used for the written memorandum of the terms of a tenant's holding. It is scarcely applicable to the record of the terms of a holding conferred by Statute, and the Lieutenant-Governor would prefer to use the word "patta." It is again inconsistent with a statutory tenure that the record of it should contain any conditions except those imposed by the Statute, and the clause of the present section 7, authorising the entry in the patta of any special conditions of the lease, should be omitted.

11. Section 11 of the present Act authorises the cancelment of a lease by decree. It seems desirable that the whole of the provisions in regard to the determination of tenancies should be placed together, and this section, with the material alterations which will be subsequently explained, has been transferred to the chapter on ejectments as 43(A).

12. Section 20 of the Rent Act contains the provincial rule regarding the remission of rent, where it is proved to the Rent Court that from unforeseen calamity the tenant is unable to pay the entire demand. A proviso is attached to the section, which prevents a tenant with a five years' lease from claiming the benefits of this section. If this proviso were retained under the amended Act, which is to give all tenants a statutory occupancy for seven years, the effect would be to nullify the section altogether. The question is, therefore, whether the entire section should be struck out, whereby the Courts would lose their power of making allowances in rent-decrees for inevitable calamities, or whether the section shall stand without its proviso, whereby remissions of rent would cease to be in any case dependent on remissions of revenue. The latter course appears to the Lieutenant-Governor to be on the whole likely to be better for the interests of both landlord and tenant. If, as the Lieutenant-Governor believes, it is not expedient to withdraw from the Courts all power to take account of serious calamities in decreeing arrears of rent, in that case to provide that this power shall only be used when revenue has been remitted is to shackle it with an awkward and hardly logical condition. The corresponding provisions of the rent law in the North-Western Provinces are contained in section 23 of Act XII of 1881 and the rules which have been prepared under it. When the crops have been injured by hail or drought in a village of the North-Western Provinces, the Collector has to apply for a remission of revenue before he can move in the matter of rents; and when that is obtained he enforces a remission of rents, equivalent to double the remission of revenue, by a process which is not always very well adjusted or duly proportioned. There is by law no similar rule in Oudh. Neither in the Revenue nor in the Rent Acts is any authority given to the Deputy Commissioner to carry on, distribute and enforce among the rents of the tenantry the remission which has been made in the landlord's revenue. It is true that under circular orders, issued administratively (of which an extract is given in the footnote), Deputy Commissioners have insisted on remissions of rent as a consequence of remissions of revenue; and the Lieutenant-Governor is not prepared at once to cancel those instructions. Nevertheless, when it comes to framing legal provisions, he would prefer to leave, at any rate experimentally, the adjustment of rent abatements between landlord and tenant as much as possible to the parties concerned, subject only to a Judge's discretion in extraordinary cases. The fact of the revenue remission is perfectly well known, and any tenant who is pressed to pay upon crops that have been seriously damaged has only to demur to the demand and let his claim to relaxation of the rent be considered by the Rent Court. So long as a tenant was liable to summary and arbitrary ejectment, undue pressure for the payment of rent could no doubt be made; but now that all tenants will be protected in the occupation of their holdings, the Lieutenant-Governor considers that with an appeal to the Rent Court, such as is given by section 20, they may be left to make their own arrangements with their landlords on such occasions as those contemplated by the section.

13. The proviso in section 20 is to some extent based on a distrust of the Courts, since they might exercise the power without sufficient cause, and hamper the landlord by remissions of rent for which he has received no compensating remission of revenue. The landlord, however, has always the remedy of appeal from a decree which he considers unfair, and if the case can be supposed possible of calamity so considerable as to justify large remissions of rent by the Court, although no previous remission of revenue had been given, no Deputy Commissioner would refuse to recommend a corresponding remission of revenue. There is again the risk that the Courts might force remissions of revenue by giving remissions of rent; but it must be assumed that the Courts will proceed with due care and upon sufficient evidence in remitting rents, while in Oudh they are likely always to keep in view the effect of their decrees upon the revenue. Moreover, a landlord is certain to contest any unfair reduction of his rent-demand; for a remission of revenue is never sufficient to compensate him, and his appeal is to the Commissioner or Deputy Commissioner, who is directly concerned with the collection of revenue. The Lieutenant-Governor recommends,

Any landlord who receives a remission of Government revenue will be bound, in proportion to the extent of the remission, not to take, either through himself or through a lessee, and to restore if he has so taken, rent for the crop on account of which the remission is granted.— (From Circular Orders of 7th January, 1873.)

therefore, that the section be maintained with the omission of the proviso. The draft proposes to insert "materially" before "diminished", to indicate to the Courts that remission is not to be given for any but considerable loss.

14. Sections 35 and 36 of the present Act will be entirely superseded, and the reference to them in section 20 may be excised.

15. In section 21 (relinquishment of the holding) the last clause of the first sentence may be omitted. The Lieutenant-Governor wishes to make a distinction between relinquishment and abandonment. If tenants are to have considerable fixity of tenure, it is right that the landlord should have fair notice of relinquishment of holding, that he may make suitable arrangements for a new tenant. The date for notice of relinquishment has accordingly been antedated to the 15th of March, and at this time lease to another tenant can hardly have been given. It has been prescribed that the notice shall be in writing.

16. A section has been drafted in regard to abandonment [21 (B)], adopted from section 87 of the Bengal Tenancy Act.

17. In the sections on compensation for tenants' improvements considerable changes have been made. Section 22 of the present Act directs that the tenant shall be entitled to compensation for improvements whenever his rent is enhanced. This provision has, so far as the Lieutenant-Governor can ascertain, remained a dead letter. Under a system by which the adjustment of rent between landlord and tenant was left entirely to private contract, any enhancement of rent, so long as the tenant chose to stay, probably took into consideration the tenant's expenditure on the improvement of his holding. For the future at least no such provision is needed. The enhancement at the close of a statutory period of tenancy is a statutory enhancement, and will have effect whether or not the tenant has in the course of his expiring period of tenancy effected an improvement which has added to its value. The clauses in section 22, providing for compensation on enhancement, may therefore be left out.

18. The principle on which compensation is calculated under the present Act is solely that of the outlay of the tenant. The last sentence of the section bars right to compensation for improvements which were made more than thirty years before the date of claim, and in practice the procedure of the Courts is to make an estimate of the probable outlay, assume that the improvement will last for thirty years, and award to the tenant the sum which in that proportion represents its unexpired value. Thus, if a well is believed to have cost Rs. 300 ten years ago, the Court will award to the tenant Rs. 200. The principle is by no means a just one, for the landlord is exposed to great exaggerations by the tenant of his original outlay, and where the improvements are of old standing these statements are difficult to check. The Lieutenant-Governor considers that the principles laid down in section 83 of the Bengal Tenancy Act are not only in themselves more fair, but more simply and readily applied by the Courts, for it is seldom difficult in any village to ascertain the difference in letting value due to irrigation, and a well is the most common of all improvements in Oudh. A section has been accordingly introduced from the Bengal Act, section 25(A), and the references to outlay and the period of construction omitted from section 22.

19. It is the recognised custom of the province that a tenant cannot make an improvement of a permanent character without the consent of the landlord. So long as the tenant held on a yearly tenancy at the will of the landlord, this consent was obtained on terms which were sometimes very harsh. I am to refer, for example, to paragraph 127 of Colonel Erskine's report of the 1st June, 1883 (page 277 of the second volume of papers on the condition of the Tenantry in Oudh). Now that the ordinary tenancy is for seven years, it is necessary for the agricultural progress of the country that the landlord's consent to improvements shall not be unreasonably withheld. It has accordingly been proposed in the Bill that the tenant shall have the right of applying to the Deputy Commissioner should the landlord refuse his consent, and that the Deputy Commissioner, after hearing the landlord's objections, shall pass such orders as may be fair and equitable.

20. On the other hand, it is right, when enhancement is otherwise carefully restricted, that arrangement should be made for the assessment of a fair enhancement on holdings the produce of which has been increased by a landlord's improvement, and sections 26 and 36 (K) of the Bill have been drafted for the assistance of landlords in this matter.

21. Section 25 of the present Act is believed to have been of very little, if any, value. It has, however, been retained in section 25 (A) of the Bill in a shorter form, taken from the second clause of section 83 of the Bengal Tenancy Act.

22. Chapter III of the Oudh Act refers to commutation and payment of rents in kind. The Lieutenant-Governor proposes to omit the last two clauses of section 28 and the whole of section 29. The commutation of grain-rents is an exceedingly delicate and difficult business, while the prevailing opinion as to the advantages and disadvantages of commutation is apt to vary greatly, the authorities leaning sometimes on one side, sometimes on the other. It can hardly ever be expedient that the Government shall interpose, during the currency of a settlement, to determine officially a question of this nature, which is essentially connected with local circumstances and conditions of agriculture that are best adjusted by mutual consent; and, since, in fact, the authoritative commutation of rents is hardly known in Oudh, the Lieutenant-Governor would prefer to leave it, by law, to private arrangement between landlord and tenant, except when a settlement of revenue is in progress. The transition from rents in kind to cash-rents is gradually spreading with the improvement of agriculture, and the process should be left to its natural and spontaneous course.

23. Chapter IV of the Act deals with the enhancement and settlement of rent. So far as it concerns the rent of tenants with a right of occupancy, they are left untouched. In the two sections, 35 and 36, of the Act are contained the whole of the provisions of the present law in regard to the rent of other tenants. To introduce the scheme sketched in paragraph 69 of my letter of 21st December, 1883, the sections numbered 35 to 36 (K) have been substituted for them in the Bill. They give every tenant a statutory right to occupy his holding for seven years, with a new period beginning from every change in rent or area by the landlord, and at the end of every period of tenancy they give him the preferential claim to continue in his holding at a rent that cannot be more than 6½ per cent. in excess of the previous rent, or, if he be ejected, to be paid compensation for disturbance. In short, the landlord cannot disturb the tenant for seven years, and if after that period he desires to eject he must pay compensation. In no case can enhancement of rent, whether upon the sitting tenant or his successor, exceed 6½ per cent. of the old rent; but if the sitting tenant will not agree to an enhancement thus limited he must quit without compensation. The new sections also provide that enhancement shall be by notice; they prescribe a procedure for contesting the notice; and detail the liabilities of the tenant, when he retains or vacates the holding, with or without objection to the notice (clauses 1, 2, and 4, paragraph 69, above quoted). The rights of a tenant are, however, to be personal, and provision has been made in sections 36 (I) and 36 (H) that the heir of a tenant who dies shall retain the holding only till the expiry of the statutory term current at the time of his death; and, subject to any claim by the heir to compensation for improvements, the landlord is left free to let the holding to any person at any rent which may be arranged (clause 6, paragraph 69). The new tenant under section 35 (A) then acquires statutory rights similar to those enjoyed by his predecessor.

24. In section 36 (J) power has been taken by the Local Government to vary the limit of enhancement at stated intervals (clause 3, paragraph 69).

25. In Chapter V of the Act are the provisions for ejectment and the determination of tenancies. In this there has again been much addition and, for the sake of clearness, some re-arrangement of the sections.

26. Section 37 of the Bill reproduces section 41 of the Act unchanged, and states that a tenant with a right of occupancy, and in certain other cases, may be evicted only by a decree for ejectment. Among these tenants is included, by the present Act, a tenant under a special agreement. A tenant evicted by decree is not entitled to the compensation for disturbance given to the statutory tenant of the Bill. The Lieutenant-Governor is of opinion that the section should continue to cover the case of a tenant under special agreement.

27. Section 38 of the Bill is with some alteration section 12 of the Act. It covers the case of all other tenants, and permits their eviction either by a decree for ejectment under section 13 (A) of the Bill, or by an application where decreed arrears of rent remain unpaid, or by the notice of ejectment prescribed by the present Act. The application for ejectment for arrears has been taken from section 35 of the North-Western Provinces Rent Act (XII of 1881), and is a simpler procedure, which the improved position of the tenant justifies, than the application in execution of decree allowed by the present Act.

28. If the landlord proceeds by notice he is required by section 38 (A) of the Bill to deposit the compensation for disturbance, which was part of the scheme of the letter of December, 1883 (paragraph 69, clause 4).

29. In section 39 of the Bill (13 of the Act), which describes the details to be given in the notice, the only important change is that the time of service is put much earlier in the year (15th of November instead of 15th April). Tenancies will now be of seven years' duration, and it is very desirable that notice should be given in sufficient time to admit of all claims on the ground of improvement or other objections being fully sifted and decided before the expiry of the year.

30. Section 40 of the Bill (section 37 of the Act) then details the grounds on which the notice of ejectment may be contested. To the grounds given in the Act have to be added those which the new provisions in the Bill require. The notice may have been issued before the seven years of the statutory tenancy have expired, or the compensation for disturbance may have been deposited only in part or not at all. In sections 40 (A) and 40 (B) of the Bill the tenant is required, if he has any claim to compensation for improvements, to give a specific statement of his claim, and the Court is to determine it before it allows eviction. From the ambiguous language of the Act there have been contradictory rulings in the Rent Courts of Oudh as to the liability of the tenant to eviction before receipt of compensation due to him for improvements. It was clearly the intention of section 22 that he should be compensated before he was removed, and this is definitely expressed in the Bill.

31. Sections 41 and 42 of the Bill represent sections 44 and 45 of the Act with such alterations as the provisions of the preceding sections or experience in the working of the present Act require. In section 42 of the Bill a clause has been inserted, which was much wanted, enabling the Court to give assistance to the landlord, when needed, to evict a tenant who has contested a notice unsuccessfully. These sections contain the only provisions by which a landlord can remove a tenant of bad character, and no tenant is so likely to resist any action by the landlord himself. If assistance may be properly asked when the tenant has not contested the notice at all, it is more needed when the notice has been contested without valid ground of objection. The section in its present form follows the provision of section 40 of the North-Western Provinces Rent Act.

32. Section 43 of the Bill has been taken, as already explained, from the Rent Act of the North-Western Provinces.

33. Section 43(A) is the provision which the Lieutenant-Governor would substitute for section 11 of the Act, in regard to the terms on which a tenancy may be determined by a decree for ejectment. Section 11 bases it on a failure to perform or observe any of the stipulations of the lease or patta; but the patta of a statutory tenant will not contain any special stipulations, and when such a tenant defaults in his rent the landlord's process will be under section 43 of the Bill.

Even a statutory tenant, however, should be liable to ejectment if he uses his holding in a manner which renders it unfit for the purposes of his tenancy, and provision to that effect, taken from section 44 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, has been introduced in section 43(A) of the Bill. Moreover, many statutory tenants will hold on grain-rents; and as the amount of the landlord's receipts depends on the area the tenant cultivates, the landlord should be ensured against serious damage by the tenant's deliberate neglect to cultivate. In paragraph 77 of my letter of December, 1883, it was recommended that local custom should be left to decide what extent of failure in cultivation should be followed by forfeiture of the holding. This is the object of the second clause in section 43(A) of the Bill.

Tenants, however, "having a right of occupancy, or holding under an unexpired lease, or special agreement or decree of Court," are protected by section 41 of the Act (37 of the Bill) from eviction, except in execution of a decree for ejectment. The section specifies that a decree for ejectment against a tenant with a right of occupancy shall not be made unless at the date of the decree a decree against him for an arrear of rent has remained for fifteen days unsatisfied; but no definite explanation is given of the conditions under which ejectment may be made of the other classes of tenants specified in the section whether for failure in stipulations in the unexpired lease or special agreement, cessation of the effect of the decree of Court, or other ground for eviction. The Lieutenant-Governor presumes that it has been hitherto left to be decided under the general law whether the grounds for eviction in any such case are or are not sufficient, and that it is unnecessary to give any precise specification. This is, however, a matter on which the Legislative Department will advise.

34. In sections 44 and 45 of the Bill, corresponding to sections 38 and 39 of the Act, the period of the year it stated at which ejectment may take place. A sub-lessor is subjected to a special penalty in section 38(A) of the Bill, and there seems no reason for excepting him from the general rule that ejectment shall take place at the close of the agricultural year. As a statutory tenant he could only then be ejected, and for the same reason the last clause of section 38 of the Act should be omitted.

35. In section 39 of the Act the word thikadār has been substituted for sub-lessor.

36. Section 40 of the Act has been practically absorbed in section 43 of the Bill.

37. To this chapter of the Act two sections have been added in regard to sir-lands. The Lieutenant-Governor accepts the opinion that in the home-farms of the landlords no statutory rights should be recognised in the tenants who may from time to time be admitted to cultivate in them. The principle is recognised in the Tenancy Acts of the North-Western Provinces and Bengal. Whenever, however, statutory rights are recognised outside the private lands of the zamindār, it becomes necessary to define what these private lands are. Hitherto there has been in Oudh no special reason for entering as sir in the rent-rolls land which is not sir; for the change of law now proposed, which is to restrict the arbitrary powers of landlords over all holdings that are outside sir, has not been anticipated, and the revision of assessment is still sufficiently distant to make it more convenient for the collection of rent that land let to tenants shall be so recorded. From all that has been reported the village rent-rolls are in this respect, as indeed in most others, very fairly correct; and the Lieutenant-Governor is disposed, therefore, to make a less exacting definition of sir than that in force in the North-Western Provinces. The definition of sir which is given in section 46 (A) of the Bill is for these reasons less stringent in several particulars than that which is laid down in section 3 of the North-Western Provinces Rent Act. It has been proposed on some authority to adjust this definition on the principle of allowing land to fall into sir and again to fall back into ordinary tenancy land by fixing certain periods after which continuous cultivation by the landlord or by a tenant should determine the character of the cultivating occupancy. The rule of the North-Western Provinces is to fix a long period of continuous cultivation by the landlord, and then to make the lands so cultivated a permanent addition to his original sir, whether he continues to cultivate or lets to a tenant. The Bengal Act prevents any accession to the present sir unless it is recognised by village custom.

The Lieutenant-Governor would have been glad, nevertheless, to admit a proposal which is quite in keeping with the fluctuations of all agricultural enterprise, and the developments and depressions which circumstances frequently induce in agricultural families. No adjustment, however, has been discovered to regulate the recognition of lands as sir and their restoration to the normal conditions of tenancy which the landlord will not be able so to manipulate as to exclude from the statutory provisions an area of cultivated land considerably larger than that which he for the time being occupies. For the purposes of the landlord's cultivation, moreover, there is no restriction on its development. When a tenant's holding falls in by his death, it is open to the landlord to occupy it himself instead of letting it to another tenant. Whether, therefore, it is called sir or not will merely operate in determining whether the landlord can subsequently let it without initiating the usual statutory privileges in his tenant. After mature consideration the Lieutenant-Governor is of opinion that sir to the extent of all present requirements is provided by the definition as it stands in the Bill, that this may, as in the North-Western Provinces and Bengal, be permanently excluded from the operation of the sections which regulate the ordinary holdings of tenants, but that for the future no provision should be made by the law to enable a landlord, by private cultivation for any definite period, to remove permanently any lands from the general operation of those sections.

38. The section 46 (B) of the Bill has been added to meet the case of lessees and mortgagees who during their management have brought lands under their personal cultivation. These are lands which, on the expiry of the lease or redemption of the mortgage, are paying no rent; and unless some express provision is made, the lessee or mortgagee would apparently have not only the statutory rights of a tenant, but be entitled to sit rent-free.

39. In Chapter VI (Distress for Arrears of Rent) the Lieutenant-Governor proposes no change.

40. In Chapter VII (Jurisdiction of the Courts) the change are few.

41. In the preamble of section 83 a small change has been made in the terms of section 93 of the North-Western Provinces Rent Act, excluding definitely the jurisdiction of all Courts other than Courts of Revenue in the classes of cases specified.

In clause 3 it seems unnecessary to limit a suit for enhancement to the case of an occupancy-tenant. A lessee in whose lands there may be large alluvion may be liable to a suit for enhancement.

The last part of clause 4 is unnecessary for reasons stated in an earlier part of this letter.

In clause 9 an addition is necessary from the terms of section 26 of the Bill.

In clause 10 an addition is required by section 21 (A) of the Bill.

42. In section 91 an addition is proposed authorising the Local Government to invest any officer of the grade of a Deputy Collector with the powers of a Deputy Commissioner to hear applications by a tenant under section 24 to make improvements, or of a landlord under section 43 to eject a tenant for arrears of rent.

43. Section 102 of the Act gives summary powers to Deputy Collectors to restore possession which has been illegally disturbed. From orders under this section there is no appeal. Against this section there has been much complaint, and now that the position of the tenant will be comparatively secure it is preferable that the restoration should be by ordinary suit, subject to the usual appeal. For this section of the Act has been substituted a provision enabling the landlord to recover a fair rent for land which has been occupied without his permission. The absence of any such provision has been for many years a frequent cause of notice of ejectment. The only course open to the landlord hitherto, when a tenant has added surreptitiously to his holding, has been to eject him, or to attack him by the cumbrous process of a suit in the Civil Court for damages. If the land happened to be unlet in the previous year, the provisions of sections 25 and 36 of the Act prevent the landlord from recovering any rent in the Rent Court.

44. Section 112 of the Act requires that in all suits under the Act the summons to the defendant shall be for the final disposal of the suit. The suit is in many cases intricate, and will hereafter involve and concern tenancies of a longer and more valuable character. It is proposed to limit this provision to specified classes of suits.

45. Section 116 of the Act is no longer consistent with the general provisions of the Bill, and should be omitted.

46. Section 125 of the Act provides that sale of an under-proprietary tenure shall not be made if satisfaction of the decree can be made by management of the tenure under sections 243 and 244 of the Civil Procedure Code of 1859 (or the corresponding sections of the Code of 1882). Management of under-proprietary tenures by the Deputy Commissioner has for some time, however, been recognized as practically impossible. They are generally small; as they come under the Deputy Commissioner's charge, they are usually scattered; and official management can be neither efficient nor economical. If the under-proprietor can give the Deputy Commissioner any anticipation that a private adjustment of the judgment-debt can be effected by mortgage or otherwise, time can always be given under section 305 of the Code of 1882, and the Lieutenant-Governor's opinion on the whole is that all of the section, except the first sentence, may be without disadvantage omitted.

47. In a concluding chapter (X) of the Bill are entered four new sections.

48. Section 129 reserves to the Local Government authority under the sanction of the Governor General in Council to appoint an officer for the revision of rents in an estate in which from grave mismanagement the condition of the tenantry has been materially deteriorated or the area of the cultivation diminished. This formed the seventh clause of the scheme in paragraph 69 of the letter of 21st December, 1883, and the reasons for the provision have been there sufficiently explained.

49. Under the present registration law all pattas for seven years, for however small a sum, must be registered. The inconvenience of an enforced registration throughout the country would be very serious; and as the pattas of all tenants will be checked by the supervisor-kanúngos, registration seems to be unnecessary. The object of registration is practically effected by his verification, and personation will be difficult when the verification is made in the course of his village rounds. It is proposed, therefore, in section 130, to exempt pattas for the statutory period of seven years from the Registration Act.

50. In section 131 reference is made to a schedule, in which will be entered certain tracts which the Lieutenant-Governor proposes to exclude from the general rule of a statutory right to a seven years' holding. It has been explained in paragraph 75 of the letter of December, 1883, that in part of the northern and submontane districts the rent customs are exceptional, the area in cultivation varies with the season, and the rent is separately settled at each harvest. With these circumstances the general proposals of the Bill will not fit in; but in these tracts the population is sparse, and the tenants can command their own terms. A detail of the areas to be scheduled will be forwarded subsequently.

51. In the last section (132) of the Bill power is taken to the Local Government to make any rules necessary under the Act and consistent with it. The terms of the section have been taken from the last clause of section 211 of the North-Western Provinces Rent Act.

The following Bill was introduced into the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 9th June, 1886, and was referred to a Select Committee:—

NO. 8 OF 1886.

A Bill to alter the constitution of the body corporate known as the Trustees of the Indian Museum, and to confer certain additional powers on that body.

WHEREAS it is expedient to alter the constitution of the body corporate known as the Trustees of the Indian Museum, and to amend the Law relating to the powers of the said Trustees; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

1. (1) This Act may be called the Indian Museum Act, 1886; and

(2) It shall come into force at once.

2. Sections 3, 4 and 5 of the Indian Museum Act, 1876, are repealed.

3. For those sections the following shall be substituted, namely:—

“3. The Trustees of the said Indian Museum shall be—

- (a) the person for the time being holding the office of Accountant General of Bengal;
- (b) five other persons to be appointed by the Governor General in Council;
- (c) five other persons to be appointed by the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal;
- (d) five other persons to be appointed by the Council of the Asiatic Society of Bengal; and
- (e) five other persons to be appointed by the Trustees;

and the said Trustees shall be a body corporate, by the name of the Trustees of the Indian Museum, and shall have perpetual succession and a common seal.

“4. All the powers of the said body corporate may be exercised so long and so often as there are Number of corporators. five members thereof.

or becomes Accountant General of Bengal, then the authority which appointed the trustee may appoint a new trustee in his place.”

4. (1) For the purposes of the Indian Museum Act, 1876, as amended by this Act—

- (a) the persons nominated by the Governor General in Council under the Indian Museum Act, 1876, and now holding office as Trustees, shall be deemed to be persons appointed by the Governor General in Council under section 3 of that Act as amended by this Act;
- (b) the President of the Asiatic Society of Bengal, and the other members of the Council of that Society nominated by that Council under the Indian Museum Act, 1876, and now holding office as Trustees, shall be deemed to be persons appointed by the Council of the Asiatic Society of Bengal under the said section; and
- (c) the persons elected and appointed by the Trustees under the said Act, and now holding office as Trustees, shall be deemed to have been appointed by the Trustees under the said section.

(2) The Secretary to the Government of India and the Superintendent of the Geological Survey of India shall cease to be ex officio members of the said body corporate.

Power to Trustees to keep collections not belonging to them.

5. Notwithstanding anything in the Indian Museum Act, 1876,—

XX

- (a) the Trustees of the Indian Museum, if they think fit, may, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, and subject in each case to such conditions as he may approve and to such rules as he may from time to time prescribe, assume the custody and administration of collections which are not the property of the Trustees for the purposes of their trusts in that Act mentioned, and keep and preserve the collections either in the Indian Museum or elsewhere; and
- (b) in the event of the trust constituted by that Act being determined, collections of which the Trustees have assumed the custody and administration under the foregoing part of this section shall not, by reason of their then being in the Indian Museum, become the property of the Government of India.

And whereas it is provided in the Indian Museum Act, 1876, that the Trustees of the Indian Museum shall have the exclusive possession, occupation and control, for the purposes of their trusts in that

XX

Act mentioned, of the whole of the building called the Indian Museum, except certain portions thereof set apart for other purposes; and whereas the Trustees are by virtue of that provision in possession of the property described in the schedule to this Act; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

6. The Trustees may, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, and subject to such conditions as he may approve, deliver possession of that property to such person as the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal may appoint in that behalf.

THE SCHEDULE.

Land bounded on the north by a straight line drawn between the east and the west boundaries parallel to the main south wall of the Museum at a distance of twenty-five feet from the said wall, on the west and south-west by the Chowringhee Road and the walls of the premises known as No. 29 Chowringhee Road, on the south by Kyd Street, and on the east by the walls of the premises known as No. 15 Kyd Street and No. 4 Chowringhee Lane, measuring in all four acres, three roods and sixteen perches, together with all buildings, roads and tanks existing or erected thereon, and all easements appertaining thereto.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

THE object of this Bill is to give effect to an arrangement, made with the approval of the Government of India, whereby—

- (a) the Bengal Government is to be represented among the Trustees of the Indian Museum;
- (b) the Bengal Government is to entrust the Trustees with the custody and administration of the economic, ethnological, Indian Art-ware and Fine Art collections belonging to that Government; and
- (c) the Trustees, in consideration of the provision by the Bengal Government of additional accommodation required by them, are to surrender certain land adjacent to the Museum on which that Government may build a School of Art and Art Gallery.

Sections 3 and 4 provide for the representation of the Bengal Government among the Trustees, and sections 5 and 6 empower the Trustees to assume the custody of the collections belonging to the Bengal Government, and to make over to that Government the land on which the School of Art and Art Gallery are to be built.

9. Special provisions with respect to arrest before judgment.
10. Saving of proceedings antecedent to commencement of Act.
11. Act to bind the Crown.
12. Powers exercisable from time to time.

A Bill to amend the law relating to Imprisonment for Debt.

WHEREAS it is expedient to amend the law relating to imprisonment for debt; It is hereby enacted as follows :—

1. This Act may be called the Debtors Act, 1886; and it shall come into force on the first day of January, 1888.

2. (1) This Act shall extend, in the first instance, only to the territories administered by the Lieutenant-Governor of the North-Western Provinces and Chief Commissioner of Oudh.

(2) But any other Local Government, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, may, by notification in the official Gazette, extend this Act, with effect on and from a day not less remote than one year from the date of the notification, to the whole or any specified part of the territories under its administration or to any class of debtors within the whole or any specified part of those territories.

3. In this Act the expression "Revenue Court" means a Court having jurisdiction in suits for the rent, revenue or profits of land.

4. Notwithstanding anything in the Code of Civil Procedure or any other enactment, a person shall not be liable to arrest or imprisonment for default in compliance with a decree or order of a Civil or Revenue Court for payment of money except in the following cases :—

(a) where the order is for payment of a fine;

(b) where the defaulter is a trustee or person acting in a fiduciary capacity, and the decree or order requires him, as such, to pay any money which is in his possession or under his control, or any money for which he is accountable and of which he has not discharged himself;

(c) where the Court is satisfied that, since incurring the liability in respect of which the decree or order was made, the defaulter has fraudulently transferred, concealed or removed any part of his property, or committed any other act of bad faith in relation thereto, with the object or effect of impeding the enforcement of the decree or order by the attachment and sale of his property;

(d) where the Court is satisfied that the defaulter either has, or has had since the date of the decree or order, the means to pay the money, and has refused or without reasonable cause neglected, or refuses or neglects, to pay the same.

5. In any case coming within the exception specified in clause (d) of section 4 the Court may, after inquiry into the case, exercise the discretionary powers of Courts in some excepted cases.

grant or refuse, either absolutely or on terms, any application for the arrest or imprisonment of the defaulter, or for his release from arrest or discharge from imprisonment.

Act XIV, 1882, s. 287; & 33 Vic., 62, s. 5.] 6. (1) The High Court, with respect to Courts subordinate to it, and the Chief Controlling Revenue authority, with respect to Courts subordinate to it, may, with the approval of the Local Government and the sanction of the Governor General in Council, make rules for regulating the procedure to be observed in inquiries for determining whether the case of a defaulter for whose arrest or imprisonment application has been made is a case coming within the exceptions specified in clauses (c) and (d) of section 4, or within either of those exceptions.

(2) Rules may be made under this section—

(a) for the territories administered by the Lieutenant-Governor of the North-Western Provinces and Chief Commissioner of Oudh, at any time after the passing of this Act, and

(b) for territories under the administration of any other Local Government, at any time after the publication of the notification extending this Act to those territories or to any class of debtors therein;

but rules so made shall not take effect until the Act comes into force in the territories for which they have been made.

(3) An authority making rules under this section shall, before making the rules, publish a draft of the proposed rules in such manner as the Governor General in Council, by notification in the Gazette of India, prescribes.

(4) There shall be published with the draft a notice specifying a date at or after which the draft will be taken into consideration.

(5) The authority making the rules shall receive and consider any objection or suggestion which may be made by any person with respect to the draft before the date so specified.

(6) A rule made under this section shall not take effect until it has been published in the local official Gazette.

(7) The publication in that Gazette of a rule purporting to be made under this section shall be conclusive proof that it has been duly made.

7. The operation of the enactment under which the defaulter is liable to

Provisions as to imprisonment under Act. arrest or imprisonment in any case coming within the exceptions specified in clauses

(b), (c) and (d) of section 4, or within any of those exceptions, or is entitled to release from the arrest or discharge from the imprisonment, shall be subject to the following provisions, namely:—

(a) the defaulter may be imprisoned for such term, not exceeding six months, as the Court directs;

(b) no allowance for the subsistence of the defaulter, or for supplying him with clothing or bedding, shall be payable by the person on whose application the order for the imprisonment of the defaulter is made;

(c) during the term of his imprisonment the defaulter shall be maintained at the expense of the Government, and be subject, as nearly as circumstances admit, to the discipline prescribed in the case of a criminal prisoner undergoing simple imprisonment; [L. R. Ch. D.]

(d) notwithstanding the payment of the money in respect of which the decree or order was made, or any arrangement for the payment thereof or proof of present inability to pay it, or any expression of intention to apply for a declaration of insolvency, or any declaration of insolvency, or any request by the person on whose application the order for the arrest or imprisonment was made, the defaulter shall not be released from arrest, or, if he is in prison and the term of his imprisonment is not fulfilled, be discharged from prison, without the order of the Court;

(e) an appeal from the order for the imprisonment of the defaulter, and from an order refusing his release or discharge under clause (d) of this section, shall lie— [Act X 1882, s. (29).]

(i) if the Court making the order is a Civil Court subordinate for the purposes of the Code of Civil Procedure to the District Court, then to the District Court, XIV of 1

(ii) if the Court making the order is any other Civil Court, then to the High Court, and

(iii) if the Court making the order is a Revenue Court, then to the authority to which appeals lie from orders of the Court relating to the execution of decrees, or, where those orders of the Court are final, to such authority as the Local Government may, by notification in the official Gazette, appoint in this behalf; [Act XII, 1881, s. 1] and the order passed on the appeal shall be final. [Act XIV 1882, s. 6 Act XII, 1881, s. 149.]

8. Where the Court is of opinion that the Commitment of fraudulent defaulter has been guilty of any offence under the Indian Penal Code or under any enactment for the time being in force for the punishment of fraudulent debtors, it may, if it thinks fit, instead of ordering his imprisonment under this Act, send him to a Magistrate to be dealt with according to law. XIV of 1 [Indian Bankruptcy 1886, s. 10]

9. Notwithstanding anything in Chapter XXXIV of the Code of Civil Procedure, or any other enactment, a defendant in a suit for money only who has been arrested before judgment shall not, as such, either be required to give security for his appearance at any time after the day on which judgment is given, or, if he has been committed to prison, be detained in prison after that day: [32 & 33 Vic. c. 62, s. 6. XIV of 18]

Provided that, if judgment is given against the defendant, and the decree-holder applies, on the day on which judgment is given, for the enforcement of the decree by the imprisonment of the judgment-debtor, the Court may require the judgment-debtor to give such security as it thinks sufficient for his appearance at any time when called upon while the application is pending, and, if he fails to give the security, may commit him to prison, or place him in the custody of an officer of the Court, until the disposal of the application.

10. Nothing in this Act shall affect the liability to arrest and imprisonment of any person for whose arrest in execution of a decree or order a warrant has been issued by a Civil or Revenue Court before this Act comes into force in the territory in which the Court is established.

11. The provisions of this Act shall bind the [L. R. D. 47.]
Act to bind the Crown.

12. All powers conferred by this Act may be exercised from time to time as occasion requires.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

Imprisonment for Debt in India.

A decree or order for the payment of money may be enforced in India by the imprisonment of the judgment-debtor (Act XIV of 1882, s. 251). The Court has a discretionary power to refuse execution at the same time against the person and property of the judgment-debtor (s. 230), but has no discretionary power to refuse execution either against person or against property at the option of the creditor. When an application for execution of a decree is presented, it must, if it is not barred by efflux of time and is otherwise in order, be admitted, and then the Court must order execution of the decree according to the nature of the application (s. 245). The Court cannot refuse to issue its warrant for the execution of the decree unless it sees cause to the contrary (s. 250), and "cause to the contrary," as interpreted by the Courts, means some cause which deprives the decree-holder of the right to execute, or to execute against the party against whom execution is sought, or to execute in the mode prayed for.

2. A judgment-debtor may, when arrested, obtain immediate release by payment of the debt; but if he does not, he must be brought at once before the Court (ss. 336-337).

3. The Local Government may by notification* direct that whenever a judgment-debtor is arrested in execution of a decree for money, and brought before the Court, the Court shall inform him that he may apply, under Chapter XX of the Code, to be declared an insolvent, and that he will be discharged if he has not committed any act of bad faith regarding the subject of his application, and if he places all his property in possession of a receiver appointed by the Court (s. 336).

4. If the judgment-debtor expresses his intention so to apply, and furnishes sufficient security that he will appear when called on, and that he will, within one month, apply to be declared an insolvent, the Court is to release him from arrest. But if he fails so to apply, the Court may either direct the security to be realised, or commit him to prison in execution of the decree (s. 336).

5. A person is not to be imprisoned in execution of a decree for more than six months, or, if the debt does not exceed fifty rupees, for more than six weeks (s. 342).

6. Whilst he is in prison, a monthly allowance must be paid for his subsistence according to scales fixed by the Local Government. The allowance is to be supplied by the decree-holder, and is to be deemed costs in the suit (ss. 338 to 340).

7. He is to be discharged from prison—

- (a) on the amount mentioned in the warrant of committal being paid to the officer in charge of the prison, or
- (b) on the decree being otherwise fully satisfied, or
- (c) at the request of the person on whose application he has been imprisoned, or
- (d) on default in the payment of the allowance for his subsistence, or
- (e) on his being declared an insolvent, or
- (f) on the expiration of the term of his imprisonment (s. 341).

His discharge from prison does not discharge him from his debt, but he cannot be re-arrested under the same decree (s. 341).

8. By the Presidency Small Cause Courts Act, XV of 1882, the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure are applied, with modifications and exceptions, to the procedure in the Small Cause Courts at Calcutta, Madras and Bombay. Among the provisions not so applied are those which relate to the release of an arrested judgment-debtor on his expressing an intention to apply for a declaration of insolvency. Chapter XX of the Code, relating to insolvent judgment-debtors, is also not applied to these Courts. (See s. 23 and sched. II.)

9. The Act, however, contains certain special provisions with respect to an arrested judgment-debtor. Under section 29 the Court may release him from arrest on his giving security for payment. And under section 30, if it appears to the Court that a judgment-debtor under its decree is unable, from sickness, poverty or other sufficient cause, to pay the amount of the decree, or of any instalment under the decree, the Court may, from time to time, for such time and on such terms as it thinks fit, suspend the execution of the decree, and release the debtor, or make such order as it thinks fit.

10. In the four districts of the Dekkhan to which the Dekkhan Agriculturists' Relief Acts apply arrest and imprisonment for debt have been abolished in the case of agriculturists.* And certain special Acts for the relief of embarrassed landholders contain provisions protecting the debtor from arrest or imprisonment in respect of the debts to which the Acts apply.

* "No agriculturist shall be arrested or imprisoned in execution of a decree for money passed whether before or after this Act comes into force."—(Act XVII of 1879, s. 21, as amended by Act XXII of 1882, s. 3.)

Acts apply arrest and imprisonment for debt have been abolished in the case of agriculturists.* And certain special Acts for the relief of embarrassed landholders contain provisions protecting the debtor from arrest or imprisonment in respect of the debts

Imprisonment for Debt in England.

11. Imprisonment for debt was abolished in England by the Debtors Act of 1869 (32 & 33 Vic., c. 62), except in the following cases:—

- (1) default in payment of a penalty, or sum in the nature of a penalty, other than a penalty in respect of a contract;
- (2) default in payment of a sum recoverable summarily before a Justice or Justices of the Peace;
- (3) default by a trustee or person acting in a fiduciary capacity and ordered to pay by a Court of Equity any sum in his possession or under his control;
- (4) default by a solicitor in payment of costs, when ordered to pay costs for misconduct as such, or in payment of a sum of money, when ordered to pay the same in his character of an officer of the Court;
- (5) default in payment for the benefit of creditors of any portion of a salary or other income, in respect of the payment of which any Court having jurisdiction in bankruptcy is authorized to make an order;
- (6) default in payment of sums in respect of the payment of which orders may be made under the Act (that is, cases of contumacious refusal under section 5 of the Act, see para. 14).

12. The term of imprisonment in these excepted cases must not exceed one year (s. 4).

13. In cases (3) and (4) the Court has power to enquire into the case, and at discretion to grant or refuse an order for arrest or imprisonment (41 & 42 Vic., c. 54, s. 1).

14. Under section 5 of the Act of 1869, a Court may commit to prison for a term not exceeding six weeks, or until payment of the sum due, any person who makes default in payment of any debt, or instalment of any debt, due from him in pursuance of any order or judgment of that or any other competent Court. But the power is not to be exercised unless it is proved to the satisfaction of the Court that the person making default has, or has had, since the date of the order or judgment, the means to pay the sum in respect of which he has made default, and has refused or neglected to pay it. "Proof of the means of the person making default may be given in such manner as the Court thinks just, and for the purposes of such proof the debtor and witnesses may be summoned and examined on oath, according to the prescribed rules." A summons under this section is usually called a judgment summons.

15. It will be observed that all the cases in which a debtor is liable to imprisonment under the Act of 1869 involve some degree of delinquency.† And it has been held by high authority‡ that the Act was distinctly intended for the purpose of punishing fraudulent or dishonest debtors.

16. Sums recoverable summarily before Justices, or, as they are called in modern statutory language, Courts of summary jurisdiction, are usually fines. But as ordinary civil debts are in some cases so recoverable, it has been provided by the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879 (42 & 43 Vic., c. 49, section 35) that an order of a Court of summary jurisdiction for the payment of a civil debt is not to be enforced by imprisonment, unless the case is such as would make the debtor liable to imprisonment under section 5 of the Debtors Act, 1869.

Imprisonment for Debt in Scotland.

17. In Scotland imprisonment for debt for sums under £8-6-8 was abolished in 1835 by 5 & 6 Wm. IV, c. 70, but alimentary debts (that is, debts for the support of the debtor's wife or children) were excepted from the operation of that Statute. In 1880 was passed the Debtors (Scotland) Act, 1880 (43 & 44 Vic., c. 34), which enacts, by section 4, that,

"with the exceptions hereinafter mentioned, no person shall, after the commencement of this Act, be apprehended or imprisoned on account of any civil debt.

"There shall be excepted from the operation of the above enactment—

- (1) taxes, fines or penalties due to Her Majesty, and rates and assessments lawfully imposed or to be imposed ;
- (2) sums decreed for alimant :

"Provided that no person shall be imprisoned in any case excepted from the operation of this section for a longer period than twelve months."

The same Act contains provisions for the relief of insolvent debtors and for the punishment of fraudulent debtors.

18. By the Civil Imprisonment (Scotland) Act, 1832 (15 & 16 Vic., c. 42), imprisonment for alimentary debts was abolished, except in cases where there is a wilful failure to obey the decree for the debt (ss. 3 and 4), and the maximum term of imprisonment for failure to pay rates or assessments was reduced to six weeks (s. 5).

Imprisonment for Debt in Ireland.

19. In Ireland the law as to imprisonment for debt is regulated by the Debtors Act (Ireland), 1872 (35 & 36 Vic., c. 57), as amended by 41 & 42 Vic., c. 54, and is practically identical with the English law.

Proposals for amendment of Indian Law.

20. On the 17th November, 1881, a circular was addressed by the Government of India to all Local Governments and Administrations, stating that the Government of India had under consideration the question of amending the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure bearing upon the question of the arrest of pardahastha women in execution of the decrees of Civil Courts, but that before coming to any final conclusion on the subject the Governor General in Council thought it desirable to deal with the larger question of abolishing imprisonment for debt, and for this purpose to enquire whether sufficient reasons exist for the continued maintenance in India of the present system. Local Governments and Administrations were accordingly requested to favour the Government of India with a full expression of their opinion on the matter.

21. The replies to the circular disclosed much difference of opinion as regards the advisability of maintaining in India the present system of imprisonment for debt.

22. In favour of the maintenance under existing circumstances of the present system of imprisonment for debt were the Madras Government, the Madras High Court, the Bombay Government, the Bombay High Court, the Calcutta High Court, the Calcutta Chamber of Commerce and the Trades Association, Calcutta (unless a change were accompanied by the enactment of a stringent bankruptcy law), the British Indian Association, Calcutta, the Board of Revenue, North-Western Provinces, the Punjab Chief Court, the Chief Commissioner of the Central Provinces, the Chief Commissioner of Assam (provided the law were so altered as to permit the issue of process against the person only after all means of realising the decree by process against property have been exhausted), and the Chief Commissioner and the Judicial Commissioner of Coorg. The arguments which they advanced appear to be in the main the following:—

- (a) that the total abolition of imprisonment for debt in India would be premature, and would remove from the Statute Book the only check upon the fraudulent alienation of property by solvent but dishonest debtors ;

- (b) that legislation has proceeded quite far enough in relief of the judgment-debtor,

* Sir C. Stuart, of the Bombay High Court, writes:—

"The legal position of the undivided Hindu family, the unequal distribution of property caused by the Mitakshara law of descent, and, therefore, the necessity of creating by law of force a check upon this country, afford the debtor a debtor endless opportunities of baffling the efforts of the judgment-creditor to attach his property."

while there are in India special difficulties in executing a decree by attachment of property when the judgment-creditor is a member of an undivided family. Creditors are not, it is said, in the habit of proceeding to extremities unless the debtor has the means of liquidating a portion at least of the debt. The men who go to prison are for the most part those who obstinately refuse to pay their debts, and cases of imprisonment for debt are not numerous ;

- (c) that the abolition of imprisonment for debt would deprive lenders of personal security, would thereby depreciate credit, and would involve an increase in the rate of interest, already very high. In the case of agriculturists this might seriously impair their ability to pay the land-revenue ;

- (d) that abolition of imprisonment for debt should only be attempted when the habits of secrecy, engendered by centuries of oppression, have partly worn away, and when transactions are open and the registration of deeds and bonds has become habitual. When the debtor's property can be easily traced and seized in execution of a decree, then it will be reasonable and right to withhold execution on the body of a pauper debtor except as a distinctly exceptional and penal measure in the case of fraud.

23. In support of the abolition of imprisonment for debt were the following authorities:—

- (a) the Advocate General of Bengal, who advocated the introduction of the English system, because there is no reason why the matter should not be regulated in India as in England, if proper exceptions and limitations, as contained in the English Debtors Act of 1869, are prescribed, and because the abolition of imprisonment for debt would not cause any public injury, while, on the other hand, the present system in most instances operates only as a means of oppression, to the total ruin of the party imprisoned and of his family;
- (b) the Bengal Government, which, while not prepared to resist the opinions of the local officers that abolition would at present be premature, thought that, if an alteration of the bankruptcy law were at any time undertaken, measures might then be adopted for the abolition of imprisonment for debt in cases where fraud is not established against the judgment-debtor;
- (c) the North-Western Provinces and Oudh Government, which regarded the existing practice of placing in the creditor's hands the power of selecting his own method of coercion as a relic of the old semi-barbarous debt laws which has now been eliminated from almost every civilized code of judicial procedure. The present system operates with severity against all debtors, honest and dishonest, indiscriminately. The power of subjecting a debtor to arrest and imprisonment should be entrusted not to the decree-holder, but to the Courts, and its exercise should be limited to cases where clear proof exists of fraudulent and contumacious attempts on the part of the judgment-debtor to defeat the operation of a decree. Imprisonment is especially hard on the cultivator and working-man, whom it deprives of their means of subsistence and of providing for their families;
- (d) the North-Western Provinces High Court, which advocated the abolition of imprisonment for debt, as it is doubtful whether "any useful purpose is served by the perpetuation in this country of that remnant of barbarism";
- (e) the Punjab Government, which believed that there is some reason to fear that, under the present system, creditors occasionally make use of the law to gratify vindictive feelings or personal spite, and to coerce debtors to sell their land and property at a price below its proper value or to relinquish their just rights. Discretionary power ought to be expressly allowed to the Civil Courts, imprisonment not being resorted to as an ordinary process of execution of a decree, unless the Court is satisfied that there has been fraud or wilful concealment of property;
- (f) the Chief Commissioner of British Burma, who pointed out that the imprisonment of debtors who are paupers, but who are not fraudulent, does no real good to any class, works directly and indirectly great harm to the poorer classes, and causes a distinct loss to the community at large. The practice of permitting such imprisonment has been gradually circumscribed among other civilized nations; among some nations it has absolutely ceased; and there is no reason why the way should not be paved for the disappearance of the system in India. Civil Courts should be allowed to grant execution against the body of judgment-debtors against whom there might be prima facie ground for presuming fraud or bad conduct, unless the presumption were rebutted by the judgment-debtor;
- (g) the Judicial Commissioner of British Burma and the Recorder of Rangoon, who were of opinion that imprisonment for debt should be abolished, except in case of fraud, which should be punished criminally. The Recorder recommended that the law as it now obtains in England should be applied to India;
- (h) the Resident at Hyderabad, who considered that the present system of imprisonment for debt is not wanted to compel payment, while it may be used to bring undue pressure to bear upon a debtor, especially in an agricultural country where interest in land is generally given as security for debts. He recommended that imprisonment for debt should be retained only to meet cases in which debtors abscond or endeavour to fraudulently evade meeting their obligations.

24. Thus, the preponderance of opinion was on the whole in favour of the maintenance of imprisonment for debt under the present condition of India, but a considerable and influential minority were in favour of its abolition.

25. The arguments on which the upholders of the present system rely fall into two classes: first, arguments which, if valid at all, are valid for England as well as for India; and, secondly, arguments based on the special circumstances and conditions of India.

26. To arguments of the first class belongs the assertion that "to remove from the Statute Book the penalty of arrest and imprisonment in execution of a decree for money would be to paralyze the commerce and trade of the country." The same objection was made in

* See Lord Cottenham's speech in 1814 on the Creditors and Debtors Bill; Hansard, 74, page 153.

England, first to the abolition of arrest on mesne process,* and afterwards to the abolition of arrest on final process. The power of arrest was removed, and neither commerce nor trade shewed any symptoms of paralysis.

27. Those who uphold imprisonment for debt, not as being generally expedient, but as being specially required for India, do so mainly on two grounds: first, the complexity and obscurity of Indian titles to property; and, secondly, the exceptional prevalence of fraud in India, and the exceptional difficulties of detecting it.

As to the first ground, it has been remarked that if it is wrong to allow a debtor to pledge his person as security for his debts, it is not the less wrong because, owing to the defect of Indian property law, he finds difficulty in giving a satisfactory security over his property.

In the argument based on the prevalence of, and difficulty of detecting fraud, there is undoubtedly much force, though it may be doubted whether the obstacles which can be placed in the way of a creditor realizing his debts are not as great in England as in India. But, however this may be, to make an honest, though needy, debtor liable to imprisonment, simply because fraudulent debtors are numerous and difficult to detect, appears to be as unjust as it would be to make homicide by misadventure punishable by death, simply because the crime of murder was rife and hard to prove.

28. There are in the opinion of the Government of India two principles which ought to be observed in every law of debtor and creditor. The Courts ought not to give effect to any pledge by a debtor either of his person or of the bare necessities of life. The debtor ought not to be allowed, by his own action, supplemented by the action of the Courts, either to deprive himself of his personal liberty, or to reduce himself to starvation. If he cannot obtain credit except on one or other of these securities, it is better that he should not obtain credit at all. Experience acquired in the Dekkhan goes to show that these principles are as applicable to India as to England. The Code of Civil Procedure recognises one of these principles by exempting from seizure for debt the debtor's bare means of subsistence. But this recognition is nullified by the refusal to adopt the principle of exempting the debtor's person from seizure. Of what use is it to reserve by law to the debtor the bare necessities of life, when he can be compelled to give them up by the threat of imprisonment? By those who advocate the retention of the present system, much reliance is placed on the very small proportion of actual imprisonments to warrants of arrest; and the inference drawn from this proportion is that the law, though harsh in theory, produces no hardships in practice. But there is reason to believe that, in the great majority of cases, exemption from arrest is purchased either by renewal of bonds on extortionate terms, or by surrender of property which the law has exempted from seizure, or by surrender of property which does not belong to the debtor at all, but to his relations or friends. In other words, the law enables a creditor to do indirectly what it forbids him to do directly.

29. It is said that the honest debtor has an easy way out of prison through the door of insolvency. But in the first place, the honest debtor ought not to be sent to prison at all; and in the next place, the door which is provided for his release is, for some reason or other, very rarely used. There is, or was until recently, a strong concurrence of opinion to the effect that the Insolvency Chapter of the Code of Civil Procedure is practically a dead letter. As to the causes of its failure,—whether it is to be accounted for by the preliminary proceedings being unnecessarily cumbersome or expensive, or by the difficulty of satisfying the Court under section 351 that the debtor has not been guilty of any kind of misconduct, or by ignorance of the law and of the modes of relief available to debtors,—opinions differ; but about the fact of failure there appears to be no difference.

30. Since 1883 the Government of India has received and published reports obtained from Her Majesty's representatives abroad on the system of imprisonment for debt in force in the various countries to which they are accredited. Those reports showed that imprisonment for debt has been abolished in nearly all civilized countries.

31. Having regard to the state of the law in the United Kingdom, to those reports, to the success which has attended the abolition of imprisonment for debt in the case of agriculturists to whom the Dekkhan Agriculturists' Relief Acts apply, to some expressions to be found in the opinions of the authorities who considered the draft Bankruptcy Bill of 1885, and to the advocacy by the Lieutenant-Governor of the North-Western Provinces and Chief Commissioner of Oudh, and by the Chief Justice and Judges of the High Court of Judicature for the North-Western Provinces, of the entire abolition of the process of arrest for debt, so far as it is a process that can be set in motion at the discretion of the creditor, and of the enforcement of the process being restricted to cases in which the Courts are satisfied that there have been fraudulent and contumacious attempts to defeat the operation of decrees, the Government of India has decided to introduce a Bill giving effect tentatively and, in the first instance, within a limited area to the policy which dictated the English Act of 1869, and is believed by several authorities of weight to be applicable to India.

Provisions of Bill.

32. Sections 1 and 2.—It is proposed that the measure shall apply in the first instance to the North-Western Provinces and Oudh, and be extendible to other Provinces, or to particular classes of debtors in other Provinces, by Local Governments with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council.

From the opinions recorded by the Chief Commissioner and by Mr. MacEwen, the Officiating Recorder of Rangoon, on the draft Bankruptcy Bill of 1885, and by the Recorder, Judicial Commissioner and other authorities, European and Native, on the circular of 1881, there appears to be a strong feeling in Burma in favour of abolishing imprisonment for debt where the debtor has not been guilty of fraud. But it is considered desirable that the proposed Act should apply in the first instance to the territories under one Local Government, and that its effect there should be ascertained before the Act is extended to other parts of the country.

The date on which the Act is to come into force in the North-Western Provinces and Oudh is the 1st of January, 1888. If therefore the Bill is passed during the present year, decree-holders will have more than twelve months within which they may proceed against their judgment-debtors under the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure. In England the period which elapsed between the passing and the coming into force of the Debtors Act 1869, was less than five months.

33. Section 4.—This section is based on section 4 of the Debtors Act, 1869, but applies only to arrest and imprisonment for default in compliance with decrees and orders of Civil and Revenue Courts. Clause (c) is specially designed to check those fraudulent alienations of property by solvent but dishonest debtors which are relied on by the opponents of any mitigation of the existing law as the main justification of imprisonment for debt.

34. Section 5.—This section, following the 11 & 12 Vic. c. 54, permits the Court to refuse, either absolutely or on terms, an application for the arrest or imprisonment, or for the release or discharge from arrest or imprisonment, of a defaulter who is a trustee or person acting in a fiduciary capacity and is required, as such, to pay any money which is in his possession or under his control, or any money for which he is accountable and of which he has not discharged himself.

"Then we come to the Amendment Act of 1878, which was passed to meet a special class of cases, and the history of that Act was this. An application was made before me for the imprisonment of a trustee who had been ordered to pay a sum of money. It was a very hard case, one of an unintentional breach of trust; and though the man was actually doing it I had no alternative but to make an order. Then I had various other cases before me which led me to regret that the Court had no discretion, for it not unfrequently happened

* That is to say, the defaults referred to in 2 & 3 Vic. c. 65 s. 4. If a person who came in strictness under the first class of circumstances I allude to it would be wise and prudent that a discretion should be given to the Courts to deal with exceptional cases, but not with the intention of repealing the existing Act. Mr. Macon, being a member of the Legislature, then adopted my suggestion, and procured this Amendment Act to be passed."

35. Section 6.—This section empowers the High Court and the Chief Controlling Revenue-authority to make rules for regulating the procedure to be followed in the Courts subordinate to them respectively in inquiries as to the liability of persons to arrest and imprisonment on the ground of fraud or contumacy.

36. Section 7.—This section modifies the operation of enactments authorising arrest and imprisonment for default in compliance with decrees and orders of Civil and Revenue Courts for payment of money.

Clause (a), following the Code of Civil Procedure, limits the term of imprisonment to six months, notwithstanding that section 103 of the North-Western Provinces Rent Act, 1881, authorises imprisonment in certain cases for so long a period as two years.

Clause (b) relieves the decree-holder of the liability to maintain his judgment-debtor while in prison. If imprisonment is retained, not as a mode of enforcing payment but simply as a punishment, it will hardly be possible to continue the liability. This liability existed under the old Insolvency law in England, and the Act which imposed it was once described as giving the creditor "the power of imprisoning and tormenting his debtor at the expense of 3s. 6d. per week."

If it is abolished, great care should be taken that imprisonment is not inflicted except in cases of misconduct which deserve punishment.

Clause (c) requires that the defaulter, though in the civil jail, shall nevertheless be subject, as nearly as circumstances admit, to the discipline prescribed in the case of a criminal prisoner undergoing imprisonment. Where a person is ordered to pay a fine, the nature and term of his imprisonment will be regulated by the general law. This clause relates to the other cases in which a debtor is liable to imprisonment. Those cases, as before observed, all involve some degree of delinquency (L. R. 6 Ch. 157), and the imprisonment contemplated by the Bill, as by the English Act (L. R. 13 Ch. D. 313), is simple, that is, without hard labour. The effect of this clause will be to deprive the defaulter, as a civil prisoner, of the privilege of maintaining himself, and purchasing or receiving from private sources food, clothing, bedding, and other necessaries (Act XXVI of 1870, s. 31).

Clause (d) provides that, except where the arrest or imprisonment is for default in payment of a fine, the defaulter, when once arrested or imprisoned, shall not be released from arrest, or discharged from prison, without the order of the Court. The Court may grant the order or refuse it. If it refuses the order, the defaulter may appeal.

Clause (e) so far modifies clause (29) of section 588 of the Code of Civil Procedure as to admit of an appeal being preferred from an order for imprisonment in execution of a decree.

37. Section 8.—This section follows section 359 of the Code of Civil Procedure in providing that where the Court is of opinion that the defaulter has been guilty of an offence against the Indian Penal Code or any special enactment for the punishment of fraudulent debtors, it may, instead of ordering his imprisonment in the civil jail, send him to a Magistrate to be dealt with according to law.

38. Sections 9 and 10.—These sections contain special provisions with respect to arrest before judgment, and save proceedings taken before the Act comes into force.

39. Section 11.—It has been decided In re Heavens Smith (L. R. 2 Ex. D. 47) that the English Debtors Act of 1869 does not apply to a case in which the defaulter is a debtor to the Crown. It is proposed that the Indian Act shall have the like effect as against the Crown where a decree or order for payment of money is made in its favour by a Civil or Revenue Court, as it will have against a subject.

40. The question of giving the Courts a discretionary power to refuse an order for the arrest and imprisonment of a judgment-debtor, or at least of a female judgment-debtor, will be considered when next the Code of Civil Procedure comes under revision.

The following Bill was introduced into the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 9th June, 1886:—

NO. 10 OF 1886.

A Bill to declare certain allowances collectively known as Oudh Wasikas to be pensions within the meaning of the Pensions Act, 1871.

WHEREAS, on the death of Her Highness the Bahu Begam, His Highness the Nawab Vazir of Oudh delivered to the British Government a sum of money with intent that the interest accruing thereon should, in compliance with the wishes of Her Highness the Bahu Begam as expressed in a Deed of Deposit executed by her in the year 1813, be applied by the British Government to the payment of certain pensions, which pensions are known as the Amanat Wasikas;

And whereas in the year 1813 the said Government guaranteed the payment of certain pensions to persons connected with the Khas Mahal of Her Highness the Bahu Begam, which pensions are known as the Zamanat Wasikas;

And whereas in the years 1814, 1825, 1829 and 1838 loans, known respectively as the 1st, 3rd, 5th and 6th Oudh loans, were made by the Rulers of Oudh to the Hon'ble the East India Company with intent that the interest accruing thereon should be applied by the said Government to the payment of certain pensions, which pensions are known as the Loan Wasikas;

And whereas the said Government reserved to itself the right of commuting the pensions to the payment of which the interest accruing on the 5th Oudh loan was to be applied;

And whereas the Amanat, Zamanat and Loan Wasikas have been regarded as pensions to which the Pensions Act, 1871, applies, and rules respecting them have been made and published under section 14 of that Act;

And whereas, since the making and publication of the rules, doubt has been expressed whether the said Wasikas are pensions within the meaning of the Pensions Act, 1871;

And whereas it is expedient to declare them to be pensions within the meaning of that Act;

It is hereby enacted as follows:—

1. This Act may be called the Oudh Wasikas Act, 1886.
2. The allowances respectively known as the Amanat Wasikas, the Zamanat Wasikas and the Loan Wasikas are, within the meaning of the Pensions Act, 1871, pensions conferred by a former Government and continued by the British Government on political considerations.
3. Notwithstanding anything in section 10 of the said Act, the Local Government may, without the consent of the holder of a pension payable out of the interest accruing on the 5th Oudh loan, order the whole or any part of the pension to be commuted on the terms referred to in the fourth article of the treaty executed with respect to that loan on the first day of March, 1829, and ratified by the Governor General in Council on the eighth day of May in the same year.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

CERTAIN allowances, locally known as Amanat Wasikas, Zamanat Wasikas and Loan Wasikas, are paid by the British Government to the descendants of certain relatives and dependants of the Bahu Begam and the Vazirs and Kings of Oudh. Till the year 1880 no doubt was entertained that these allowances were pensions within the meaning of the Pensions Act, 1871. In that year it became desirable on financial grounds to commute one of the largest of them, and, a dispute having arisen as to the person entitled to receive the capitalized amount of the allowance, the Government had to consider whether it could safely pay the amount under cover of the Pensions Act to the person who appeared to be best entitled. The Hon'ble the Advocate General inclined to the opinion that a Wasika was a pension within the meaning of the Act, but thought there was a good deal to be said in favour of the opposite view. As the sum involved was so very large that the Government would not have been justified in incurring any risk in disposing of it, a special Bill was introduced into the Legislative Council and passed as the Tāj Mahal's Pension Act, 1881.

This step, which the Government was compelled to take for its own protection, necessarily suggested a doubt as to the applicability of the Pensions Act to Wasikas.

As it is expedient on political considerations that there should be no room for question as to the applicability of the Act to Wasikas, the Government has decided to introduce this Bill to remove the doubts created by the legislation of 1881.

A Bill to amend the Law relating to the Tenancy of Land in the Punjab.

WHEREAS it is expedient to amend the law relating to the tenancy of land in the Punjab; It is hereby enacted as follows:—

CHAPTER I.

PRELIMINARY.

Short title, local extent and commencement. 1. (1) This Act may be called the Punjab Tenancy Act, 1886.

(2) It extends to the territories for the time being administered by the Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab and its Dependencies; and

(3) It shall come into force on such date (hereinafter called the commencement of this Act) as the Local Government, with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, may, by notification in the official Gazette, appoint in this behalf.

Repeal. 2. (1) The Punjab Tenancy Act, 1868, is hereby repealed; and XXV 1868.

(2) All suits, appeals and applications instituted, preferred and made under that Act, and pending at the commencement of this Act, shall, so far as may be, be deemed to have been respectively instituted, preferred and made under this Act.

3. In this Act, unless there is something repugnant in the subject or context,—

Definitions. (a) "land" means land which is let or occupied for agricultural purposes or for purposes subservient to agriculture, and includes the sites of buildings appurtenant to such land: [New. C IX, 1883 3 (1).]

(b) "tenant" means a person who holds land of another person, and is, or, but for a special contract, would be, liable to pay rent for that land to that other person. But it does not include an inferior landowner, or a farmer or mortgagee of the rights of a landowner, or a person who takes lease of unoccupied land for the purpose of subletting it: [New. C IX, 1883 3 (2).]

(c) "landlord" means the person of whom a tenant holds land, and to whom the tenant is, or, but for a special contract, would be, liable to pay rent for that land: [New. C IX, 1883 3 (3).]

(d) "tenant" and "landlord" include the predecessors and representatives in interest of a tenant and landlord respectively: [New.]

(e) "rent" means whatever is payable, deliverable or renderable in money, kind or service by a tenant on account of the use or occupation of land held by him: [New. C XI, 1883 3 (4).]

(f) "pay," "payable" and "payment," used with reference to rent, include "deliver," "deliverable" and "delivery," and "render," "renderable" and "rendering": [New. C IX, 1883 3 (5).]

(g) "arrear of rent" means rent which remains unpaid after the date on which it becomes payable: [Act XX 1868, s. 2.]

(h) "tenancy" means a parcel of land held by a tenant of a landlord under one lease or one set of conditions: [New. C IX, 1883 3 (7).]

(i) "land-revenue" means—

(1) the land-revenue for the time being assessed on land, whether the assessment is leviable or not; or

The Punjab Tenancy Bill.
(Chapter II.—Right of Occupancy.—Sections 4-5.)

RIGHT OF OCCUPANCY.

Tenants having right of occupancy. 4. (1) A tenant—

(a) who has before or after the commencement of this Act paid no rent in respect of land occupied by him beyond the amount of the land-revenue thereof and the rates and cesses for the time being chargeable thereon, and whose father and grand-father, uncle and grand-uncle, occupying the same land, paid no rent beyond the amount aforesaid, or

(b) who has before or after the commencement of this Act continuously occupied land of which he was landowner and of which he ceased to be landowner otherwise than by forfeiture to Government or by any voluntary act, or

(c) who, before the twenty-first day of October, 1868, settled in a village along with the founders thereof as a cultivator of the land occupied by him, and who, since so settling there, has before or after the commencement of this Act continuously occupied that land, or

(d) who is, or has before or after the commencement of this Act been, jágírdár of the village or any part of the village in which the land occupied by him is situate, and who—

(i) being such jágírdár, has before or after the commencement of this Act continuously occupied the land for not less than twenty years, or

(ii) having been such jágírdár, occupied the land while he was jágírdár and has before or after the commencement of this Act continuously occupied it for not less than twenty years, shall be deemed to have a right of occupancy in the land so occupied.

(2) If a tenant proves that he has before or after the commencement of this Act continuously occupied land for thirty years and paid no rent therefor beyond the amount of the land-revenue thereof and the rates and cesses for the time being chargeable thereon, he shall be presumed to have fulfilled the conditions of clause (a) of sub-section (1).

(3) If a tenant occupied land in a village in 1838, he shall, for the purposes of clause (c) of sub-section (1), be presumed to have settled there along with the founders of the village.

5. A tenant whose name is entered in a record-of-rights sanctioned by the Local Government before the twenty-first day of October, 1868, as of a tenant having a right of occupancy in land which he has continuously occupied from the time of the preparation of that record, shall be deemed to have and to have had a right of occupancy in that land unless the landlord proves in a suit—

(a) that within the thirty years immediately preceding the institution of the suit other tenants of the same class in the same village, or in adjacent villages, have ordinarily been ejected at the will of the landlord; or

(b) that before the twenty-first day of October, 1868, the tenant, in the presence of an officer authorized to attest entries in the record-of-rights,

(2) where the land-revenue has been permanently assessed, or has been wholly or in part compounded for or redeemed, the amount which, but for the permanent assessment, composition or redemption, would have been leviable; or

(3) where no land-revenue has been assessed on land, the amount which would have been assessed thereon if the rate sanctioned for like land in the same village or in adjacent villages had been applied; and includes any rate imposed in respect of the increased value of land due to canal-irrigation, unless, where the land is assessed, that increased value has been taken into account in the assessment:

[New.]
XX of 1883. (j) "rates and cesses" mean the local rate payable under the Punjab District Boards Act, 1883, the zaildári, lambardári and patwári cesses, and any other rates and cesses of which the levy has been generally or specially authorised by the Local Government:

[New.] (k) "Revenue-officer" and "Revenue Court" have the meanings respectively assigned to those expressions in the Punjab Land-revenue Act, 1886:

[Act IX, 1883, s. 3 (9).] (l) "prescribed Revenue-officer," in any provision of this Act, means such Revenue-officer as the Local Government may, by notification in the official Gazette, direct by name or by virtue of his office to discharge the functions of a Revenue-officer under that provision:

[New. Cf. Act X, 1883, s. 3 (9).] (m) "improvement" means, with reference to a tenancy, any work which is suitable to the tenancy and consistent with the conditions on which it is held, by which the letting value of the tenancy has been and continues to be increased, and which, if not executed on the tenancy, is either executed directly for its benefit, or is, after execution, made directly beneficial to it;

Explanation I.—It includes—

[Act XXVIII, 1868, s. 38.] (1) the construction of works for the storage of water, for the supply of water for agricultural purposes, for drainage, and for protection against floods;

(2) the construction of wells, the reclaiming, enclosing, levelling and terracing of land for agricultural purposes, and other works of a like nature;

(3) the erection of buildings in connection with the land for the more convenient or profitable cultivation thereof; and

(4) the renewal or re-construction of any of the foregoing works, or such alterations therein or additions thereto as are not required for maintaining the same and as durably increase their value;

[Cf. Bom. Act, 1879, s. 70.] But it does not include any benefit accruing to land from the ordinary operations of husbandry;

Explanation II.—A work which benefits several tenancies may be deemed to be, with respect to each of them, an improvement;

Explanation III.—A work executed by a tenant is not an improvement if it substantially diminishes the value of any other part of his landlord's property:

[Act XXVIII, 1868, s. 3, amended.] (n) "grandfather" includes the father of an adoptive father, the adoptive father of a father and the adoptive father of an adoptive father; "uncle" includes the brother of an adoptive father; and "grand-uncle" includes the adoptive father of an uncle: and voluntarily admitted himself to be a tenant not having a right of occupancy, and that the admission was recorded at the time by that officer.

[Act XXVIII, 1868, s. 7.] 6. If the tenant has voluntarily exchanged the land, or any portion of the land, formerly occupied by him, for other land belonging to the same landlord, the land taken in exchange shall, for the purposes of this Act, be held to be subject to the same right of occupancy as that to which the land given in exchange would have been subject if the exchange had not taken place.

[Act XXVIII, 1868, s. 8.] 7. Nothing in the foregoing sections of this Chapter shall preclude any person claiming a right of occupancy on any ground other than the grounds specified in those sections from suing to establish the right.

[Act XXVIII, 1868, s. 9.] 8. No tenant shall acquire a right of occupancy by mere lapse of time.

CHAPTER III.

Revision of Rents.

[New.] 10. (1) At any time while a local area is being assessed, and before the assessment has been confirmed, the prescribed Revenue-officer, of his own motion or on the application of either landlord or tenant, may, subject to the other provisions of this Chapter, revise the rent of any tenant having a right of occupancy in land situate in that local area.

(2) At any other time the prescribed Revenue-officer, on the application of either landlord or tenant, may, subject to those provisions, revise the rent of any tenant having a right of occupancy.

Conversion of Rents.

[Act XXVIII, 1868, s. 16.] 11. (1) In the case of a tenant having a right of occupancy or holding under an unexpired lease, rent in kind shall not be commuted into rent in money, or rent in money into rent in kind, without the consent of both the landlord and the tenant.

(2) With their consent the commutation may be made by the prescribed Revenue-officer on application made to him for that purpose by either of them.

[New.] 12. When the rent payable by a tenant having a right of occupancy is fixed at a lump sum without relation to the land-revenue of his tenancy and the rates and cesses chargeable thereon, the prescribed Revenue-officer shall, on the application of either the landlord or the tenant, determine what portion of the rent is represented by the land-revenue and rates and cesses.

Enhancement.

13. (1) An enhancement of rent shall not take effect before the commencement of the agricultural year next following the date of the agreement or order under which it is payable.

(2) The agricultural year shall for the purposes of this section commence on the sixteenth day of June.

14. Where the rent of a tenant having a right of occupancy in any land is a share of the produce, or of the appraised value thereof, with or without an addition in cash, or is paid according to cash-rates fixed with reference to the nature of the crops grown, the tenant shall be entitled to occupy the land at the share or rates hitherto paid by him :

Provided that—

(a) when the land or any part thereof previously not irrigated or flooded becomes irrigated or flooded, the share or rates payable in respect of the land or part may, subject to the provisions of this Act, be enhanced to the share or rates paid by tenants having a right of occupancy for irrigated or flooded land of a similar description and with similar advantages in the same neighbourhood ; and

(b) where, in the case of rent consisting of a share of the produce, or of the appraised value thereof, with an addition in cash, that addition is the amount of the land-revenue and rates and cesses, or a proportion thereof, it may, on an enhancement of that amount, be enhanced—

(i) if the addition was the full amount, then to the enhanced amount of the land-revenue and rates and cesses, and

(ii) if the addition was a proportion of the amount, then to the same proportion of the enhanced amount.

15. (1) The rent payable by a tenant having a right of occupancy, to whom the last foregoing section does not apply, may be enhanced on the ground that the rent paid by him in respect of his tenancy, after deducting the amount of the land-revenue thereof and the rates and cesses chargeable thereon, is—

(a) if he belongs to the class specified in clause (a) of sub-section (1) of section 4, less than two annas per rupee of the amount of the land-revenue ;

(b) if he belongs to any of the classes specified in clauses (a), (b) and (c) of that sub-section, less than four annas per rupee of the amount of the land-revenue ;

(c) if he does not belong to any of the classes specified in that sub-section, less than eight annas per rupee of the amount of the land-revenue.

(2) In a case to which sub-section (1) of this section applies, the rent may be enhanced to an amount not exceeding two, four or eight annas per rupee of the amount of the land-revenue, as the case may be, in addition to the amount of the land-revenue and rates and cesses.

(Chapter III.—Rent.—Sections 16-21)

Reduction.

16. (1) When the land, or any part of the land, held by a tenant having a right of occupancy to whom section 14 applies ceases to be irrigated or flooded, the share or rates payable in respect of the land or part may be reduced to the share or rates paid by tenants having a right of occupancy for unirrigated or unflooded land of a similar description and with similar advantages in the same neighbourhood.

(2) Where the rent of a tenant having a right of occupancy is a share of the produce, or of the appraised value thereof, with an addition in cash, and that addition is the amount of the land-revenue and rates and cesses, or a proportion thereof, the addition may, on a reduction of that amount, be reduced—

- (i) if it was the full amount, then to the reduced amount of the land-revenue and rates and cesses; and
- (ii) if it was a proportion of the amount, then to the same proportion of the reduced amount.

17. (1) The rent payable by a tenant having a right of occupancy, to whom section 14 does not apply, may be reduced on any of the following grounds, and on no others, namely:—

- first*—that the area of the land held by him has been diminished or has been proved to be less than the area for which rent has been previously paid by him;
- second*—that the productive powers of that land have been decreased by any cause beyond his control;
- third*—that the rent of the land is regulated by the amount of the land-revenue thereof and that the land-revenue has been reduced;
- fourth*—that within the six years immediately preceding the passing of this Act the rent has been raised above the maximum allowed by section 15.

(2) In a case to which sub-section (1) of this section applies, the rent shall be reduced to the amount which the Revenue-officer considers fair and equitable:

Provided that—

- (a) where the reduction is made on the third ground, it shall be in proportion to the reduction in the land-revenue of the land;
- (b) where the reduction is made on the fourth ground, the rent shall not be reduced below the maximum allowed by section 15, and
- (c) a reduction shall not be made in any case if its effect would be to make the rent of the land less than the amount of the land-revenue thereof and the rates and cesses chargeable thereon.

Remission.

18. Notwithstanding anything contained in the foregoing sections of this Chapter, if it appears to a Court making a decree for an arrear of rent that the area of a tenancy has been so diminished by diluvion or otherwise, or that the produce thereof has been so diminished by drought, hail, deposit of sand, or other like calamity, that the full amount of rent payable by him cannot be equitably decreed, the Court may allow such remission from the rent payable by him as may appear to it to be just.

19. (1) Whenever for any cause the payment of the whole or any part of the land-revenue payable in respect of any land is remitted or for any period suspended, the prescribed Revenue-officer may by order remit or for that period suspend, as the case may be, the payment of the rent of that land to an amount which may bear the same proportion to the whole of the rent payable in respect of the land as the land-revenue of which the payment has been remitted or suspended bears to the whole of the land-revenue payable in respect of the land.

(2) An order passed under sub-section (1) shall not be liable to be contested by suit in any Court.

(3) A suit shall not lie for the recovery of any rent of which the payment has been remitted, or during the period of suspension for any rent of which the payment has been suspended.

(4) Where the payment of rent has been suspended for any period, that period shall be excluded in the computation of the period of limitation prescribed for a suit for the recovery of the rent.

(5) If the landlord collects any rent of which the payment has been remitted, or before the expiration of the period of suspension collects any rent of which the payment has been suspended, the whole of the land-revenue remitted or suspended in his favour shall become immediately payable by him.

(6) The provisions of this section relating to the remission or suspension of the payment of rent may be applied, so far as they can be made applicable, to land held free of revenue, in any case in which, if the land had been revenue-paying, the payment of the whole or any part of the land-revenue thereof might, in the opinion of the prescribed Revenue-officer, have been remitted or suspended under the rules for the time being in force for regulating the remission and suspension of land-revenue.

Division of Produce and Appraisement of Crops.

20. When rent is taken by division of the produce, or by estimate or appraisement of the crop, if either the landlord or the tenant neglects to attend, either personally or by agent, at the proper time for making the division, estimate or appraisement, or if there is a dispute about the division of the produce or the quantity or value of the crop, the prescribed Revenue-officer may, on the application of either party, appoint such person as he thinks fit to be a referee to divide the produce or estimate or appraise the crop.

21. (1) When the Revenue-officer appoints a referee under the last foregoing section, he may in his discretion authorise the referee to associate with himself any other persons as assessors, and may give him instructions regarding the number, qualifications and mode of selecting those assessors (if any) and the procedure to be followed in making the division, estimate or appraisement.

(2) The referee so appointed shall make the division, estimate or appraisement in accordance with these instructions.

(3) For the purpose of exercising the powers conferred upon him, the referee, with his assessors (if any), may enter upon or into any land or building on or in which the crop is standing or the produce is lying.

22. (1) The result of the division, estimate or appraisement shall be recorded and signed by the referee, and the record shall be submitted to the Revenue-officer.

(2) The Revenue-officer shall consider the record, and after such further inquiry (if any) as he may think necessary shall make an order either confirming or varying the division, estimate or appraisement.

(3) The rent shall be payable in accordance with that order.

(4) The Revenue-officer shall also make such order as to the costs of the reference as he thinks fit.

(5) The costs may include the remuneration of the referee and of the assessors (if any), and may be levied from the applicant before the appointment of the referee subject to adjustment at the close of the proceedings.

CHAPTER IV.

RELINQUISHMENT AND EJECTMENT.

Relinquishment.

I. 23. (1) A tenant may relinquish his tenancy by giving verbally or in writing to his landlord or to his landlord's agent, on or before the fifteenth day of January in any year, notice of his intention to relinquish the tenancy.

(2) If the landlord or his agent refuses to receive the notice, or if he receives it but refuses to sign and deliver a receipt for it, the tenant may apply to the prescribed Revenue-officer on or before the date aforesaid to cause the notice to be served on the landlord; and the Revenue-officer, on receiving the cost of service from the tenant, shall cause the notice to be served as soon as may be.

(3) If the tenant does not give notice in the manner prescribed in this section, he shall be liable to pay the rent of his tenancy for any part of the ensuing agricultural year during which the tenancy is not let by the landlord to some other person or is not cultivated by the landlord himself.

Ejectment.

24. (1) A tenant shall not be ejected otherwise than in execution of an order of the prescribed Revenue-officer.

(2) Save as otherwise expressly provided by this Act, an order of the Revenue-officer for the ejectment of a tenant shall not be executed at any other time than between the first day of May and the fifteenth day of June.

I. 25. (1) Where at the time of the order for the ejectment of a tenant from any land his uncultivated crops are standing thereon, he shall not be ejected from the land until the crops have ripened and he has been allowed a reasonable time to harvest them.

(2) For the use of the land occupied by the crops he shall pay such rent as may be agreed on between him and the landlord, or as, in default of such agreement, may, on the application of either landlord or tenant, be determined by the prescribed Revenue-officer. [Cf. XII, 1881, s. 42.]

(3) Where the rent is determined by an order of the prescribed Revenue-officer, the order may be executed by him in the same manner as a decree for money may be executed by a Revenue Court.

26. A Revenue-officer may make an order for the ejectment of a tenant from land in which he has a right of occupancy if— [New.]

(a) a decree has been made for the ejectment of the tenant from the land either on the ground that he has used the land in a manner inconsistent with the conditions on which he holds it or on the ground that he has omitted to use the land in the manner required by those conditions; or

(b) a decree has been made against the tenant for an arrear of rent due in respect of the land, and the decree remains unsatisfied at the time when an application for his ejectment is made in manner hereinafter provided. [See s. 28 of the Bill.]

27. (1) When a decree has been made for the ejectment of a tenant having a right of occupancy on either of the grounds mentioned in clause (a) of the last foregoing section, the decree-holder may apply to the prescribed Revenue-officer for an order for the ejectment of the tenant in execution of the decree. [New.]

(2) If it appears to the Revenue-officer that the injury caused by the default or omission in consequence of which the decree was made is capable of being remedied, or that an award of compensation will be sufficient satisfaction to the landlord therefore, he may, instead of making an order for the ejectment of the tenant, order him to remedy the injury within one month from the date of the order, or order him to pay to the Revenue-officer, within a time to be specified in the order, such compensation as the Revenue-officer thinks fit. [Cf. Act 1881, s. 1885, s. 1885, s.]

(3) If the injury is so remedied or the compensation so paid, an order for the ejectment of the tenant in execution of the decree shall not be made.

28. (1) If a landlord desires to eject a tenant having a right of occupancy in land against whom a decree for an arrear of rent due in respect of the land has been made and remains unsatisfied, he may apply to the prescribed Revenue-officer for an order for the ejectment of the tenant. [Act XI 1881, s. 1881, s.]

(2) The Revenue-officer shall, on receiving the application, cause a notice to be served on the tenant, stating the date of the decree and the amount due thereunder, and informing him that if he does not pay that amount to the Revenue-officer within fifteen days from receipt of the notice he will be ejected from the land.

The Punjab Tenancy Bill.
(Chapter IV.—Relinquishment and Ejectment.—Sections 22-29.)

to be followed in making the division, estimate or appraisement.

(2) The referee so appointed shall make the division, estimate or appraisement in accordance with those instructions.

(3) For the purpose of exercising the powers conferred upon him, the referee, with his assessors (if any), may enter upon or into any land or building on or in which the crop is standing or the produce is lying.

[New. Cf. Act
IX, 1883, s.

22. (1) The result of the division, estimate or appraisement shall be recorded and signed by the referee, and the record shall be submitted to the Revenue-officer.

(2) The Revenue-officer shall consider the record, and after such further inquiry (if any) as he may think necessary shall make an order either confirming or varying the division, estimate or appraisement.

(3) The rent shall be payable in accordance with that order.

(4) The Revenue-officer shall also make such order as to the costs of the reference as he thinks fit.

(5) The costs may include the remuneration of the referee and of the assessors (if any), and may be levied from the applicant before the appointment of the referee subject to adjustment at the close of the proceeding.

CHAPTER IV.

RELINQUISHMENT AND EJECTMENT.

Relinquishment.

[Act XXVIII,
1868, ss. 28,
30 & 31.]

23. (1) A tenant may relinquish his tenancy by giving verbally or in writing to his landlord or to his landlord's agent, on or before the fifteenth day of January in any year, notice of his intention to relinquish the tenancy.

(2) If the landlord or his agent refuses to receive the notice, or if he receives it but refuses to sign and deliver a receipt for it, the tenant may apply to the prescribed Revenue-officer on or before the date aforesaid to cause the notice to be served on the landlord; and the Revenue-officer, on receiving the cost of service from the tenant, shall cause the notice to be served as soon as may be.

(3) If the tenant does not give notice in the manner prescribed in this section, he shall be liable to pay the rent of his tenancy for any part of the ensuing agricultural year during which the tenancy is not let by the landlord to some other person or is not cultivated by the landlord himself.

Ejectment.

[New.]

24. (1) A tenant shall not be ejected otherwise than in execution of an order of the prescribed Revenue-officer.

[Cf. Act
XXVIII, 1868,
s. 21.]

(2) Save as otherwise expressly provided by this Act, an order of the Revenue-officer for the ejectment of a tenant shall not be executed at any other time than between the first day of May and the fifteenth day of June.

[Act XXVIII,
1868, s. 27.]

25. (1) Where at the time of the order for the ejectment of a tenant from any land his uncut crops are standing thereon, he shall not be ejected from the land until the crops have ripened and he has been allowed a reasonable time to harvest them.

(2) For the use of the land occupied by the crops he shall pay such rent as may be agreed on between him and the landlord, or as, in default of such agreement, may, on the application of either landlord or tenant, be determined by the prescribed Revenue-officer.

(3) Where the rent is determined by an order of the prescribed Revenue-officer, the order may be executed by him in the same manner as a decree for money may be executed by a Revenue Court.

26. A Revenue-officer may make an order for the ejectment of a tenant from land in which he has a right of occupancy if—

(a) a decree has been made for the ejectment of the tenant from the land either on the ground that he has used the land in a manner inconsistent with the conditions on which he holds it or on the ground that he has omitted to use the land in the manner required by those conditions; or

(b) a decree has been made against the tenant for an arrear of rent due in respect of the land, and the decree remains unsatisfied at the time when an application for his ejectment is made in manner hereinafter provided.

27. (1) When a decree has been made for the ejectment of a tenant having a right of occupancy on either of the grounds mentioned in clause (a) of the last foregoing section, the decree-holder may apply to the prescribed Revenue-officer for an order for the ejectment of the tenant in execution of the decree.

(2) If it appears to the Revenue-officer that the injury caused by the default or omission in consequence of which the decree was made is capable of being remedied, or that an award of compensation will be sufficient satisfaction to the landlord therefor, he may, instead of making an order for the ejectment of the tenant, order him to remedy the injury within one month from the date of the order, or order him to pay to the Revenue-officer, within a time to be specified in the order, such compensation as the Revenue-officer thinks fit.

(3) If the injury is so remedied or the compensation so paid, an order for the ejectment of the tenant in execution of the decree shall not be made.

28. (1) If a landlord desires to eject a tenant having a right of occupancy in land against whom a decree for an arrear of rent due in respect of the land has been made and remains unsatisfied, he may apply to the prescribed Revenue-officer for an order for the ejectment of the tenant.

(2) The Revenue-officer shall, on receiving the application, cause a notice to be served on the tenant, stating the date of the decree and the amount due thereunder, and informing him that if he does not pay that amount to the Revenue-officer within fifteen days from receipt of the notice he will be ejected from the land.
